THE

OLD TESTAMENT:

HE holy Scriptures for their Antiquity, Dignity, and other Excellencies, far out-shining all the Writings of the Ancients, I take it to be not only proper to our present Purpose, but useful to the Reader, to say something of them. Indeed, if we consider how many Centuries have pass'd since some of them were sirst compiled, and how miraculously they have been preserved and transmitted to these Times, they may from hence alone be said to be the immediate Book of God; which, out of his great Care, he hath provided for us, that in them we may see his Will, and from thence learn our Duty. Next to this, we are to esteem and value the holy Scriptures, as containing in them all Manner of Knowledge that is useful and entertaining. Would you know whence natural Philosophy, with Astronomy and other Appendages on it, are said to derive their Original? See in the Books of Genesis, Job, and Ecclesiasies. What Books abound more in Ethics or moral Precepts.

than the sacred and sententious Proverbs, and Wisdom of Solomon? What more certain, regular, or pleasant History and Chronology, diversified with such Variety of Narration, can we find, than in Genesis, Exodus, Jo-Shua, Judges? &c. How free from Sophistry are the holy Scriptures, and how folid and logical are all the Arguments used in them? Geometry plainly appears in the Building of the Tabernacle; and the working in Metals and Wood was known long before the Building of Solomon's Temple. In short, all manner of Learning, Languages, Arts and Sciences, are comprehended within those sacred Pages. The Texture of them indeed is so exactly disposed by the Holy Ghost, that they are a Magazine accommodated to all Places, Times and Persons in the greatest Emergencies. So that St. Basil justly calls them a Pharmacopy well stock'd with Medicines, for all Uses and Necessities. From hence, in Time of Persecution, the Martyrs drew Constancy and Courage. From hence, in Time of Peace and Religion, the Learned gained Wisdom and Eloquence. In Times of Heresy, they furnish'd the Orthodox with Stabiliment of Faith, and affisted them in the Subversion of Error. From hence, in Prosperity, we learn Humility and Modesty; in Adversity, Magnanimity and Patience. In Trepidi-- ty, it arms us with an honest Zeal; and, finally, if thro Length of Time, or Neglect, Abuses infinuate into Discipline, and corrupt our Morals, nothing but the Rule of God's Word can restore Religion to its pristine State and Dignity; for that alone is the Standard of our Thoughts, and Guide of our Actions.

But we need no other Recommendation of these sacred Writings, than that of our Blessed Saviour, who hath commanded us to search the Scriptures. And in pious Obedience to his Precept, the Apostles and Fathers of the Church (too many here to be inserted) have made it their great Concern and Care for the Good of Mankind, to exhort all Men to the Study of them. The Old Testament is indeed itself a System of all kind of Knowledge

useful for the Conduct of human Life; and from which the Philosophers and Legislators of all Ages drew the choicest of their Observations. The Church hath borrowed much from that admirable Polity in the Acts and Laws of Moses, both Judicial and Ceremonial; and the Authors of both Canon and Civil Law have from thence derived their most useful and advantageous Institutions. But the Excellency of sacred History will more evidently appear, if by a just Antithesis we compare it to the Accounts of the best and most ancient Heathen Writers, both Philosophers and Historians. How obscure and trifling are their Stories of Deucalion's Flood, of Prometheus and Hercules, and their general Notions of the World's existing from Eternity? In short, all profane Story is stuffed with Obscurity and fabulous Antiquity before the (a) Olympiads, which was their first certain Period of Time, and which did not commence till many Centuries after the Legislator Moses had written the Pentateuch; so that for the first 3000 Years of the World and more, we have no certain History to depend upon, but this of Moses and the Hebrews. And, indeed, if we pay that just Deference and Esteem to it, which we ought, we shall find it the truest Light and Guide we can choose in the Tansactions of Life. There only we have the true Account of the Rife and Fall, of the Virtues and Vices of the most early Kingdoms and States of the World; and by their Example, either in Felicity or Infelicity, learn to be wife and happy. If we compare the Greek and Roman Historians with the Pentateuch and the rest of the sacred History, we shall find the latter to abound with the more illustrious Exemplars of heroic Virtue. Rome may boast of her Torquatus, and Brutus, who, in a more brutal than generous Bravery, sacrificed their Sons to the public Good: But who would not rather admire the religious Obedience of pious Abraham, who had destin'd the Destruction of Trey, which is said to be in the Year of the World 2767, but it is very uncertain in respect of that of the Olympiads.

⁽a) Olympiads. This is the first and most certain stated Epoch of the Heathens, which was in or near the Year of the World 3174. Tho' Chronologers begin another long before, which they date from his innocent and only Son Isaac a Victim to the Will of God? Historians and Poets may in exalted Strains applaud the Courage of the Horatii and other Champions, who in Defence of their Country slew their Enemies in fingle Fight: But how short do they come of the Godlike David, who, tho' but a Stripling, encountered and flew that vast Tower of Flesh, the monstrous Goliath, and by his Death path'd out an easy Victory to the Israelites over the Philistines? Alexander's Virtue is worthy of Praise, who, when he had conquer'd Darius, would not give himself the Pleasure of surveying his beautiful Captives, lest he should be tempted to Desire: But what is this to the Continence of Joseph, who fled from the actual Sollicitations of his lascivious Mistress into a loathsome Dungeon? They may praise Lucretia, re-venging her violated Chastity by her own Murder; whilst the Holy Scriptures more deservedly extol Susanna, who exposed herself to Death by shunning the lustful Embraces of the two wicked Elders. They may talk of the Fortitude and Success of their warlike Heroes, their Cæsars, Pompeys, Scipios, Hannibal, and Alexander; but how much more illustrious are the Examples of Moses, Joshua, Samson, Gideon, David and Saul? who inspir'd with more than human Courage, with a handful of Men, in comparison of their Enemies vast Numbers, trampled them under Foot; and to facilitate whose Conquests the very Elements conspir'd, and fought on their Side.

I could carry this Antithesis much farther: But let it suffice, that these are the Patterns we ought to imitate, and in a virtuous Emulation study to arrive at their Perfections, that being thus stimulated on to the Pursuit of Innocence and Holiness of Life, we may, in an evangelical Sense, become terrestrial Angels, and heavenly Men, which will entitle us to the more immediate Protection of God, who, if we, by conversing with and reading these holy Writings, endeavour to imitate the Virtues of these godly Heroes, will give us their Reward. And we may be assured, that whilst we thus make the Holy Scriptures our Study, they will arm us against all Terrors and Temptations that shall oppose or impede us in the Prosecution of our Duty, and furnish us with such Consolation, Hope, and Courage in all Conditions of Life, that knowing ourselves to be the Care of God, we shall despise Torments and Death in their most frightful Aspect. This the great Apostle in his Epistle to the Hebrews labours very accurately to prove thro' the whole eleventh Chapter, inculcating the great Trials of the Saints under the Old Testament, who persisted in their Duty under the greatest Severities and Sufferings.

1. But besides these general Advantages of the Old Testament, there are some more peculiar to it; the first of which is, that the New Testament cannot be understood without it. The Apostles in their Writings often cite it, and more often alkude to it; and our Blessed Lord taking his last Leave of his Disciples, tells them; "These are the Words which I spake unto you, whilst "I was still with you; that all must be fulfilled, which "was written of me in the Law of Moses, and in the "Prophets, and in the Psalms," Luke xxiv. 44. And if we consider the whole Epistle to the Hebrews without regard to the Old Testament, it will be the most intricate and obscure Writing that ever was penned; for it is so interwoven with it, that unless we refer to the one, the other is altogether unintelligible.

2. Christ being the End of the Law, all Things which are spoken of in the Old Testament, relate to Christ and his Servants, as well in a literal as an allegorical Sense: And in this the Old Testament excels the New; for the Old wants neither, but the New for the most Part wants the allegorical Meaning. "Our Fathers, saith St. Paul, "were all under this Cloud, and all passed thro' the "Sea, and were all baptized unto Moses, and in that "Cloud, and that Sea; and did all eat the same spiri-"tual Food, and did all drink the same spiritual 56 Drink; for they drank of the spiritual Rock that followed them, and that Rock was Christ, &c. Now ef all these Things were Types unto them, and were 66 written A 4

"World are come," 1 Cor. x. 1, 2, 3, 4, 11. And from hence the same Apostle shews us, that the Understanding of the Old Testament was transmitted from the Jews to us. "Therefore their Minds are hardened, for until this Day remaineth the same covering untaken away in the reading of the Old Testament, which Veil in Christ is put away. But even unto this Day, when Moses is read, the Veil is laid over their

"Hearts," 2 Cor. iii. 14, 15.

3. Another great Advantage there is, that the Old Testament is a Magazine so well provided with Variety of Figures, Examples, Doctrine, and sententious Oracles, not only relating to Faith, but to the Information of a good Life, that from thence we may plentifully furnish ourselves with Arguments and Reasons on all honest Occasions. Thus our blessed Lord, by the Example of Noah and Lot's Wife, stirs up the Slothful to Watchfulness, Luke xvii. 27, 32. He threatens the obstinate Jews with the Remembrance of Sodom and Nineveb, and the Queen of the South; and terrifies the uncharitable Rich with the Words of Abraham to Dives in Hell; They have Moses and the Prophets, let them bear them, Luke xvi. 29. St. Paul, as hath been before observ'd, says, All these Things were done to them for Examples to us, that we should avoid those Judgments God had afflitted them with for their Fornication, Idolatry, Murmuring, &c. For the Holy Spirit of God, which was prescious to, and conscious of all Ages, hath so disposed the Holy Scriptures, that they are useful, not only to the Jews, but to Christians in all Times. Which Tertullian, in his Book De CultuFamin. c. 22. confirms; for there he says, "That there is no Enunciation of " the Holy Ghost, so particularly directed to any pre-" sent Occasion, as not to be of Use and Advantage " in general." St. Augustine seems so pleased with the Harmony between the Old and New Testament, that towards the End of his thirteenth Book against, Faustus, he says, "In Commemoration of our Faith, in Consos lation lation of our Hope, and Exhortation of us to Charity, we read the Books of the Prophets and Apo-" stles; betwixt whom there is so exact an Harmony, "that it is like the celestial Trumpet, which rouzes 66 us from our sluggish Mortality to contend for the "Palm of our heavenly Calling." And indeed they are so well adapted to each other, that their Resemblance and Affinity are as natural and near, as that of the Shadow to the Body. In fine, the Learned of all Ages have in all Causes, Councils, and judicial Proceedings, found their great Interest and Advantage in confulting the Holy Scriptures. It was a Royal Expression indeed of Robert King of Sicily to Franc. Petrarcha! "I tell thee, my Petrarcha, those holy Letters are dear-"er to me than my Kingdom; and, were I under a "Necessity of quitting one, it should be my Diadem."

4. The last Advantage I shall mention of the Old Testament is, That as it had the Honour to precede the New, so it gave Witness to it, as St. John Baptist did to Christ, both he, Moses, and the Prophets going before him to prepare the Way for him; to give Knowledge of Salvation to his People, to give Light to them that fat in Darkness and in the Shadow of Death, and to guide our Feet into the Way of Peace. In Cognisance or Confirmation of which, Moses and Elias appear'd at the Transfiguration of Christ on the Mount, bearing Witness of him, and speaking of his Departure, Luke ix. 31. Who, that had been ignorant of the Old Testament, would formerly have believed Christ or his Gospel? How should a Jew be converted and brought to Christ, but by the Manuduction of Moses and the Prophets, who foretold his coming into the World, and the great Occasion as well as Manner of it? Indeed, so great is the Force and Demonstration of the Gospel Truths, that, comparing the Transactions of our Saviour's Life with what was foretold of them, none can doubt of the Completion of those Predictions in Him only. which add still the greater Reverence to the Scriptures of the Old Testament, as being a Type or Presiguration of the New. But none go so far in the Eulogies of Moses and the Law, as our Blessed Lord himself. "The Law was given by Moses, John i. 27. There is one that accuseth you, even Moses; had ye believed on "him, you would have believed on me; for he wrote of me; But if ye believe not his Writings, how shall " ye believe my Words? John v. 45, 46, 47. Begin-" ning at Moses, and all the Prophets, he interpreted to them all the Things which were written of him " in the holy Scriptures. Likewise Philip finding Na-" thaniel, tells him, we have found him of whom Moses did write in the Law, and also the Prophets, Jesus "the Son of Joseph, that was of Nazareth, John i. 45." "Certainly, as Tertullian against Marcion often observes, the Harmony between the two Testaments, the Consent or Agreement between Moses and Christ, the Prophets and the Apostles, the Synagogue and the Church, must needs be a great Testimony of the Truth of Christ and his Gospel. Having said thus much of those incomparable Histories, and other excellent Things contained in the Old Testament, it may not be improper to say something of the Authors or Compilers of them. And first of Moses.

And here, considering the Dignity of that great and excellent Legislator and Historian, to whom God did the Honour of speaking Faceto Face, it may seem almost a Presumption to give his Character. I shall only, in short, say this, that for some thousand of Years, the Sun did not behold his Fellow. He was from his Infancy brought up in a Court, where he received all the Advantages of a Royal Education, becoming the Son and intended Heir of a King. He was well skill din Egyptian Learning, conversing at Court till he was forty Years old: At which Time, being divinely inspir'd, he withdrew from the Court of Pharaoh, and disdaining to be thought the Son of Pharaoh's Daughter, he chose rather to suffer Affliction with the People of God, than enjoy the Pleasures of a courtly sinful Life. Being forc'd to sly to Midian, he undertook the poor Employment of feeding Sheep. In which time God appeared to him in the Bush, and gave him Commission to be Ruler and Leader of his People; wherein he shewed an admirable Conduct and Occonomy, leading an almost innumerable Multitude of obstinate headstrong People, thro' a torrid Desart for forty Years. They often disobliged him by their mutinous and ungrateful Carriage; yet like a true Father of his Country, he forgave them, and always interposed between them and their angry God, who, but for him, had often revenged himself upon them; and was hardly distuaded from utterly extirpating them and their Name, and raising another Nation to Moses in their stead.

But if we enquire more particularly into the Abilities and Virtues of this excellent Person, we shall find him the greatest and most honoured Mortal that ever was born, till the Son of God condescended to bless the World in human Shape. He was Prophet, Priest and Poet. For the first, we have his own Acknowledgment: "The Lord thy God shall raise up unto thee a Prophet " like unto me, from among thy Brethren, Deut. xviii. "15." For the second, God himself invested him with imperial Power, when he gave him Commission to deliver and govern his People, Exod. iii. 10. That he was a Poet, appears from those eleven Psalms ascribed to him, from Psal. lxxxix. to Psal. c. Besides the many personal Favours God bestowed upon this great Man, he was pleased to honour him with this paricular Note of Distinction, that he was the most faithful of his Servants, to whom he would communicate his Will by express Words, Numb. xii. 7, 8. And indeed, if we consider the frequent Interviews between God and Moses, the Conveyance of the Law by him, and his daily conversing and pleading for the People in the Tabernacle, where God more immediately revealed himself, we may justly call him the Secretary of the Divine Wisdom; by whose Prayers more than by Joshua's Valour, Amalek was subdued.

dued. I shall not need to advance his Character by enumerating his wondrous Works in Egypt, his miraculous Conduct of the Israelites thro' the Red Sea, his furnishing them with Food from Heaven, his producing Water by a Miracle from Matter to which Nature had denied it, and vindicating God's Honour and his own Reputation from the Calumnies of their Enemies by a just Execution on Corab and his Associates. Whoever examines the Administration of this great Man, he will find in it the most refined Polity and exact Oeconomy, that ever adorn'd the Character of the most illustrious Legislator; for he had to do with the most obstinate, rebellious, and ungrateful People, and whom he govern'd with that Dexterity, that he always brought them to a Sense of their Duty. But in the Discharge of this Part of his high Office, his Love and Care of their Safety more eminently appeared than all his other Perfections, not only in that Heat of Zeal, when he begg'd of God, rather to deprive him of the Enjoyment of the promised Land, than deny it to his People, but in those pressing Instances and fervid Admonitions throughout the whole Book of Deuteronomy, wherein he calls God and Man, Heaven and Earth to Witness, that he may incline their Hearts to a strict and facred Observance of the Law of God. Nor was his Humility the least Embellishment of his Character; for tho' the Israelites had often provoked him by their Clamours, Reproaches, and Apostacy, and sometimes threatned to stone him, unmoved he beheld their Ingratitude, and instead of revenging himself by Threats and Punishments, he humbly addressed himself to God in their Behalf, to deprecate the Judgments they deserved. And for this Virtue God himself expressy distinguishes him with this Eulogy, "That he was the meekest Man upon Earth." And for the sake of this endearing Quality, Moses is thought by some to have recommended himself to God, that he admitted him to behold as much of the divine Essence as human Nature was capable of seeing; with which more fond and aspiring Men were not fit to be trusted. As to the Death of this illustrious Prophet and Prince, it was as wonderful as the great Transactions of his Life; for God himself paid him the funeral Honours, by burying him so secretly, that no Man ever knew where his Sepulchre was.

But all that we have hitherto said comes far short of the sacred Eulogies of inspired Writers, who have celebrated the Memory of this great Legislator in most exalted Strains. Hear Siracides, ch. xlv. " Moses was the Be-" loyed of God and Men, and his Remembrance is bles-" fed. God made him like the glorious Saints (the holy "Patriarchs) and terrible to his Enemies. By his Words "he caused Wonders to cease, and magnissed him in the "Sight of Kings (viz. of Pharach) concerning whom " the Lord said to him, Behold, I have made thee a God "to Pharash (Exed. vii. 1.) giving him the Command " of his People, and shewing him his Glory. He sancti-"fied him with Faith and Meekness, and chose him "out of all Men. He caused him to hear his Voice, and "took him into the Cloud; he gave him the Com-" mandments before his Face, even the Law of Life " and Knowledge, that he might teach Jacob his Coveso nant, and Israel his Judgments."

Hear the great Apostle in his Epistle to the Hebrews, cb. xi. 24. "By Faith Moses, when he was come to Age, "refused to be called the Son of Pharaoh's Daughter, chusing rather to suffer Adversity with the People of God, than to enjoy the Pleasures of Sin for a Season; efteeming Rebuke for Christ's sake, greater than the Treasures of Egypt; for he had respect to the Reward. By Faith he forsook Egypt, not searing the King's Displeasure, submitting with Patience, as he that saw him which was invisible. Thro' Faith he instituted the Passover and Essusion of Blood, less the that slew the First-born should touch them. By Faith he passed thro' the Red-Sea, as on dry Land, which when the Egyptians attempted to do, they were swallowed up."

Hear St. Stephen the Protomartyr, Aets vii. 22, 30,

"Moses was mighty in Word and Deed; to whom in the Wilderness of Mount Sina an Angel appeared in a Flame of Fire in a Bush; him God sent for a Prince and a Deliverer, by the Hand of the Angel which appeared to him in the Bush; he brought them out, doing Wonders and Miracles in the Land of Egypt. This is he, that was in the Congregation (the Church) in the Wilderness with the Angel, which spake to him in Mount Sina, and with our Fathers, who received the lively Oracles to give unto us."

" who received the lively Oracles to give unto us." Nor is the Testimony of the Fathers and later Writers in Commendation of Moses to be despised; who speak with the utmost Respect and Reverence of him. Justin Martyr, in his Parænesis to the Gentiles, says, " Moses "wrote his History in Hebrew, before the Characters " of Greek were found out, which Cadmus from the " Phænicians first discovered to the Greeks. Whence " Plato in Timæus says, that the wife Solon returning "from Egypt, told Critias, he had heard an Egyptian "Priest, who said to him, O Solon, you Greeks are young "Men in Learning and Discipline." And a little after, the same Justin Martyr says, out of Diodorus, that Orpheus, Homer, Solon, Pythagoras, Plato, and others, when they were in Egypt, altered their Minds concerning Polytheism; being instructed by the Egyptians (who had it from Moses) that there was but one God, who in the Beginning created Heaven and Earth. And lastly, he affirms, that Plato learned from Moses the Being of a God, the Creation of Things, the divine Word, the Refurrection of the Body, the Judgment and Punishment

But it is very certain, that Plato did not rightly understand Moses, when he distorted his Meaning to such ridiculous Fancies, as led him into most egregious Errors. St. Gregory Nazianzen, in Orat. 22. calls Moses, "The "most illustrious Legislator, and most holy of Priests, of the Wicked, the Reward of the Just, and the Holy Ghost; which he supposes to be the Soul of the World:

who being taken into the Conversation of God, became a Spectator of the divine Secrets.

St. Augustin against Faustus, l. 22. c.69. says, Moses was the most faithful Servant of God; humble in declining so weighty a Ministry; but dutiful in undertaking it; just in keeping, and resolute in executing it; vigilant in Government; smart in Justice; zealous in Love, and patient in Suffering, &c."

St. Cyril of Alexandria, in a handsome and well deduced Chronology, proves Moses to be before the most ancient of the Gentile Heroes.

Constantine the Great, in his Oration, very elegantly sets forth the Worth and Dignity of Moses, Euseb. c. 17. Who, says he, can say enough in Honour of him, who reduc'd a People out of the greatest Consusion, into the most exact Order? Who by gentle Persuasions quieted their mutinous Spirits, and from a most ser-vile Condition, brought them to the Enjoyment of Liberty. Who, in Wisdom, so far excell'd all that were superior to him in Years, that he became the Standard of Knowledge, both in his own and succeeding Times, and a bright Example of moral Virtues to Heathens as well as Hebrews, especially to Pythagoras and Plato, who were zealous Emulators of his Continency."

St. Ambrose, l. 1. c. 2. de Cain & Abel, says, " Moses "was the Figure of that Preceptor that was to come, "who should preach the Gospel, fulfil the Old Testa-" ment, build the New, and feed the People with ce-" lestial Aliment. Hence the Dignity of his human "Condition is so highly advanced, that he is called by "the Name of God: I have set Thee as a God to Pha-" raoh, Exod. vii. 1. (That is, I have given thee Au-" thority to speak to him in my Name) And indeed he became his Character; for he was Master of his Pas-"fions, not inclined to worldly Desires, but in Mind "and Body endeavour'd to form himself after the Like-"ness of that Perfection of his God, as far as Nature "would permit: And therefore we read quite differ-" ently of him, to what we do of others, who die thro 66 some Defect of Nature; but with him it was other-" wife;

wise; for notwithstanding his great Age, he retained the Use of all his Faculties and Senses to the last,

"his Eyes not failing, nor his natural Force abated;

" but died according to the Word of the Lord."

I shall conclude this Character of Moses with what Josephus, Eusebius, and others, in short, but very comprehensively say of him; that among all the Traditions of the Ancients, and Opinions of the Moderns, and in all the Collections of Jewish and Gentile Historians, Moses appears to be the first Theologist, Philosopher, Poet, and Historian in the World.

As to the Writers of the other Parts of the Old Testament, there is but little to be said; besides, confining myself chiefly to the historical Part of it, I shall be the more brief, giving an Account only of those Books of the holy Scripture, from whence the History is collected.

The first Catalogue of sacred Books was made by the Jews, but by whom is not certainly known. It is highly probable, it was by Ezra, who collected all the sacred Books of the Old Testament; and shewing the Collection to the Jews, it was received and approved by the whole Nation, as containing all the sacred Writings. Josephus says, they had two and twenty Books, which contained all that related to the Jewish Nation, from the Beginning of the World till his Time.

The five Books written by Moses contain the History of near three thousand Years, from the Creation till his Death. The Prophets, who succeeded him, wrote in thirteen Books all that happened from his Death to the Reign of Artanernes, the Son of Xernes, King of Persia. They had also four Books of Hymns and Songs. Josephus adds, That there were Books written from the Time of Artanernes down to his Days; but there being no Prophet amongst them to write them, as there had been in former Times, they were not esteemed sacred, nor the People obliged to read them.

It is not certain whether Joshua wrote the Book that goes by his Name; but it is very probable it was written by his Command, and very soon after his Death; for Moses had often, during his Administration, in which Joshua was Chief under him, ordered him to write the most remarkable Occurrences in a Book. It contained a History of about seventeen Years.

Some are of Opinion, that every Judge wrote, or caused to be written, what was transacted in his Days; and that all these Transactions were collected and put into one Book, either by Samuel or Ezra. The Book of Judges contains the History of three hundred Years and upwards, from the Death of Joshua to the Death of Samson. As for the Story of Ruth, it is certain she lived in the Time of the Judges, probably under Shamgar. The Jews made but one Book of this and Judges.

The four Books that follow, viz. two of Samuel and two of Kings, contain the History of near six hundred Years. The first Book of Samuel, to the five and twentieth Chapter, was written by Samuel himself; the Prophets Gad and Nathan finished it, and wrote the Second Book of Samuel. The two Books of Kings were written by Jeremiah or Ezra.

The two Books of Chronicles were written after the four former. Tis generally believed they were written by Ezra, who collected them partly out of the other Books of the Bible, and partly out of the Papers which were yet extant in his Days, but lost fince.

Ezra wrote that Book which is called by his Name; and contains the History of eighty two or eighty three Years, from the first Year of Cyrus to the twentieth of Artaxerxes Longimanus.

The Book of Nebemiah was certainly written by himfelf, and contains the History of about thirty one Years, from the Reign of Artaxerxes to the Beginning of the Reign of Darius called the Bastard.

The Time and Author of the Book of Esther are very uncertain. Some think it was written by Ezra, or Joachim the Priest, the Grandson of Jozedec. It is very reasonable to think, that the Abasuerus here mentioned must be Darius the Son of Hystaspes, because he Vol. I.

reigned from India to Ethiopia; which excludes all the Kings before Cambyses, and even Cambyses himself, because he did not conquer Egypt. It is thought by some, that this Book of Esther was written upon the Account of the Jews Feast of (a) Purim. By Herodotus's saying, That Darius had a Wise, which he loved so passionately, that he set the Crown upon her Head, there is great Reason to believe, that Abasuerus must be this Darius.

As to the Story of Job, I have spoken at large in the Notes, which the Reader may confult; but take this Hint by the Way. Some have questioned the Truth of this History; but Job being mentioned in Holy Writ with so much Applause, it would be a Fault to doubt it. In Ezek. c. xiv. v. 14. and in the general Epistle of St. James, ch. v. v. 11. The Time Job lived in is very hard to be known, as well as the Author. Some say it was written by himself, others will have Moses to be the Author of it. These are but Conjectures, and upon flight Grounds. It is generally believed, that Jeb lived before Moses, and that his Miseries befel him when the Children of Israel were in the Wilderness. Some are of Opinion, that he was descended of Nahor, Abraham's Brother; others from Esau, which last is most probable. In the thirty-sixth of Genesis there is Mention made of one Jobah amongst the Kings of Edom, which is almost the same with Job.

(a) Purim. Pur is a Persian Word, and signifies a Lot, whence the Feast of the Jeaus is called Purim, or the Feast of Lots. It began on the sourteenth of the Month Adar, and continued till the End of the sitteenth, Esth. ix. 21. It was instituted by Mordecai, in Remembrance of the Jeaus Delivery from Haman, before whom Lots were cast Day by Day, and Month by Month, for the Destruction of them. In these two Days they read the History of Esther in their Synagogues; and as often as they hear the Name of Haman mentioned, they do with their Fists and Hammers beat upon the Benches and Boards, as if they did knock upon Haman's Head.

FTER so long a Proem, I might reasonably be excused the Trouble of a Preface: But since there hath been such Variety of Attempts in Undertakings of this Nature, I think myself obliged to give the Reader some Account of the Occasion of Mine.

I have observed, that most of those that have published the Historical Account of the Old or New Testament, have so interwoven the Mystery and their own Observations with the History, that both are very often confused, and neither answer the End. To avoid which Perplexity, I hove carried on the Historical Part intircly by itself; and as I met with any thing worthy Observation, I have cast it into the Notes at the bottom of each Page. The Sieur de Royamont's History of the Old and New Testament, published by R. Blome, is an impersect Account, the History being continually interrupted with Observations, which must needs distract the Sense, and take off the Pleasure of reading; besides, there is no exact Series observed, for very often material Matter of Fact is left out. Elwood hath studiously corrected this Error in his Sacred History, which is indeed a worthy Series of Story, and well collected. But he has some Impersections which fully the Beauty

xx The PREFACE.

Beauty of his Design; for where he meets with a Failure in a Priest, he grows petulent, and vilisies the Office in the Man; and by sy Innuendoes ridicules the Geremonies of the Church, as in page 228, line 13. Nor is he only blamcable in this, but guilty of great Indecencies in the Story of Ruth, restecting some Wantonnesses on the Characters of her and Naomi, both which the Holy Scriptures describe to be virtuous good People; and which all ought to acknowledge, since the Saviour of the World descended from Ruth. He is very sudicrous, unbecoming the Sacredness of the Subject, in many Pluces; particularly in the Plague of Lice on Pharaoh and his People, the Story of Samson's Foxes, and that of Esther. Nor is he to be excused for his Puritanical Manner of making unlawful Parallels between the Acts of former and later Times; which are vastly wide of the Purposes of Sacred History.

The Design of Religion being to make us wise and good, to give us true Nations of God and ourselves, and to persuade us of the Reasonableness of the Divine Commands, of the Advantages of living religiously, and of the Possibility, nay, and Easiness too of so doing; yet, since the World abounds with such as think the Practice of Religion altogether impossible; and with others that laugh at those Sacred Oracles, which contain the Will of God, as if they were the most silly and ridiculous Things imaginable; and though this is chiefly the Effect of their Ignorance, Laziness, and Love to Vice; yet it cannot be denied, but that the Negligence of Translators has given too much Occasion to it. I have therefore taken care, as far as lay in my Way, to correct many Oversights and Neglects in our Translation of the Bible; which too often furnish wicked Men with Excuses, and Libertines and Atheists with Matter of Jesting. It's certain, that one of the greatest Favours God could have conferred on Men, in a State of Misery and Ignorance, was, to inform them of their Duty, and teach, them the Means of hecoming happy: And therefore there is nothing more worthy of a reasonable Man, and especially of a Christian, than to apply himself to the right understanding of those Things which are revealed in the Holy Scriptures, since they have been written for this very End. To be careless or negligent then, in a Matter of such high Concern, is criminal, and cannot but be looked upon as an undoubted Mark of Irreligion and Profanencss. How uneasy is the most learned and ingenious ingenious Part of Men to suffer the least Fault or Obscurity in any Greek or Roman Author? How sedulous in turning over Volumes to find the true Reading and Sense of one Word in Homer or Virgil? Must it not then argue great Indifference, or Disrespect for the Sacred Books, to let the Versions of them pass misrepresented or uncorrected? And how advantageous a Thing is it, when, by making a Text plain and intelligible, it shall overturn any of the pretended Grounds of Atheism and Insidelity, of dangerous Error, superstitious Foppery, or soolish and ridiculous Whim? This, I dare considently affirm, the Reader will find made good in many Places of the following Sheets.

It is very much to be feared, that many Men have been more zealous than curious in Religious Matters; otherwise they would not have overlooked, or consented to so many and material Mistakes in our Translation of the Bible. Of these, what fell in the Way of History, (to which Part I confine myself) the Reader will find corrected and explained: And in this, to name no others, I have chiefly followed the ingenious Author of the Essay towards a new Translation of the Bible. It is a World of learned Observations; and which I humbly recommend to all Men, but more especially to our young Divines: For, besides that, it renders many Places of Scripture more truly and clearly than they have been formerly expressed by any Versions, and discovers the Sources and Causes of the Errors and Mistakes which are to be found in all Versions, and furnishes us with plain and easy Rules, by which Persons of the meanest Capacity may observe the most material Faults of all Translations.

It would be more amufing than beneficial to give the Reader a Catalogue of the Helps I have made use of in this Undertaking; let it suffice, that I have had Recourse to the best Interpreters, Criticks and Commentators. I have in the main forborne the Chronology; in which Interpreters very much differ, particularly the French; of whom Elwood seems to be mighty fond: For Du Pin is extreamly mistaken in the Time of Nebuchadnezzar's destroying Jerusalem, and the Captivity that thereupon ensued; and the Sieur de Royamont, in the Time of Belshazzar's Reign; not to name any more. Nor do they vary in this only, but in Matter of Fast, if we compare them with Josephus, Russinus, and others of good Authority.

Confining

xxii The PREFACE?

Confining myself (as I have said before) to what is Historical, I have touched only those Passages in the Prophets which relate to the History, that I might not break in upon, or discontinue the Series of Time and Action.

I have inserted those Historical Passages of the Apocrypha, which the Jews esteemed true History, though they did not place them among their Canonical Books: And since our Church hath allowed them as Truths, and appointed them to be read, I have ranged them in their proper Order, though some reject them as Uncertainties.

From the Time of Malachi to our Saviour, there is a Chasm of about four hundred Years; which, to make the History entire and compleat, I have filled up out of the best Authors that wrote of those Times, as the Reader will see.

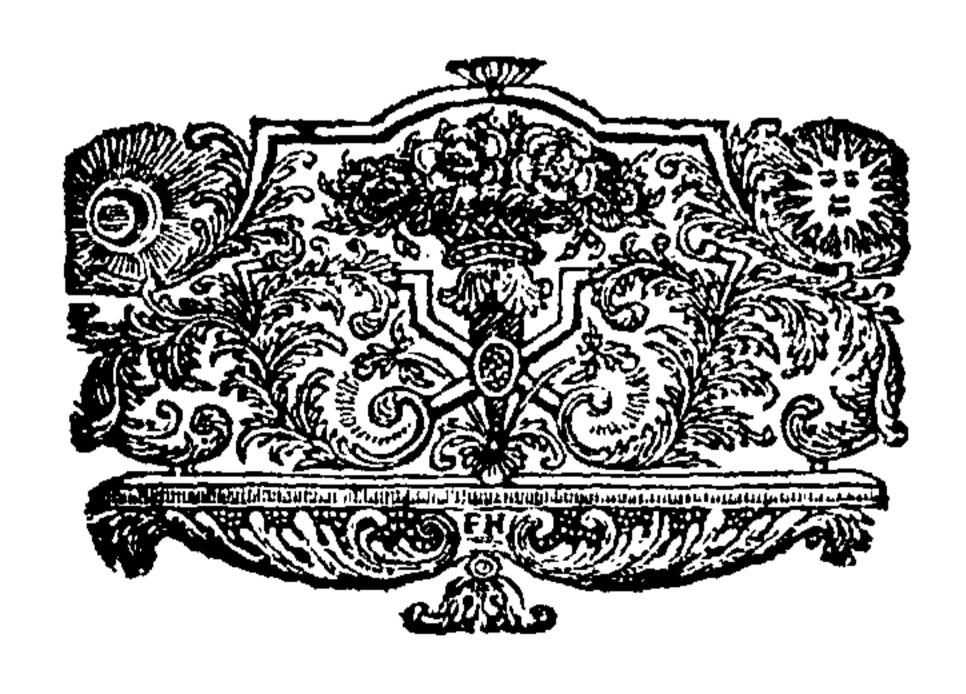

I have already in the Proem to the History of the Four Golpels spoken at large of the Writers of it, and their Authority. I shall only here give my Reasons for connecting them into one Story.

The God of Truth, willing to acquaint us with what is of the highest Concern, hath provided his Spirit to enlighten our Understanding, his Son and Ministry the Means to convey it, and his written Word to bring those Things, which were done many Ages before our Time, and in Places far distant from us, so near, as if we had seen them acted before our Eyes, Gal. iii. 1. To this End our Bleffed Saviour did chuse from among the Jews certain Men, which had known his Life and Doctrine from the Beginning, Luke i. 2. to be Witnesses to the Jews and Gentiles; and selected two from among his Apostles, and from his Disciples other two, to commit them to Writing, and transmit them to Posterity: That if in other Cases the Witness of two or three were sufficient, Deut. xvii. 6. and xix. 15. this of four might abundantly satisfy any that should doubt of that Truth, which in Times past did shine so bright among the Jews: Especially having received what they delivered, not only by their own Knowledge and Experience; but writing, as they spake, the Distates of the . Spirit of God, 2 Pet. i. 21. The Writings therefore of one of thoses those, whom we call Evangelists, being the Testimony of the Holy Ghost, 2 Tim. iii. 16. is of more Value, and ought rather to be credited, than the Testimony of many, nay, of all Men: But all of them agreeing in one and the same Truth, their Testimony is so much the more inforcing, as implying so many several Acts of one and the same Spirit, producing in divers Subjects one and the same Effect, even the Mystery of our Salvation by Jesus Christ; For though every one of them follow his own peculiar Method and Order in the Context of his History, and sometimes deliver the same Thing in the same or other Words, or add some Circumstance to that which another had written, or new Matter altogether omitted by the rest, and now and then seem not so much to respect Order and Method, as faithfully to record Fact; yet in the undoubted Truth both of Christ's Speeches and Actions, there is a most admirable Consent and Celestial Harmony. For the more clear Demonstration of this, the Learned of all Ages have bestowed much Labour and extraordinary Industry in comparing their Testimonies; as, Tatianus the Scholar of Justin Martyr, Ammonius Origen's Master, Theophilus Antiochenus, Epiphanius, Augustine, and others; not to name any more of later Date; by whose Labours in that kind the Church of God hath been much enlightened and adorned. Yet this, as it was performed by several Men, so was it done in a different manner. Some of them reduced all the four Evangelists into the Method and Text of one; the Manner of which appears by those Canons yet remaining and extant in St. Jerom, Tom. 6. in initio. Others placed the several Texts collaterally in one Page, leaving it to the Reader to judge what was added, or otherwise delivered by any one of them. And this Method most of later Times have followed, Calvin excepted, who harmonizeth only the three first, placing St. John by himself, as hardly reducible to the other three. Others have reduced all the four Gospels into one continued Text, bringing in every one in his due Place and own Words, delivering his Part of the History of Christ. This Method is observed by Jansenius and Chemnitius, both excellent in their Way: But that which I have chiefly followed, is the Itinerarium of the incomparable Lucas Brugensis, before his most learned Comment on the four Gospels; which being so harmoniously and exactly performed, I thought it most proper for my Rule and Guide.

xxiv The PREFACE.

The Advantage of this kind of Harmony of the four Gospels to the intelligent Reader will be infinitely greater than I can express; for he will find by this perpetual and continued Connexion of History the Speeches, Sermons and Acts of Christ, related without Interruption of Circumstances differently placed: And rubere the Circumstances of any Actions are omitted by one or two of the Evangelists, they are in this Method reduced to their proper Place, and the History carried on entire. There are many Places of the Evangelists, which seem to an inadvertent or prejudiced Reader to contradict one another; but by this Connexion are more commodiously reconciled, than by any Gloss what soever. And thus by the joint Consent of the four Gospels in one Testimony and Relation, the History of our Blessed Lord and Saviour, and the whole Foundation of Evangelical Truth and Doctrine appear more beautiful and illustrious: Of which God give us his Grace to make a right Use and true Improvement, for his Glory and our Benefit. Amen.

HOLY BIBLE.

B O O K I.

HE Almighty Architect having in his Eternal Wisdom surveyed the Chaos in its rude and shapeless Condition, shew'd the first Instance of his Power in creating Light; for hitherto nothing but Darkness over-spread the unform'd Earth and Water, which with the other Elements and Materials of the Creation lay blended together without Order or Distinction; only Vol. I.

only the (a) Spirit of God moved upon the Face of the Waters. No fooner had the Light displayed its chearful Beams, but it gave Birth to the first Day, which was immediately succeeded by the first Night. And this was the first Day's Work of the great Creator; who was so pleased with the Operation of his Hands, that he gave it his facred Approbation, distinguishing each with a new Name, calling the Light Day, and the Darkness Night.

And to keep so much of this Part of new-framed Nature within just Limits, the Almighty laid the Foundations of Heaven, called by the Name of (b) Firmament, which was to keep the Waters of the Clouds and those below them asunder.

As yet the Creation confisted of nothing but Light, the Waters and the Firmament that parted them; therefore God commanded that the Waters might be reduced within Bounds; upon the Retreat of which the dry Land appear'd, and this was called Earth, as the Gathering of the Waters was called Sea. This likewise received his gracious Probat; but being as yet irregular and uncultivate, he resolves to bestow upon it a prolifick Virtue as well as Ornament and Decoration: He no sooner gave the Word, but Nature covers the Earth with a beautiful Carpet of Flowers, Plants, and Trees of all Sorts.

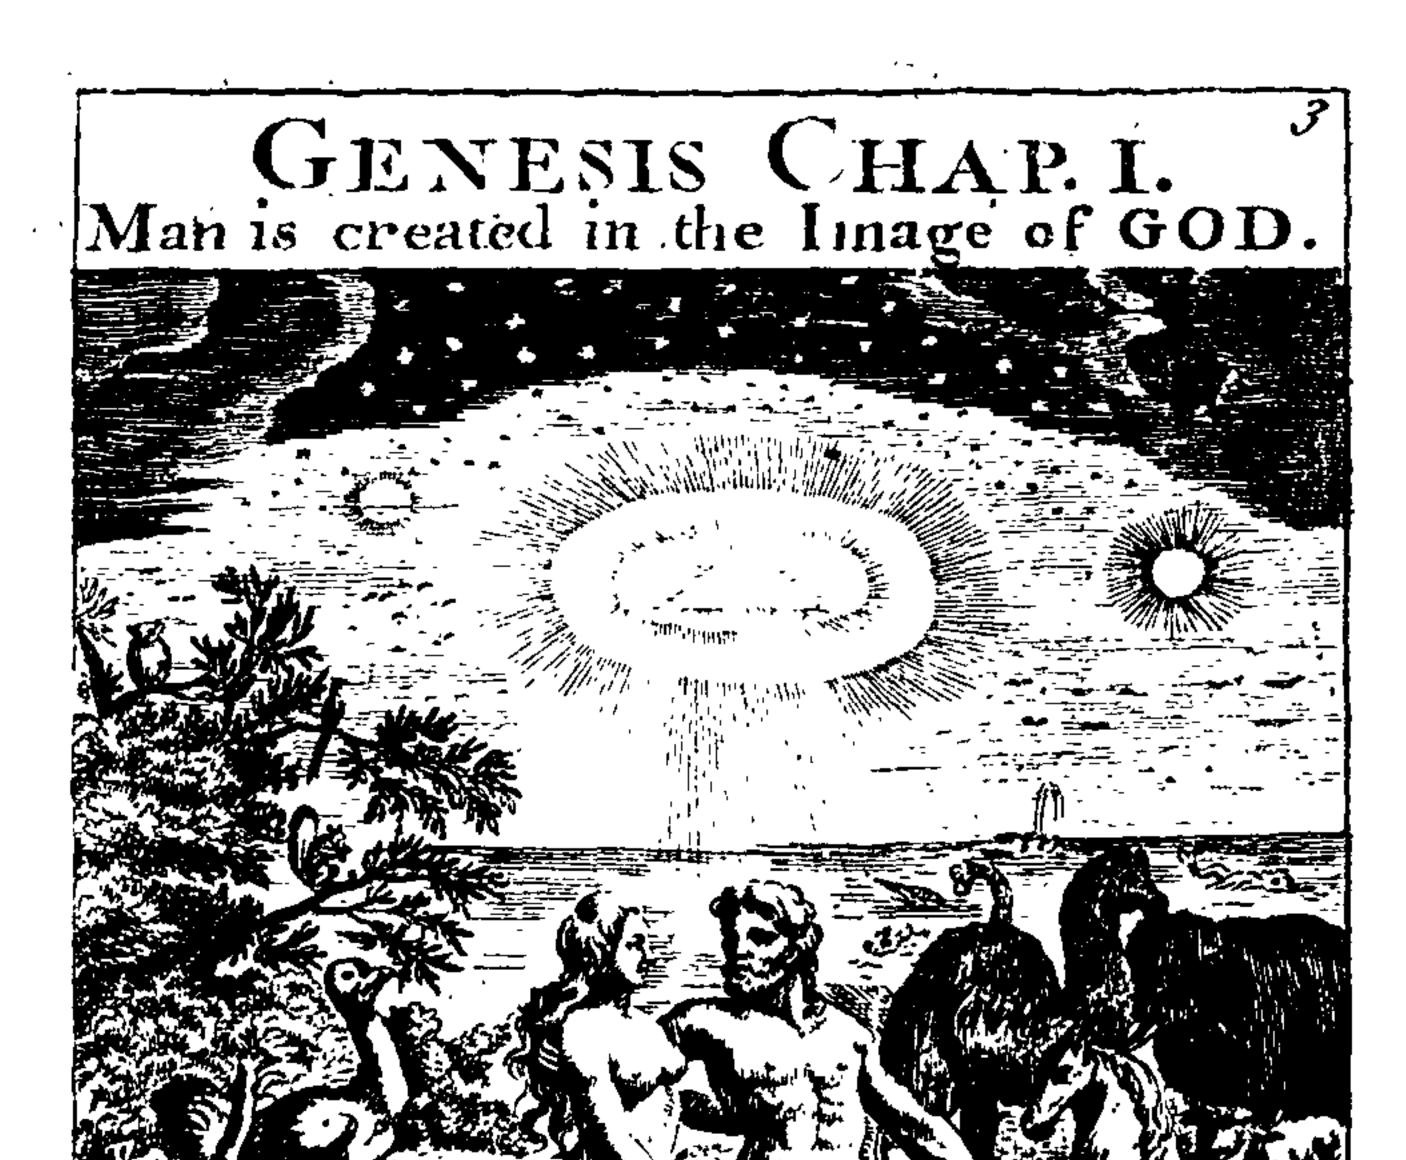

Hitherto the Light, which God created the first Day, (and without which the Order and Beauty of Things would have been altogether useless) was diffused throughout the Universe, by the Struggling of the small Globes of etherial Matter, to break loose

Moses observes, Exed. xiv. 21. that there arose a strong east Wind the Night before the Israelites passed thro'the Red-Sea, which made it dry.

⁽a) Spirit. Thus our Translation; which ought to have been render'd a most webe-ment Wind, instead of the Spirit of God, since the Hebrew Word Ruach signifies as well the Wind as the Spirit, and this Signification of it agrees very well with Mosses's Narration, which represents the Earth mixed so with the Waters, that it could not appear, and so stood very much in need of a Wind to dry it. As the said

⁽b) Firmament. The Hebrew Word Rake a fignifies Extension, and by it here Moses means that Extent of airy Matter, which encompaties the Earth, and separates the Clouds from the Waters that are upon the Earth.

from the Centre of their Vortexes; but on the fourth Day God made those two great Luminaries of Heaven, the Sun and Moon, one to rule the Day, and the other the Night; and to render them more useful, by the Regularity of their Motion, he appointed them for Signs to distinguish the Seasons, and by them divide Time into Days and Years. He made the Stars also, which he set in the Firmament, where they finish their Revolutions in their proper Periods of Time.

God having spent the first four Days in the Creation of inanimate Things, proceeded to that of Living Creatures, by giving a productive Quality, "Let the "Waters, Jays be, bring forth abundantly the (c) "moving Creature that hath Life, and (d) Fowl that " may fly above the Earth in the open Firmament of "Heaven." After this God created great (e) Whales, and all other living Creatures which the Waters produced, and gave them this Blessing, "Be fruitful, and "fill the Waters with Fish, and the Earth with "Fowl." Moreover he added to the Fertility of the Earth, which before brought forth only Vegetables, the Production of Animals, saying, "Let the Earth " bring forth the living Creature after its Kind; Cat-"tle and creeping Things, and Beasts of the Earth " after their Kinds; and it was so.

All these Parts of the Creation being thus finished in their admirable Order, the Almighty, to crown

(c) Moving. Fish in Gen. i. 20. are not improperly called creeping Animals, because tho' they have no Feet, but lying upon their Bellies in the Water, with the help of their Fins they row themselves along.

the other fays, tho'they speak different. ly; as when Moses says, Gen. i. 20. Let the Waters bring forth, &c. and Forul, he does not fay that the Earth did not bring forth Fowl. It is most reasonable to think they had their Original partly from the (d) Fowl. From this Text of Genesis, Water, and partly from the Earth, and this might render the Flesh of Fawls less gross than that of Beasts, and more firm than that of Fishes. Hence Philo calls Fowl the Kindred of Fish,

(e) Whales. The H. brew Word Tanninim fignifies all vaftly great Creatures, as well on Earth, as in the Water, and ia commonly apply'd to all great Fishes.

some have started an Opinion, that Fowl derive their Origin from the Water. And others from Gen. ii. w. 19. Out of the Ground God formed every Beaft of the Field, and every Forvl of the Air, raile another, That Fowls take their Beginning from the Earth. These two Texts are cah'y reconcileable, for neither denies what this great Work, changes his Style, which before was, Let this, or that be so, and says, Let us make Man in our own (f) Image, after our own Likeness: Which represents God as acting more immediately himself, and undertaking this excellent Piece of (g) Workmanship with some Sort of Reslection and Deliberation: And tho' the Matter out of which Man was formed was but the Dust of the Ground, yet God, to shew his Omnipotence, breathed into his Nostrils the Breath of Life, and Man became a living Soul. Man being thus excellently made was by God invested with the Two great Blessings of Fruitfulness and Dominion: Be fruitful, says he, and multiply, and replenish the Earth, and subdue it, and have Dominion over it. He constituted him Lord over all other Creatures, and gave him the Product of the whole Earth for his Sustenance and Pleasure.

Such was the Creation of the World, of which when God had taken a general Survey, he pronounc'd it very good. And on the (b) Seventh Day he ended all his Works. which Day he appointed to be kept

(f) Image. Many of the ancient Fathers distinguish Image from Likeness in this Place; Image relating to his Nature, and Likeness to the Divine Virtues.

(g) Workmanship. See Ephes. ii. 10. and AE. xvii. 28.

(b) Seventb. Interpreters are strangely puzzled with what our Translation, and some others, make Moses say in Gen. ii. 2. And on the Seventh Day God ended his Work, which he had made. This Difficulty feem'd so material to the LXX, and to the Syrian and Samaritan Interpreters, that they put in the Number Six in the Place of the Seventh in The hear The Exla, and some, as Ludovicus, Capellus and Morinus, have made no Scruple to prefer their Vertion to the Hebrew Text. Others give the Words the feveral following Explications: viz. That God made the Seventh Day; that the feventh Day he communicated Motion and Action to the Things he had created the preceding Six Days. That the seventh Day he knew they were ended, and to add no more, that the Words should be render'd, The Sewenth Day be defired his Works, i. e. heartily purposed to preserve them. Nor are others let's unanimous. Some think, that God gave the finishing Stroke to his Works on the Seventh Day, to prevent the too superstitious Observation of it. Others, that the Words should be translated, On the Seventh Day be rested from bis Works; but the Hebrew Verb cannot be to taken in this Place, as the Learned do know. Some imagine Eve was created the Seventh Day, contrary to the express Words of Muses, Gen. i. 27. Others understand the Seventh Day exclusive. It's strange, that so many Learned Menshould have been to much puzzled with fuch a plain and easy Passage, which should be translated. And the Sewenth Day Godbad ended ins Works, which he had made; that is, that the Seventh Day there remained nothing to be made, as the greatest Masters of the Hebrero Tongue do acknowledge.

Holy,

Holy, that Man might therein consider the Excellency of the Creation, and God's Goodness towards him; which he still enlarged by additional Bounties accommodate to the Use and Pleasure of Life. The first of which he express'd in his Choice of the most beautiful Spot of Ground, called the Garden of (i) Eden, or the Terrestrial Paradise; wherein God placed him, that he might cultivate and keep it, giving him a general Permission to eat the Fruit of every Tree in the Garden, even of the (k) Tree of Life, except of the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil; giving him thereby an Occasion to shew his Fidelity to his Maker, and his Readiness to depend on him as his supreme Lord and only Benefactor; at the same Time, to terrify him from Disobedience, he annexes a dreadful Penalty to the Transgression of this Precept: In the Day, fays he, that thou eatest thereof thou sha!t deserve to (1) die without Remission.

> \mathbf{B} 3 God

(i) Eden. The Part of the World in which the Garden was, is sufficiently denoted by theRivers Chiddebel and Perath, which are certainly the Tigris and Euphrates. The Gehon and Pifon are not for well known; but since it is said, that these fourRivers united into one Channel in the Terrestrial Paradise, going out from thence form'd four several Branches, it must be allowed that the Gebon and the Pison were in the same Part of the World, as the Tigris and the Eupbrates; and it is very likely, that the earthly Paradife was about that Place, where those Rivers being united in one Budy, afterwards divide into two Branches, which the Scripture calls Gebon and Pi-Jon, one of which runs into the Country of Susiana, which is the Land of Chus, and the other into the Land of Havilab, which is a Part of Arabia the Stony.

Our learned Countryman, Dr. Henry More, alledges that Paradife was about Mesopotamia, that Country being not far distant from Judea. For it is the Tradition of the Fathers, that Adam, when he was ejected out of Paradile, having travell'd over some Parts of the World, came at last to Judea, and there died, and was buried in a Mount, which his Posterity, because the Head of the first Man was laid there, called Mount Calwary, where Christ was crucified for the Expiation of the Sins of Adam, the first Transgressor. If the Story be not true, (says Dr. More) it is pity but it should be, because it has such venerable Asserters, as Cyprian, Athanasius, Basil, Origen, and others of the Fathers, as Cornelius a Lapide affictus.

(k) Tree. Moses in Gen, ii. 9. mentions two Trees, the Tree of Life, and tha Tree of the Knowledge, of Good and Ewit. The Tree of Life, is supposed to be fo called, because the Fruit of it had the Virtue of preserving from Death; by eating of which, Man was supply'd with continual youthful Vigour, till he should be translated from a corporeal Life to a spiritual and immortal. The Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil had that Name, because after Adam and Eve had eaten of its Fruit, they began to know the Good they had lost thro' their Duobedience, and the Misery they were fallen into.

(1) Die. Gen. ii. 17. The Version runs thus---- Thou shalt die the Death:

God having given Adam a Permission what to eat, and a Prohibition what to forbear, puts him in Execution of the Sovereignty he had before given him, bringing all the Beasts of the Field and Fowls of the Air before him, that he might give them their Names, and whatsoever Adam called any Creature, that was its Name. And now Adam being the only Creature that wanted a Companion, God caused a deep Sleep to seize on him, and whilst he slept, God took out one of his (m) Ribs, closing up the Flesh again, and made it into a Woman, and brought her to him. Adam being sensible of what his Maker had done, as soon as he saw the Woman, in a sort of Rapture says, This is now Bone of my Bone, and Flesh of my Flesh: And, as he had given Names to all other Creatures, he likewise calls her Woman, subjoining a Reason, because she was taken out of Man: These two then being such Relatives, were to be inseparable, and that in all future Ages, Man should leave Father and Mother, and incline wholly to his Wife, and they two be, as it were, but one. This was the divine Institution of Marriage, with the Law thereof, in the naked Innocency, and unblushing Simplicity of the Man and

Which would imply, that on the Day that Adam should eat of this Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil, he should die; which was not so, for Adam lived many Years after. Therefore, as some observe very well, it should be render'd, You shall deserve to die without Remission. For the Scripture often expresses by the Future not only what will come to pass, but also what ought to come to pais. And to this Purpote there is a very apposite Text, I Kings ii. 37. where Solomon fays to Shimei - In the Day that thou goeft out and passess the Brook Kidron, then shalt assuredly die the Death; ie. thou thalt deserve Death without Remission: For Solomon reserved to himfelf the Power of punishing him when he should think fit; and in effect he did not put him to Death the same Day in which he disobey'd, no more than God did put Aldam to Death the same Day that he did eat of the forbidden Fruit. (m) Ribs. The Atheist here is apt to raise Scruples and Difficulties, demanding whether this Rib of Adam was a superfluous one or not? How God made a Woman of a Rib? And why he did not make Woman at the same Time he made Man, as he created other Males and Females? These are frivolous Queries, but ought to be answered. Was it more difficult for him to form a Woman out of a Rib, which was covered with Flesh, than to make the Body of a Man, or a Beast, out of the Earth? We know not in what manner that was done, nor is it necessary we should know it. It is enough, that Woman was formed of the Substance of the Man's Body, and that fuch a Way of forming it was more agreeable than any other to God's Order and Wisdom, his Wife, while they abode in the delightful Garden of Eden. This was the innocent State of our first Parents; tho' they were (n) naked they were not asshamed, for they had hitherto contracted no Guilt, their Conscience was an unspotted Tablet, no deprayed Affections having invaded their chaste Souls; for before Sin entered, all Things were honest and comely,

But the blissful State of this happy Pair was but short liv'd; for the (a) Serpent, the Chief of the fallen Angels, envying the Happiness of Man, who hitherto retain'd and enjoy'd that State of Innocence

(n) Naked. Plate in Politic. seems to take that Nakedness, which he attributes to the People of the Golden Age, from hence.

(o) Serpent. Moses in his relation gives no Account of the Creation or Fall of Angels, both Good and Bad. It's certain they were all created Good, as all Things else were that God had made. But that some of them kept not their first Estate, but left their own Habitations, and thro' Pride aspiring higher, sinned against God, and were by him cast donon to Hell,, is certain from the Apostles St. Peter and Jude, 2 Pet. ii. 4. Jude 6. to which some additional Light is given from Job iv. 18. John viii. 44. and I John iii. S. The Chief of these fallen Angels, called here the Serpent, and afterwards the Old Serpent, Rev. xx. 2. and Beelzebub or Prince of the Devils (which were the rest of those Angels that fell) was he that tempted Ewe. Commentators indeed do vary much in their Opinions; some pretend that by the Serpent is to be understood the Devil, and that all which is said of the Discourse, and of the exterior Temptation, is to be understood of the inward Suggestion of Satan. Others fay, the Devil took upon him the Shape of a Serpent; but both these Opinions feem opposite to the Words of Moses, who supposes that Serpent was one of the Animals of the Earth: The Punish. ment God inflicted on it of creeping on the Earth, and the Enmity between its Race and that of Women, are Particulars which do not agree with any, but the true and real Serpent. But luppofing him to be a Serpent, some will allow him to have had the Use of Speech and Understanding at first, of which for his Transgression he was deprived; with many other Conjectures to as little Purpose. Abarbinel the learned Few expounds the Temptation of the Serpent most ingeniously of any, and after a quite different Manner. He pretends, that the Serpent did not speak, and that Eve said nothing to it, but that the said Animal being very active, got upon the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil, took of the Fruit, and cat of it; and that Eve, having feen it several Times do to, and not die, concluded with herself that the said Fruit did not occasion Death, and that it might be grateful to the Taste: And that it was thus the Ser pent gave the Woman to understand, as if it had spoke, that she would not die for eating that Fruit, which made her believe, that God had only forbid them eating of it, because if they did so, they would have the Knowledge of Good and Evil. This Opinion indeed folves all Difficulties; and yet it must be owned, that the Text seems to express more, and to infinuate, that there was a real Dialogue between the Woman and the Serpent. We must therefore return to the more general Opinion of the Expofitors, that the Devil actually made use of the Serpent to talk to Ewe, and tempt her. It was a real Serpent, and not an imaginary one that spoke to her; but it only spoke by Means of the Dewil, who made use of that Creature as the fittest to be employed in that Service.

and Bliss, in which he was created, and which they by Ambition had forfeited and lost, contrived how to feduce Man from his Obedience, and draw him into Transgression, that he might have him a Companion in his Punishment. In order to which he attacks the Womam, as the weaker Vessel, by whom he thought he might more easily prevail upon the Man. His diabolical Project took; for he no sooner accosted her, but he gain'd his End: With a seeming Sort of Indifference he betrays her into an eager Pursuit of her Ruin. " Indeed, Jays be, God hath commanded you not to eat of every Tree of the Garden." Nay, replies the Woman, "it is but one Tree that is forbidden us; for we may eat of the Fruit of every Tree in the Garden, except of the Fruit of the Tree which is in the Midst of the Garden; for God hath so said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch "it, lest ye die." God's Word was positive, which he made to Adam, Thou shalt die; but the Woman in repeating it, renders it only doubtful, and in doubting of God's Threatning, she seemed to yield. The (p) Serpent finding her staggering, pursues his Advantage, and encourages her with Assurance that she should not die; for God knows, (q) says he, that in the Day ye eat thereof, your Eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as Gods, knowing Good and Evil. That inflam'd the Woman's Ambition and Desire, for the Fruit was not only tempting to the Eye, and grateful to the press, the Devil made use of the Serpent to tempt Eve, but contents himfelf with relating Facts as they happened outwardly, without commenting on them, or giving any Exposition; as in the eighteenth Chapter of Genesis, he calls the three Angels that appeared to Abrabam, Men, without declaring that they were Angels. St. Paul 2 Cor. xi. 3. in the same manner assigns to the Serpent the Seducing of Eve; but in

⁽q) Says. It hath been objected by some, that since the Serpent could not speak naturally, how it came to pass that Eve was not frighted when she heard it talk? To which it may be easily answered: 1. That Eve being but newly sormed, might not know that Animals did not speak. 2. That being hitherto in a State of Innocence, Sin having not as yet seiz'd them, she was not subject to fear.

Palate, but desirable for its instructive Quality of making one Wise. Whereupon forgetting the Prohibition; and dreadful Menaces attending, her Curiosity hurries her on to her Destruction: She eats of the Fruit; and her Husband, stimulated by the same Desire of being as knowing as his Maker, is easily persuaded by his Wife to taste of it with her. No sooner had they eaten of the forbidden Fruit, but their Eyes were opened; but alas! it was to see their own Nakedness and Misery. They had indeed acquired Knowledge, but it was a Knowledge arising from sad Experience, that the Serpent had betray'd them both, and drawn them from the Good which they knew before, into the Evil which they knew not. This dear-bought Knowledge brought upon them at once both Guilt and Shame. Moses had before observed, that Adam and Eve were naked, and were not ashamed; before Sin was committed they were innocent and free from Passions, like Children which were not ashamed of their Nakedness; but after they had sinned, they began to feel the disorderly Motions of Concupiscence; they were ashamed to see themselves naked, and being put to the poor Shifts of Art to conceal their newdiscover'd Nakedness, they made themselves Aprons to cover them. And now their Woe is increas'd by a sad Chain of Passions, which their Disobedience had intail'd upon them; Guilt attended with Shame, and slavish Fear pursue them: For when they heard the Voice of God, walking in Paradife, when the Wind arose in the Asternoon, they hid themselves from the Face of the Lord among the Trees of the Garden. God at that Time was heard, and made himself known to Man after a sensible Manner: He called Adam, saying, Where art thou? Not to know where he was, but to make him more sensible of his Fault. Adam finding himself discovered, in great Consusion was forced to answer, "I heard thy Voice in the Garden, "and was afraid, because I was naked, therefore I 66 hid

"hid myself." In confessing his Nakedness he own'd his Guilt; of which God immediately convicted him; for demanding how he came to know he was naked? (which God knew he could no way come to the Knowledge of, but by Eating of the forbidden Fruit) Adam, who was not yet growu so hardy, as to deny the Fact, own'd himself guilty, but endeavoured to excuse himself, by laying the Blame upon his Wife, not without a tacit Reflection on God himself: "The Woman, said be, whom thou gavest to be with me, gave me of the Fruit and I did eat." God thereupon calling the Woman to account, said, "What is this thou hast done?" She also readily confessed the Fact; but like her Husband, being willing to excuse herself, alledged, That she was betray'd into it; "The Serpent, said she, beguiled me, and I did eat." God having by Examination brought this unhappy Pair to Confession and Conviction, did not proceed so with the Serpent; but presently passing Sentence upon him, he said, "Because thou hast done 46 this, thou art cursed above all Cattle, and above every Beast of the Field; upon thy Belly shalt thou ee go, and Dust shalt thou eat all the Days of thy Life. "And I will put(r) Enmity between thee and the Wo-"man, and between thy Seed and her Seed, it shall bruise thy Head, and thou shalt lie in wait for her "Heel." Then pronouncing Sentence on the Woman, God said, "I will greatly multiply thy Sorrow se and Conception. In Sorrow shalt thou bring forth

(r) Enmity. The Enmity here mentioned is that Antipathy which God set between Mankind and his Isue, and the Devil and his, at whose Instigation our first Parents were betrayed to Sin; By the Seed of the Woman, meaning Jesus the Saviour of the World, and the Faithful; and by the Seed of the Serpent (the Devil) all Infidels and wicked People; closing the Curse of the Serpent with the same Allegory. It shall bruise thy Head, and thou shalt lie in wait for her Heel: i. e. O Devil, the Seed of the Woman shall use thee as a Serpent, tread thee under Foot; and thou O Serpent, shalt, like thy self, lie in wait to bite its unwary Heel. Upon which the Targum of Chaldee paraphrase thus: When the Sons (or Seed) of the Woman shall observe the Law, and its Precepts, then shall they trample on thy Head and kill thee; but when they shall for sake the Law, thou shalt bite their Heel.

" Children,

"Children, and thy (s) Desire shall be to thy Hus-" band, and he shall rule over thee." And unto Adam he said, "Because thou hast hearken'd unto the Voice "of thy Wife (in Opposition to my Command) and "hast eaten of the forbidden Tree; cursed be the Ground for thy Sake; in Sorrow shalt thou eat of "it, all the Days of thy Life. Thorns also and "Thistles shall it bring forth to thee; and thou shalt " eat the Herb of the Field. In the Sweat of thy "Face shalt thou eat Bread, till thou return to the "Ground out of which thou wast taken: For Dust "thou art, and unto Dust shalt thou return." These three Criminals having receiv'd their Doom, God expell'd them the Garden of Eden, and sent the Man to till the Ground from whence he was taken; and lest he should have the same Desire of Tasting of the Tree of Life, as he had of the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil, God placed (t) Cherubims to guard the Entrance of Paradise with a flaming Sword, to preserve the Tree of Life from his profane Hands. And thus from the Fall of our first Parents proceeded all those Ills which defac'd these beautiful Works of their Creator; and hence Sin, Pain and Death were intail'd upon their Posterity. With guilty Shame they are forc'd to quit their Seat of Innocence, and exchange fair Eden's Garden for an uncultivated World, which produc'd nothing but what was the Effect of toilsome Labout, and where they had no other Prospect, but a sad Variety of Care and Trouble.

And now Adam being expell'd Paradise knew his Wife Eve, who conceiving bare him a Son, whom

⁽s) Desire. Desire here signifies Obedience as to a Superior; that the Woman should desire nothing but what was agreeable to the Will of her Husband: And this is further inforc'd from Gen. iv. 7. where the Dignity of the First-born is given to Cain over Abel in the same Words, Unto thee bis Desire shall be (subject) and thou shalt rule over bim.

⁽t) Cheruhims. They are generally believ'd to be Angels; though the Hebrero Word may be taken for all Things in general that can strike a Terror, and the slaming Sword may be also taken metaphorically for Fire, Lightning, or any other Body, which by its Brightness hindred Men from approaching to Paradise.

she call'd (u) Cain, and said, "I have gotten a Man "from the (w) Lord." (x) After him she bare Adam another Son, who was named (y) Abel. These two Brethren, when they grew up, betook themselves to two different Employments; Cain, the Elder, whose Disposition was sordid and avaricious, betook himself to Tillage; but Abel, who was of a more gentle and humane Temper, took Delight in a pastoral Employnient, and fed Sheep. In Process of Time each of them brought their Offering to the Lord. Cain's was the (z) Fruits of the Ground; and Abel's the Firstlings of his Flock, and the Fat of them. The Lord, who saw and regarded the Heart of each, accepted Abel's Sacrifice, but was not pleased with Cain's. Hereupon Cain was provok'd, which the falling of his Countenance plainly shew'd; upon which God expostulates with him, and gives him to understand that it was his own Fault, that his Offering had not been accepted, and that if he did well, he should be accepted; if he sinn'd, he should be punish'd for his Offence; but if he made good Use of the Instructions and Assurances which God had been pleased to give him, (a) Abel his

(u) Cain. The word Cain signifies Possession; for a Child is called Parentum possessio & supellex, a Possession or Chattel of his Parents.

(w) Lord. From this Expression some think, that Eve was so far mistaken in Cain, as to take him (who was indeed but the First-born in the Transgression) for that Seed, which God had said, should bruise the Head of the Scrpent; but so far from being that Seed, or of that Seed, that the Apostle expressy says, He was of that wicked one, I John in. 12. And some of the Jews stick not to fay, That he was born of a filthy Seed, which the Serpent cast into Eve. But plain it is, that in reciting the Generations of Adam, Gen. v. Cain and his Offspring are wholly omitted, as if they did not belong to Adam.

(x) After. Before the Birth of Cain, Eve is said to have conceived; but there is no mention made of her Conception of Abel; from whence some conclude they were Twins.

(y) Abel. The Word Abel fignifies Mourning, because his Parents long lamented his Death: It signifies also Vanity, either because it presaged the Suddenness of his Death, or that it denoted the Vanity of Mortality to which all are subject.

(z) Fruits. It is the general Opinion of Commentators, that Cain offered the worst of the Fruits of the Earth, which shew'd, that he did not pay his Acknowledgment to God with that Chearfulness and Sincerity of Heart, as Abel did who brought the First of his Flock.

(a) Abel. In the same Sense God said to Ewe, that her Desire should be to her Husband, i. e. she should go to him for Shelter and Protection, as to a Sanctuary, as the LXX, have very well render'd it.

Brother

GENESIS CHAP. IV. Cain flays his Brother Abel.

GENESIS 4. Verse 8.

And it came to pass nisten they were in the field that Cain rose up against Abel. his Grother and flew Rim.

Brother should come to him as to a Refuge, and submit himself to his Authority. But this kind Reproof made no Impression on Cain; instead of being sensible of his Fault and repenting, he grows incensed against his Brother, and taking Occasion not long after to discourse with him when they were together in the Field, he fell upon innocent Abel and slew him. This unnatural Murder gave Death the first Handsel, which proceeded from no other Ground, but that because the righteous Abel worshipp'd God more sincerely, and more acceptably than Cain did. But he is soon call'd to an Account for it, for God examining him where his Brother was, he very insolently as well as falsly answered, he knew not: And as if he had been affronted by being question'd about his Brother, he furlily answered, "Am I my Brother's Keeper?" But the Lord not only charg'd him with the Murder of his Brother, but convicted him of it too. "What "hast thou done, said be, the Voice of thy Brother's "Blood cries to me from the Ground. And now art "thou cursed from the Earth, which hath opened "her Mouth to receive thy Brother's Blood from thy "Hand. When thou tillest the Ground, it shall not "henceforth yield unto thee its Strength: Nor is that "all: but a Fugitive and a Vagabond shalt thou be "upon the Earth." This Sentence was gentle in Comparison of the horrid Crime; but Cain, amaz'd at it, began to be sensible of the Heinousness of his Offence, and the Misery he was reduced to: (b) My Offence, said he, is too great to obtain Pardon. This was an Expression of Despair rather than Repentance;

given it: But why should we not tranflate it with some Rabbins, Is my Iniquity greater than that it can be pardon'd?
This hath nothing contrary to the Answer which God gave him, and which he likewise back'd with a miraculous Sign, to assure him of his Protection, as you may see in the Note (d) following.

⁽b) My Offence, &c. All the Versions make Cain speak like one in Despair, Gen. iv. 13. The Vulgar Latin makes him say, My Iniquity is greater than that I should merit or obtain Pardon. Pagnine, Tremellius, the French, and Ours. My Iniquity is greater than I can bear. The former is the Meaning which the LXX and Chaldee Paraphrase have and he seems not so sensible of his Sin as of his Punishment. "Behold, said be, thou hast driven me out this "Day from the Face of the Earth, and from thy Face " shall I be hid, and I shall be a Fugitive and a Vagabond " in the Earth, and it shall come to pass that (c) every " one that findeth me shall slay me. " But God having taken this Cause into his own immediate Cognizance, and fix'd the Punishment, secur'd him against that Dread, declaring, that whosoever should slay Cain, Vengeance should be taken on him Sevenfold, that is, in a very grievous Manner; God giving us thereby to understand, that Vengeance is to be left to him, and that it is not lawful for private Persons of their own Authority to kill such as deserve it. And that none by Mistake might slay Cain, God set a (d) Sign or Wonder

(c) Every one. Among all the Conjectures of Peirere and others, concerning the State of the Pre-Adamites, there is but one that seems to have any Difficulty; which is, that Cain having flain his Brother Abel, and going away towards the East, said, Every one that findeth me will slay me. This seems to imply, That there were then Men upon the Earth. Cain married, he had a Son called Enoch, and being come into the East he there built a City, to which he gave his Son's Name. Hence they conclude that the Earth was inhabited by Men, and another Race of Men than that of Adam; for Abel was dead, Cain was fled, and Setb was not born till the 130th Year of Adam, after the Death of Abel. But this Objection hath little in it, if we observe, that the Murder of Abel by Cain happen'd long after their Birth, a short Time before that of Setb, who was born in the 130th Year of Adam; for Eve look'd upon the Birth of Seth as a Comfort for the Death of Abel, saying, God hath appointed me another Son in the Room of Abel, ruhom Cain flew. Supposing then that Murder to have happened in the 128th Year of the World, there might be then many Men on the Earth descended from Adam; for tho' the Scripture names but Three of his Children, yet it is said, Gen. v. 4.

he had Sons and Daugisters. If we calculate the Number of Adam's Children and their Offspring in 122 Years, it will appear there might be a great Number of Men and Women: So that it is not surprizing, that when Cain slew his Brother Abel, some other Part of the Earth should be peopled.

(d) Sign. There is nothing more ridiculous than the Conjectures of the Rabbies, and of some Christian Doctors, concerning this pretended Mark, which they think God did imprint upon the Body of Cain, to distinguish him from other Men, and to keep him from being killed. Some imagine, that it was fome of the Letters of the Name Jebowab, or of the Hebrew Alphabet, or even of the Name Cain, that were printed on his Forehead, or on his Arms. Others have fancied that it was a Horn, which grew out of his Forchead. Several of the Fathers, and some Arabians have thought it to be a continual Trembling of the Body. There are some, who imagine, that this Sign was a Dog that always attended him; others, that the Earth always shook about him: But supposing there had been a real' Mark set upon some Part of Cain; yet fince the Scripture gives no Account of what Mark it was, it is Rashness to guels at it, But the Mistake lies in the

Wonder before him to persuade him, that whosoever should find bim should not kill bim. Upon this Cain went out from the Presence of the Lord, and dwelt in the Land of Nod, which is to the Eastward of Eden, beyond the Country of Babylon; and having by this Time taken a Wife, she conceived and bare him a Son, called Enoch, after whose Name Cain called the City, which he afterwards built. This Enoch begat Irad; Irad begat Mehujael; Mehujael begat Methusael; and Methusael begat Lamech. This last the Scripture takes Notice of, as a Thing altogether new and singular, that he was the First that introduc'd Polygamy, for he married two Wives called Adah and Zillah. By the first he had two Children, Jabal, who first invented the Use of Tents, and to order Cattle; and Jubal, who was the first Inventor of Musical Instruments. By his Wife Zillah he had a Son called Tubalcain, who first found out the Art of working of Metals, and was the first that made Armour and warlike Weapons: A Trade well becoming one of murdering Cain's Posterity. This is the Register of Cain's Posterity for . feven Generations, which Moses might enumerate perhaps to shew who were the Authors or Inventors of certain Arts or Trades, and who were instrumental in corrupting the better Seed of Adam afterwards. But of Cain's more immediate bloody Race, none was more eminently barbarous than Lamech; for his Translation; and almost all the Versions have committed a Fault in translating Gen. iv. 15. That God had put a Mark on Cain, lest any finding him should kill him: Tho' the Original says no such Thing, as the LXX. have, who render it very well thus, That God set a Sign or Wonder before Cain, to persuade him that whososever should find him should not kill him. Almost the same with that which is said, Exod. x. 1, 2. that God did set Signs before the Egyptians, and Isa. lxvi. 19. that he would set a Sign among the Heathen. Where 'tis evident, he does not mean any particular Mark, which should be set on their Bodies, but only those Signs and Wonders, which he wrought in Egypt to oblige Pharaob to let his People go, and the miraculous Manner, after which he delivered them somethe Babylonish Captivity. This Explication is natural and agreeable to the Methods of divine Providence, which is wont to convince the Incredulous by Signs and Wonders. Nor could any less assure Cain, in the Fear he was under, that the First that did meet him should not kill him, after what God had said to him, in upbraiding him with his Crime.

Wives, knowing that all Men hated him for his Cruelty, were afraid for him; upon which, to satisfy them, he boastingly said, that none could resist him, for he had murder'd a Man, though he was wounded; and making himself secure to them, he tells them, tho' in a scoffing Manner, that if Cain's Death was to be aveng'd Seven-fold, his would be seventy Times seven Times, valuing himself upon more Murders than Cain could. And thus much for Cain and his Off-spring, which were all swept away by the Deluge.

Adam having thus unhappily lost his Son Abel, God supply'd his Loss by giving him another, whom he named Seth; for, saith Eve, "God hath given me " another Son instead of Abel, whom Cain sew." This Man had a Son called Enos, of whom it is said, that in his Time Men began to call upon the Name of the Lord; which is to be understood of a publick Worship, or with Ceremonies. Through this Seth, Adam's Line is by Moses continued in Ten Generations before the Flood, with the Age of each of those longliv'd (e) Fathers. Among these, in the Seventh Degree from Adam, lived Enoch, to whom this lingular Testimony and Character was given, That God was so pleas'd with his good Life and virtuous Conversation, that he translated him to Heaven immediately. Enoch left behind him his Son Methuselah, the longest liv'd of the Patriarchs, and he left behind him Lamech the Father of Noah, whose Birth was congratulated with this prophetick Rapture by his Father, (f) That he should prove a Comfort to his Family for the Curse which the Lord had laid upon the Earth: Which Prophecy was verified, but in another Manner; for Noah by his righteous Life deliver'd the Church, and preserv'd it from perishing, by his Obedience.

By this Time the World began to grow populous, and tho' Seth and his Progeny for some Ages were shy of conversing with Cain and his Family, by reason of their barbarous and bloody Disposition; yet Time wore off that Aversion, and as the World grew more replenish'd with People, the Generation of the Righteous indulging themselves in too great a Liberty, entertained a more free and familiar Conversation with the wicked Offspring of cursed Cain, than was fit or safe for them. By which Means having exposed themselves to the Allurements of their Women, the Lust of the Eye representing the Daughters of Men fair, prevail'd upon the (g) Sons of God to take them. It is not to be doubted, but that these, who were the Offspring of the Righteous, and profess'd themselves to be the Sons of God, were not a little by this Time degenerated from the Virtue and Piety of their Ancestors. For we find, that immediately after this God

(g) Sons of God. The two great Families derived from Adam, viz. That by Cain, and that by Soth, (who succeeded righteous Abel) as they differed in their Natures and Course of Life, so they were distinguished by very different Appellations. For the Offspring of Cain being wholly given up to worldly Pleasures, and minding only earthly Things were called Men, or Sons of Men: But the Offspring of Seth, because they addicted themselves to Virtue and Piety, and profess'd to worship the true God, were called the Sons of God.

This is very rational and plausible, and, I believe, true: And yet a modern Annotator, not without Reason, says, some Versions have not been exact enough, in rendring what M. fes remarks of the Behaviour of those who were in Authority an Age before the Deluge; making him say, Gen. vi. 2. That the Sons of God Saw the Daughters of Men, that they were fair, and they took them Wives of all that they chose. This gave Occasion to that extravagant Opinion of several Jewish Writers, followed by several Fathers of the Church, mz. That Angels had come down upon Earth, and taken to themselves Wives, with whom they begat a Generation of Giants: And to that no less extravagant Fancy of others, who imagined that the Sons of Men did fignify the Devils. But it was easy to have observed, that the Word Elobim often signifies no more than a Judge or Sovereign, or a Person invested with Authority, as the best Interpreters do acknowledge; and that, as the Hebrew does express the inferior Sort of People by the Sons of Men, so the Daughters of Men signify no more than the Daughters of the inferior Sort. It must have been observed further, that the Verb Labach does not only fignify to take, here, and in several other Places, but to take by Force, or Surprize, or to ravish, and that this Behaviour is called a Violence, v. 11, 13. which provoked God to send the Deluge on the Earth. Moses's D sign then is to aggravate the Wickedness of that Age, by thewing that those who were in Authority, and confequently should have been exemplary for Virtue and Piety, were nothing but Patterns of Lust and Violence: So that the Words should have been rendered, That the Sons of the Sourreignty Seeing that the Daughters of the inferior Sort rvere fair, they took them by Force, and ravilhed them at their Pleasure; as some Versions and Interpreters have expressed them.

complained of the Wickedness of Man in general. But how depraved soever they were before, this Alliance with those who were not the same with them in the Prosession, at least, of Religion, and the Worship of God, did fill up the Measure of their Iniquity, and aggravate their Sin. God seeing the Corruption general, and daily increase, is said to repent that he had made Man, and seeing no Hopes of their Repentance, he declared he would destroy the whole Race: Only Noah, who was a just and pious Man, sound Favour in the Sight of God, and for his Sake, his Family, eight Persons in all, were exempted from the general Destruction, which by the Flood was brought upon the rest of Mankind.

Of this approaching Judgment, the merciful God gave Mankind Warning long before he executed it; for tho' the Wickedness of Man was so great, that (speaking after the Manner of Men) God is said to have repented that he had made Man, yea, that it grieved him to the Heart; yet, faith God, my Spirit shall not always strive with Man, my Justice provokes, my Mercy intercedes; I am at Strife with myself, how to deal with this sinful Generation; yet since Man is also Flesh, I will not sweep him away with a sudden Destruction, I will give him yet a Time to return, and repent, yet his Days shall be an hundred and twenty Years. (b) The hundred and twenty Years are almost expired, the Term of Reprieval is at Hand: And yet they shall have a second Warning. God was unwilling to destroy them yet, unless they would wilfully run upon their own Ruin; for feven Days hence, says he, I will cause it to rain forty Days upon

⁽b) Hundred, &c. This is a great Instance of God's Forbearance, and shews the Difference between the Mercy of God and that of Man. For Man seldem gives Warning where he intends to strike; and more seldom strikes, but where he intends to destroy. "Why dost thou
"give Notice of thy Judgments thou "art about to execute? That I may

[&]quot;never execute those Evils which I give Notice of," saith St. Chrysostom, answering in the Lord's Stead. And to the like Purpose St. Hierom: "God, because he desires to punish no Man, [&]quot;threatens them with his Punishments like a Father, and shakes his Rod,

[&]quot; because he has no Mind to correct his

GENESIS CHAP.VII. Noah enters the Ark.

GENESIS 7. Verse 1.

And the LORD faid unto Noah, come thou and all they house, into the ark, for thee have I feen righteous before me etc.

the Earth. It will be seven Days before it begin to rain, and it will continue forty Days raining: If in that Time they had all turned from their evil Ways, I doubt not but their Doom had been reversed, as it was afterwards at the Preaching of Jonab.

But before the hundred and twenty Years were expired, God, seeing no Amendment, declar'd to Noah his Resolution to destroy all Flesh from the Earth by a Flood of Waters; but for the Preservation of Noab and his Family, and Seed to replenish the depopulated Earth, he commanded him to make an (i) Ark, or Ship of vast Bigness to receive them, and some of all Creatures. This Ark God directed Noah to make of Gopher, or Cedar, and to pitch it both within and without, that the Waters might not penetrate it. The Length of it was to be an hundred and fifty Yards, the Breadth twenty five, and the Height fifteen. There were three Stories or Decks in it; the First and Second might serve for the Beasts and the Provisions; the Third it's likely serv'd to lodge Noah and his Family, and to keep the Birds. Every Story or Deck might be divided into several Apartments; and there was a Window above, or an Opening, which went quite round to give Light to the whole Vessel, and the Door or Entring Port was in the Side.

(i) Ark. Some of the Ancients not thinking the Ark, by these Dimensions, spacious enough to receive commodioufly all the Creatures that were to enter therein, with their Stowage of Provision and Necessaries, have extended this Measure by the Geometrical Cubit; which would make the Ark fix Times bigger. But according to the Computation of Bishop Wilkins and other learned Men, it is plain that the Ark was capable of containing all those Creatures that came. Had we never feen a Ship, and should be told how many Men, and what Provisions and Merchandize one will carry, it would feem to us no less incredible, than what Moses tells of the Contents of the Ark. But the Geometrical Calculation makes out, that they are both equally possible, and shews that Moses spoke Truth. For had he been an Impostor, it would have been a very difficult Matter for him to have found out the exact Bulk of the Aik, in Proportion to what it contained. It is not to be supposed that he made a Geometrical Calculation, which requires much Application and Reflection. It is more likely that he related the Fact historically, as he had received it from his Ancestors, who were not very remote from the Flood, even tho' we had no Regard to Revelation.

Noah having received his Orders and Directions how to make the Ark, and an Assurance from God, that though he destroyed all Flesh beside, yet he would establish his Covenant with him, (k) finished the Ark seven Days before the Rain began to fall. All Things being thus prepared, God gave Notice to Noah to come into the Ark with his Family, and to take in with him every living Thing of all Flesh, both of Cattle and Beasts of the Field, Birds and Fowls of the Air, and creeping Things, two of a Sort, one Male, and one Female; to keep Seed to stock the Earth again. But of clean Beasts, he was ordered to take them in by Sevens, three Pairs of Males, and three of Females, and the Seventh for Sacrifice. All which Creatures, God, by a fecret Instinct, (1) difposed to come and offer themselves unto him; and with them he was also to take in Food of all Sorts that were then eaten, sufficient to sustain himself and them.

Noah having pursued these Directions, enters the Ark with his Family in the Six hundredth Year of his Age: And on the Seventeenth Day of the Second Month, (which was about the Beginning of May) the whole Face of Nature began to put on a dismal Aspect, as if the Earth were to suffer a final Dissolution, and all Things return to their primitive Chaos. The Cataracts of Heaven were opened, and the Sea forgetting its Bounds, overspread the Earth with a that brought them, but God by his fecret Providence disposing them: Though it might justly be answered in the Case of Noah alone, exclusive of God's Power, That all Sorts of Creatures having been created in that Country, some of every kind had temained there, which Noab without any Miracle might have tamed fome Time before the Flood; fo that when the Deluge came on, they might naturally be brought to the Ark, at the Time when Nout flut it up.

⁽k) Finish'd. It is natural for any one to atk where the Ark was built; which in all Probability was in Mesopotamia: For the Terrestrial Paradise being there, it is likely the first Men did not remove far from thence, and that Noab lived there. And the Ark refled upon the Mountains of Armenia, which is not far from thence.

dreadful Inundation. Too late Wretched Man is infible of his deserved Fate, and in vain he climbs the Hills and Eminencies to shun the Vengeance of his angry God; the highest Mountains yield him but a short Reprieve, and every little Refuge soon disappears with him. Forty Days and Nights it continu'd raining, at the End of which the Ark began to float; the Surface of the Waters being fifteen Cubits, or two and twenty Feet and a half of our Measure, above the Tops of the highest (m) Mountains. Here was a dismal Face of Things; instead of the Earth adorn'd with the Productions of Nature and the Improvemen's of Art, nothing but a watery Defart appeared, which offer'd nothing to the View of Heaven but the floating Wrecks of Man and his Fellow-Creatures, who, except Noah and those in the Ark, were swept away with the Common Destruction.

(m) Mountains. The Atheist especially will here question the Universality of the Deluge; and some Moderns will not allow so great a Quantity of Water as to cover the whole Globe; or that if the Ark had been lifted to high above the Earth, Men and Beasts, by reason of the Sharpness of the Air, could not have lived; that Men not being then dispersed over all the Earth, it was sufficient to drown that Part of the Earth they lived on; and that when the Scripture fays, The Daluge covered all the Earth, it may very well be understood of all the Earth that was inhabited. To these Objections I answer, That the Letter of the Text in Gen'sis, is express for the Univertality of the Deluge, and that it is there faid, God resolved to destroy all Men, Beafts, Reptiles and Birds, except Noab, and those preserved with him in the Ark. And as in the Beginning the Mass of the Earth was cover'd with Water, the same Water, with the Clouds disiolved into Water, afforded the same Quantity, which meeting together, might a-Rain cover the Globe of the Earth. This Meses plainly denoted when he said, The Countains of the Deep, and the Cataracts of Heavien, were opened. And those Waters, when the Rain had ceas'd, being drain'd away by Degrees into the Deep, and exhaled in Vapours, the Earth appeared, and was restored to its former State. As to the Impossibility of Creatures breathing so far above the highest Mountains, by reason of the Sharpness of the Air, Experience shews, That the Creatures of any Country can live in another temperate Country: And that in this Cafe the Mass of Water having filled. up the Spaces of the groffer Air, made the Air, which was before near the Earth, to rife to the Tops of the highest Mountains; so that the Men and Creatures that were in the Aik breathed the same Air, that they would have breathed at the Foot of those Mountains. Besides, had not all the Earth been cover'd by the Waters, the Boilding of the Ark had been needless, and God could have warned Noab to go to some other Country, which was not to be drown'd. In short, it would have required no less a Miracle to keep up the Waters in one Part of the Earth, than to cover it all. To conclude, tho' God caused the Flood only as a Punishment for the Sins of Mer, yet it's 10fitively faid, that all but thole in the Ark perish'd.

C₃ God

God having thus satisfied his Justice in the Vengeance with which he had long threatened Mankind, began to think of the poor Remains of Nature he had for a Year confin'd within their floating Tabernacle. After a Year's Time (for so long the Waters continu'd over the Earth) God, remembering his Covenant which he made with Noah, causes a Wind to blow, which drove back the Waters, and left the Earth in a short Time dry. This Noah first discovered by the resting of the Ark upon one of the (n) Mountains of Ararat, in the Country of Armenia. This was on the Third of October, and on the Twelfth of December the Tops of the Mountains appeared. It was a welcome Sight to Noah, who, wifely confidering, that though the Tops of the Mountains were discoverable, the Vallies might still be overflowed, waited forty Days longer before he attempted any further Discovery; and then opening a Window of the Ark, he let fly a Raven, to try whether the Waters were dried up; but the Raven did not return. Seven Days after he, let fly a Dove, which finding no Place where to rest her Foot, returned to the Ark. Seven Days after, he sent her out again, and she returned with an Olive-Branch. By this, Noah knew that the Waters did not cover the Earth where the Olive-Trees stood. However, he Itaid seven Days longer, and then he let out the Dove the third Time, which did not return; whereupon Noah prepared to go out of the Ark, by uncovering the Roof of it. Yet having a pious Regard to God's Providence and Direction, as well in going forth, as in going in, he continued fifty five Days longer, that the Earth might be dry, and went out the twenty seventh Day of the second Month, and first of the Week. Thus there was a compleat Solar Year, from the Beginning of the Flood, to the Day when Noah and his Wife, their Sons and their Wives, came out of the Ark, with all the living Creatures that had gone into it. Then began the Month of May, when the Trees and the Plants bud and shoot out: And now Nature puts on her youthful vernal Dress again, all Things appear in their former Gaiety, and the Earth abundantly produces fresh Food for the Creatures preserved in the Ark; and all other Parts of the Creation contributed to the Use and Pleasure of Mankind, as before the Deliver

The Earth being thus prepared to receive Noah and his Family, he by God's express Command descends from the Ark, with the Creatures committed to his Charge; and being safely landed, the first Thing he did was to offer a Sacrifice of Thanksgiving to the Lord, who had preserved him and his Family from the Deluge to restore Mankind. In order to which he built an Altar, (it is likely on the Mountain where the Ark rested, and the first Altar we have Mention of) and taking of all the clean Birds and Beasts, he made a Burnt-Offering on the said Altar. The Sacrifice was acceptable to the Lord, and drew his Blessing on Men, on Beasts, and on the Earth itself: For God not only declared his Acceptance of Noah's Picty, but made a Covenant with him, (and in him with his Posterity) graciously promising, that he would not again curse the Ground for Man's Sake, (0) though the Imagination of his Heart was Evil, nor interrupt the Seaions any more.

The Order of Nature destroyed by the Flood being restored by God's Promise, he particularly blessed Noah and his Children, commanded them to multiply and fill the Earth, appointed Man Lord over all the Beasts

Affront to the Justice, Goodness, and Wildom of God, who, by this Translation of though for for, might seem to blets Man for his evil Imaginations.

⁽a) Though. This is commonly translated for, but very injuriously; for it makes the facred Author speak quite contrary to what he design'd, and is an

of the Earth, and the Fowls of the Air, and Fishes of the Sea: And whereas hitherto Men had lived upon (p) Vegetables, God having at first appointed Herbs and the Fruits of Trees for their Food; after the Flood their Fare was enlarged, and they were allowed to eat Flesh: Only he excepted Blood, and Meat strangled, from which the Blood had not been drawn, lest Men should grow savage, and, like Brutes, eat the Creatures alive; that is, Flesh with the Blood thereof. They were therefore first to take away the Life, by letting out the Blood, and then to dress and eat the Flesh. But at the same Time that he permitted them to kill all forts of Animals, he strictly charged them not to shed the Blood of Man, threatning those, whether Men or Beasts, that should shed it, with Vengeance. In short, God ratified the Promise he had made to Neab, not to destroy Men and Beasts any more by an universal Deluge; and to render it more solemn, confirmed it by a Covenant and Alliance between himself and Man, placing the (q) Rainbow as a Sign of it in the Sky. A Bow he set, an Instrument of Terror; but a Bow unstringed, a Bow with both Horns upon the Ground, a Bow hanging in the Clouds, not in his Hand, an Emblem of his Favour, that he would not suddenly shoot forth the Arrows of his Wrath, though never so justly provoked.

And now the whole Race of Cain being cut off by the Flood, it might reasonably have been expected, that the (r) new World would have been planted with

(q) Rainboro. The Joses, faith Maimonides, when they see the Rainbow, bless God for being mindful of his Covenant, and faithful in his Promise. Tho' this Covenant was not made only between him and their Nation, but with all the Inhabitants of the World, between him and the Earth, that he would not drown it with an universal Deluge.

(r) New. I call this the new World after the Flood, as St. Peter calls that before the Flood, the old World. See 2 Pet. ii. 5.

⁽p) Vegetabler. God at first was satisfied with appointing the Fruits and Herbs for the Food of Man, as being the more natural Sustenance; but did not by any positive Law firbid them the cating the Fiesh of Beasts. Though it is possible they might make use of it, and God after the Flood might authorize that Practice.

Book I.

better People: But as in the Ark there were unclean Beasts preserved, as well as clean; so in Noah's Family there was a wicked Cham, as well as a pious Shem and Japheth. For of the three Sons of Noah, who had been so wonderfully preserved with him in the Ark, to re-people the World, there was one of them, who having deserved the Curse of his Father, drew also the Curse of God upon himself; and instead of being the Head of a Holy Race, was the Father of so wicked a Posterity, as was to be the Object of God's Anger and Reprobation. And this was Cham and his Race; for the first Instance of Man's Impiety, after the Deluge, was that of Cham's discovering his Father's Nakedness, in a very rude and prophane Manner; which happened thus:

Noab having in a most devout and solemn Manner offered a Sacrifice of Praise to God, for his Preservation and Deliverance, received the Establishment of God's Covenant with him and his Posterity for a perpetual Security from another Deluge, and a Command to multiply and replenish the Earth, applied himself to Husbandry; and, amongst other Improvements which he made of the Ground, he planted a Vineyard. Natural Curiosity invited him to taste of the Fruit of his Labour, but not aware of the intoxicating Quality of the Wine, he drinking too freely of it fell into Drunkenness; during which he lay in a very indecent Posture, his Body being uncovered, in his Tent, and so exposed to the Eyes of his Children; Graceless Cham was the first that spied his Father in this Condition, who, instead of concealing his Weakness, betrays him to his Brethren, and made him the Subject of Ridicule and Derision. But Shem and Japheth abominating their Brother's ill Nature, and blushing to see their Father lying in this immodest Posture, took a Garment, and laid it upon their Shoulders, and so went backward and covered his Nakedness, upon which their pious Modesty did not allow them them to look. Noah being recovered from his Wine, and understanding how his younger Son Cham had served him, he cursed his Race in the Person of Canaan; "Cursed, said he, be (s) Canaan, a Servant of Servants shall he be to his Brethren." But when he found how regardful his other Sons had been in concealing his Shame, he rewards their pious Care with this Blessing: "(t) Blessed be the Lord of Shem, says he, God shall enlarge Japheth, and he shall dwell in the Tents of (u) Shem; and let Canaan be his Servant."

We have no Mention of any other Children Noah had, but these three Sons; from each of which descended a numerous Offspring, which afterwards peopled many Countries, and, in process of Time, the whole inhabited World. And now there was but one Language used and known among Men; who hitherto dwelt at the Foot of the Mountains of Armenia, not far, it is likely, from the Place where the Ark rested; where their Offspring multiplying by Degrees, they spread themselves into the neighbouring Countries, as Syria and Mesopotamia: And their Number still increasing, they took their Course Westward, till sinding an inviting Plain in the Land of (w) Sbinar, they set down in order to settle there.

of Ham, as well as himself; for Canaan was the Son of Ham. Gen. ix. 18.

Eber was Great Grandson, or the sourth from Shem: And from him both the People of Israel were called Ebrews, (or Hebrews) and the Language they spake was called the Hebrewo Tongue: So that from Shem came the Fews, besides many other People that inhabited Asia. This Part of the World, which is called Europe, is generally held to have been peopled by the Posterity of Japheth. And besides those Canaanites, and other People which anciently possesses, and other People which anciently possesses the Land of Canaan, the Egyptians, Ethiopians, and other Eastern and Southern Nations, are taken to be the descendants of Cham.

(70) Shinar. This is by some supposed to have been the Place where the Garden of. Eden was; but afterwards it was called Chaldea.

Effect; for the Worship of the true God continued in the Race of Shem, and the Posterity of Japheth possessed a vast Extent of Land, peopling all Europe, and Part of Asia; for which Reason it is said, He shall dwell in the Tents of Shem, that is, among the Progeny of the latter. A great Instance of the Reverence Children ought to bear towards their Parents, to cover their Faults, instead of exposing them, with the Blessing that attends the one, and the Curse that pursues the other.

⁽u) Shem. Shem is called the Father of all the Children of Eber, Genesis x. 21.

And now two unruly Passions, Ambition and Fear, began to possess the Minds of Men. They were desirous to perpetuate their Name, and no less afraid that they should be scattered abroad. To effect the one, and prevent the other, they agreed to build themselves a City, and a Tower of such extraordinary Height, that it is said, they design'd the Top thereof should reach to Heaven. The projected Height of this vast Structure hath been the Occasion of a Conjecture in some, that they not only intended it as a Monument of their Power, but as a Place of Refuge, in case of another Flood; which shewed their Diffidence of God's Veracity in keeping his Covenant made with them, that he would not bring a general Deluge over the Earth again. But whether Pride or Fear put them upon this Project, it's certain they undertook this vast Work, and being unanimous, they were not daunted at the Greatness of the Undertaking; but, in order to it, began to make (x) Brick, which they burnt, and, instead of Mortar, they made a (y) Cement of Bitumen or slimy Clay, of a pitchy Substance.

Thus they began, and for some Time proceeded in their intended Work; but God, who saw their Arrogance and Presumption, resolv'd to disappoint them, and shew them, that they were not out of the Reach of his Providence and Justice. The Almighty therefore looking on their Vanity with Indignation, expostulates thus with himself: "Behold, they are all one, and have but one Language, and this they begin to do; (z) Shall they not be restrained in all that ⁽x) Brick. Stone was very scarce in that Country, as Curtius observes; for being a Champaign Country, they had no Mines or Quarries.

⁽y) Cement. The Mortar they used was a sort of natural Calx, which they found in Springs or Rivers. And Herodosus observes, that the Walls of Babylon were built with Brick and Mortar. 1. 3.

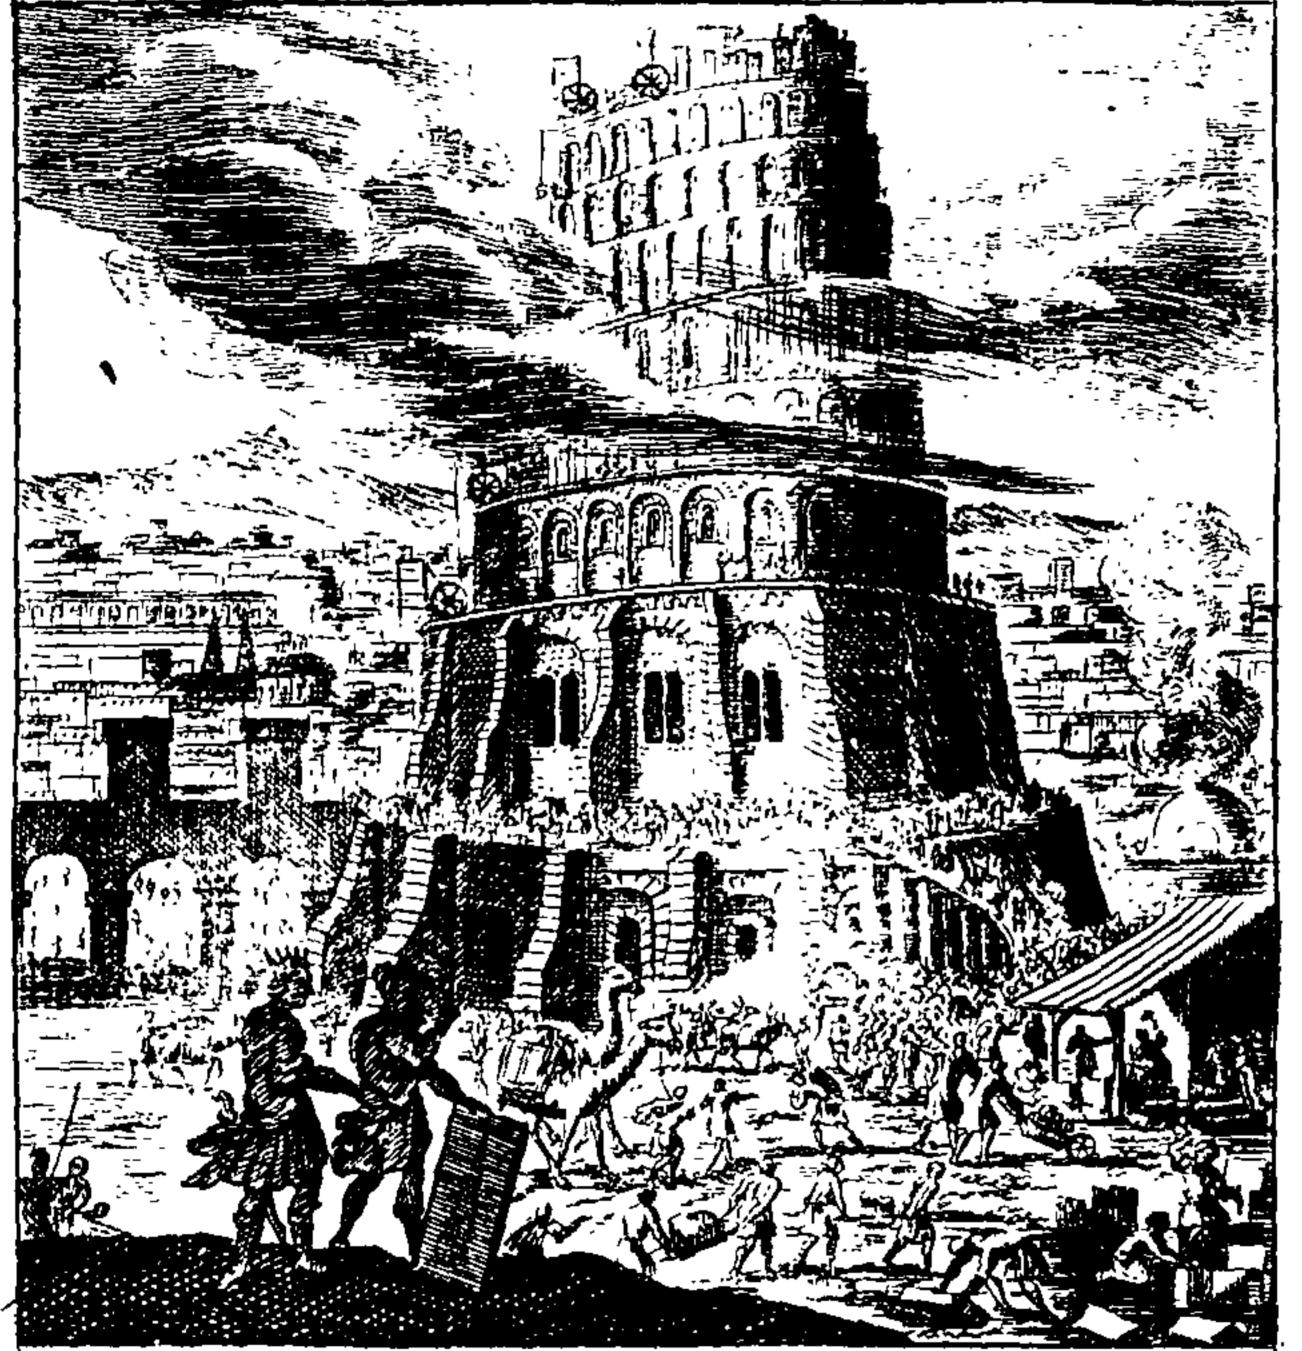

⁽²⁾ Shall, &c. Gen. xi. 6. The Versions say of the Builders of the Tower of Babel, And now nothing shall be restrained from them, which they have imagined to do. But this is salse, for God soon put a Stop to their Design by consounding them and scattering them abroad from thence upon the Face of the Earth. The same Particle, which is indeed sometimes

"that they have imagined to do? Yes; we will go " down and confound their Language, that they may one another." Thus the Great Creator took Counsel with his own Wisdom and Power, and which at the Expence of a Miracle, he immediately put in Execution; for he put a Stop to their Proceedings by confounding their Tongues, lo that they spake several Languages, and could not understand one another. Their confus'd Dialects produced different Ideas in the Minds of the Men of each Family, which, for want of understanding each other's Meaning, they applied to improper Objects. This put them into so great Disorder, that they were forced to give over building: And being hereby not only rendered incapable of carrying on their intended Work, and of conversing one with another; and by that Means depriv'd of the Comforts and Pleasures of mutual Society and Intercourse, they willingly parted and dispersed themselves; they who were of one Language one way, and those who were of another going another way. Not that there were as many several Languages as Persons; but the several Families (computed to be seventy) which afterwards grew into several Nations or People, had each a distinct and peculiar Language given them. Thus God, by scattering them abroad upon the Face of the Earth, at once both disappointed their Design, and answered his own; which was to re-people the Earth more generally and speedily, than it is probable they of themselves would otherwise have done. This confounding of Language gave Name to the City they had begun to build, which from thence was called Babel, signifying Confufion.

time taken negatively, is evidently here to be taken interrogatively, and is equal to the most express Assirmation. We should therefore translate this text, with the Flemish Rewisers and Leusden, thus; Shall they not be restrained in all that they bave imagined to do? Which was presently executed accordingly.

GENESIS CHAP.XI.
The building of Babel.

GENESIS W. Verse 4.

And They Said Go io lei us build us a City and a Towere whose top may reach unio heaven seid.

(a) Upon this Separation, the Race of Shem settled in Asia; those of Cham, Part in Asia, and Part in Africk; and the greater Part of those of Japheth in Europe. Now among those aspiring Builders of Babel was (b) Nimrod, a bold and pushing Man, and is by Moses called the mighty (c) Hunter before the Lord. It's certain he was a very barbarous and tyrannical Man, and laid the Foundation of the first great Empire in the World, which at first was called the Babylonian, from the City Babel, or Babylon, the Metropolis of it, from whence he going afterwards into Assyria, did there build the great City Nineveb; and from thence this Monarchy was afterwards called the Assyrian, the first of the four.

The Confusion of Tongues, and Dispersion of the Family of Noah, sell out an hundred and one Years after the Flood; for Peleg the Son of Eber, who was Great Grandson to Shem, is reckoned to have been born in the hundredth and sirst Year after the Flood, and had his Name [Peleg] given him for that Divisi-

(a) Upon, &c. Moses, Gen. chap. x. and xii. particularly sets down the Nations descended from Noah, his Son, Grandsons, and Great Grandchildien. The Names of most of those Nations being changed, many of them cannot certainly be known; but there are some still remaining, The Names of the Sons of Shem, as Elam, Affur, Arphaxad, Lud and Aram, are known in History, where we find the Elamites, the Affyrians, the Arphaxadites, the Lydians, and the Aramites. The Name of Chus, the Son of Cham, is given in Scripture to the Egyptians and the Arabs; the Names of most of their Children agreeing with most of the Nations of Arabia.

(b) Nimrod. The Word signifies Rebel; which Name is no otherwise proper to him, than as a Contemner or Despiser of God; and not because he was cruel, or an Oppressor, as some will have it.

(c) Hunter, &c. As to the Character of Nimrod, Commentators and Versions do very much vary. Some will have some to be literally, as the Words imply, a great Hunter; Which in those Days was esteem'd an honourable and useful Imployment; and the Country of Babylon and Arabia abounding very much with wild Beasts, Nimrod by hunting destroyed many of them; for which he became famous. And others fay, under pretence of gathering a Company of young lufty Fellows together to subdue wild Beasts, he came to usurp Government over Men. This is plausible, and not amis from the Text. As to the Words, before the Lord, some will have it that he was a mighty Tyrant and Perfecutor in Religion in the Face of God, before whom he erected a new fort of Worship. As to his being mighty in the Earth, the Versions vary: The Septuagint say, Gen, x.S. He roas a Grant; not only, fays St. Augustine, for his Strength and Bigness, but for his Ambition and Cruelty against the Lord, being the first that compelled the People, whom he had fubdued, after the Dispersion of Babel, to worship Fire in Chaldea.

on of the Earth, which in his Time was parted amongst Noab's Posterity.

And now Almighty God having disappointed vain Mankind in raising an everlasting Monument of their Folly, and by so wide a Separation put it out of their Power of ever attempting the like again, began to lay the Foundation of an Holy City, that is, his Church, and design'd Abram to be Head of a Race, Elect and Faithful, which should endure for ever. And herein it is to be observed, that Moses in his Relation chooses rather to write the Genealogy of Thare or Terah, than of the other Descendants of Shem; because Terah was the Father of Abram, afterwards named Abraham, who was called by the Lord to be the Father of the Faithful, and of the Worshippers of the true God; for his Father Terah served other Gods, as we may see in Joshua xxiv. 2.

This Terab had three Sons, Haran, Nahor, and Abram; for that is the order of their Births. Haran, who was much elder than his Brethren, (d) dying before his Father, left one Son named Lot, and two Daughters; whereof one was named Milcab, and the other Iscab, both married to their Uncles; Milcab to Nahor, and Iscab to Abram, as the Jews deliver, who will have her to be called Sarai for her Beauty and House-

After the Death of Haran, Terab took his Son Abram, his Grandson Lot, and Sarai, and carried them from Ur to the Land of Canaan; but in their Way coming to Haran, (which St. Stephen calls Charran) they took up their Abode there for a while; during which time Terab died, being an (e) hundred and forty ⁽d) Dying. It is remarkable in the Death of Haran, that he was the first Son that in a natural Way died before his Father; but as they were born first, they died first; the Father before the Son. Abel's Death cannot be objected against this, because it was violent and unnatural.

⁽e) Hundred, &c. St. Stephen says, that Abraham, after the Death of his Father, removed from Charran to the Land of Canaan, Asts viii. 4. and Genesis xii. 5. it is said, that Abraham was seventy and five Years old when he departed out of Charran; and Genesis xi. 26. it is said, that Terah five Years old. After the Death of Terab, God commanded Abram to leave this Country, and to go into the Country he would shew him. He promised a mighty People should descend from him, to bless him, and in him to bless all the Nations of the Earth. Abram, without any Hesitation, believes God's Word, which promised him two such great Advantages, as making him Head of a great People, and blessing all the World in him who was to proceed from his Loins.

Abram prepares for his Journey, taking his whole Family, and that of his Nephew Lot, to go to the Land which God should shew him, who did not appoint any certain Place, to prove thereby his Faith and Obedience; which he manifestly shewed in his ready Compliance with God's Command. Accordingly Abram set out, and pursued his Journey till he came into the Land of Canaan, (which was the Country God had directed him to) to that Part which is called the (f) Oak of Moreb. Having passed through Terab was seventy Years old when he begat Abraham; and ver. 32. that he died being two hundred and five Years old. But at this rate, Terab must have lived fixty Years after Abraham's going from Charran: For seventy five, the Number of Abraham's Years when he left Cb an, being added to feventy, the Number: Terab's Years when he begat Abraham, make one hundred forty and five Years only; whereas 'tis said, Gen. xi. 32. that he lived two hundred and five. But this must certainly proceed from a Fault crept into the Text of Moses; and that of the two hundred and five Years, which are given to Terab, when he died at Charran, he only lived an hundred forty and five, according to the Samaritan Version and the Samarisan Chronicle, which without doubt do agree with the Hebrew Copy, from which they were translated. This Error has been overlooked by all or most Commentators and Writers upon the Holy Scriptures, even our most modern Chronologers and others, except the Author of

An Essay for a new Translation of the Bible.

(f) Oak. The Chaldee Paraphrase and most Rabbies transform into a Plain the Oak of Moreh, at which God appeared to Abram, Gen. xii. 6. and most Versions, except the vulgar Latin, transform this Oak into a Valley; and if we were to give it another Signification, we must rather make it fignify a Valley than a Plain; because Sychem was situated in the Valley of Aulon. so called from the Word Elon, which fignifies an Oak. 'Twas under this Oak that Jacob hid the strange Gods which his Servants kept, and the Ear-rings; and 'twas likewife under it that Deborab, Rebecca's Nurse, was buried, Gen. xxxv. 4, 8. 'Twas also under it that Joshua set up a great Stone, Jostona xxiv. 26. and that Abimelech was made King, Judges ix. 6. where our Tranflators render it Plain, But here in Gen. xii. 6. the Septuagint render it High Oak. But more of this in our Note on the same Word, when we speak of the Oak of Mamre a little farther.

some Parts of the Land, the Lord appeared again to him, and gave him a Promise of it to his Posterity, long before he had any Issue, and whilst it was posses'd by other People; for the Canaanites then inhabited it. However, Abram, to shew his Faith and Gratitude, erected an Altar in that Place to the Lord, who had appeared to him, and made him so gracious a Promise. Going thence to a Mountain, which is on the East of Bethel, he there pitched his Tent between Bethel and Hai: And there he raised an Altar unto the Lord and called upon his Name. But he had not stay'd long in Canaan, before he was forced to remove; for a Famine happening in that Country, he was obliged to go into Egypt; which lying near to that Part of Canaan where he had settled, and being a fruitful Country, he determin'd to travel thither, and stay there for some

Whilst they were upon the Confines of Egypt, he had, no doubt, observ'd the Difference in point of Beauty between his own Wife and the Egyptian Women; which soon possessed him with a Jealousy, that his Wife's Beauty might indanger his Safety; concluding, that so fair a Woman, and so far excelling the Women of that Country, would soon be taken notice of, and as soon desired. And because the World was not then grown to that Height of Dissoluteness, as lightly to invade the Marriage-Bed, Nuptial Ties being held too sacred to be violated, his Fear suggested to this Apprehension, that if they took Sarai to be his Wife, they would make him away, that they might come to the Injoyment of her without the Imputation of Adultery; a Crime imputed even in that Martial Age more heinous than Murder. To prevent this Danger he open'd his mind to his Wife; and laying the Cause of his Fears upon her Beauty, he begg'd her to say she was his Sister, that she might not be taken for his Wife; by which Means he might not only escape the Apprehended Danger, but might also fare Abram's the better for her sake...

Abram's Fears and Apprehensions were not groundless: For no sooner was he come into Egypt, but his Wife's Charms inflam'd the Egyptians. Her Beauty was the common Theme of their Praises, which at last reached the Court, where those nearest the King acquainted him with this celebrated Beauty. These Encomiums rais'd in the King a Curiosity to see this beautiful Stranger, who is immediately brought to Court; and taken into the King's Apartment; and Abram calling her Sister, is very well treated for her Sake, the King bestowing many great Presents on him. Here was a great Instance of the Watchfulness of Providence in the Preservation of the Patriarch's Honour, and his Wife's Chastity, that would not suffer their Marriage-Bed to be defiled: For to deter Pharaoh and his Court from any dishonourable Attempt upon Sarai's Virtue, God, by inflicting some sudden Sickness or bodily Infirmity on them, restrain'd their unlawful Desires, and made them sensible she was a married Woman. The King took the Hint, and calling for Abram blam'd him for deceiving him, which mignt have led him into a fatal Error; and not knowing her to be a married Woman, might have taken her to his own Bed. Then in great Displeasure he bids him take his Wife, and be gone, and commands his Servants neither to injure him in his Person, or his Goods, but permit him to remove quietly with all his Substance; which was much improved, during his Stay in Egypt, by the Favour of the King, for he was very rich in Cattle, in Silver and Gold.

Hitherto his Nephew Lot continued with him, whose Stock increased proportionably with his Uncle Abram's. They leaving Egypt, make towards Canaan again, and arrive at Bethel, the Place where Abram had made an Altar to the Lord before he went into Egypt, and there he worshipped God again.

And now their Families growing large, and their Flocks increasing, they began to labour again under a Vol. I.

Scarcity

Scarcity of Food for their Cattle; which might probably proceed partly from the late Famine there, and partly from the great Number of the Canaanites and Perizzites that possessed the most fruitful Part of the Country. This Scarcity of Provisions and Pasturage caused some little Quarrels between rhe Herdsmen of Abram, and those of Lot, which gave Abram some Uneasiness; who searing that this Contention among the Servants, if not timely suppress'd, might rise higher, to the indangering of a Breach betwixt his Kinsman and him, took an Opportunity to speak with his Nephew Lot about it; and in soft and mild Terms said to him, Let there be no Dispute between us, nor our Servants; for we are (g) Brethren. Abram therefore, to prevent the worst, wisely proposes parting, seeing it scarcely probable, that since their Substance was grown so great, they should with the same Conveniency and Accommodation dwell any longer together. And though Abram was in all Respects a greater and better Man than Lot, yet to shew his Prudence, not Meanness of Spirit, he condescends to give his Coufin Lot his Choice of Settlement in what Part of the Land he liked best, and himself would take what he refused. Lot readily closed with this advantageous Proposal, for having before survey'd the Country, he chose for himself all the Plain of Jordan, which he had observed to be very fertile, and very well water'd. Thus having parted by Agreement, Lot directs his Course Eastward, and settles in the Plain of Jordan, pitching his Tent towards Sodom: The Inhabitants of which Place exceeded in that Age the worst of Sinners. Let being thus gone, Abram stay'd still in the Land of Canaan, where God renewed to him common Root, though not in a direct Line begotten by one and the same Father. In which Respect these were Brethren in a natural Relation, as with Rethe Gift of that Land, and to his Seed for ever. This very Gift, as penn'd by the Direction of God himfelf, stands involled in the facred Record thus: "Lift up now thine Eyes, and look from the Place where thou art, Northward, Southward, Eastward, and "Westward; for all the Land which thou seest will "I give unto thee, and to thy Seed for ever: And I "will make thy Seed as the Dust of the Earth; so that if a Man can number the Dust of the Earth, "then shall thy Seed be numbered. Arise, walk thro" the Land in the Length and Breadth thereof; for I give it unto thee." Hereupon Abram removing his Tent, went and dwelt at the (b) Oak of Mamre, which is in Hebron; and there he built an Altar unto the Lord.

In a short Time after happened that memorable Battle fought by four Kings against five, the first pitched Battle we have any Account of in sacred History. The Occasion of which was this; Chedorlaomer, King of Elam, had held five petty Kings in a tributary Subjection to him for some Years; of which Number the King of Sodom was one. At length they confederated against him: Whereupon he, with three other Kings, made War upon them to reduce them to their former Subjection. The tributary Kings resolve to try their Fate in a pitch'd Battle, and are deseated. The Vale of Siddim, where the Battle was sought, had in it many Pits, out of which had been digged Slime (a kind of clammy Earth, called Bitumen, very good to make Mortar with) and here the Kings of Sodom

(b) Oak. Translators have been guilty of the same Fault, in rendering the Oak of Moreb, as here in rendering the Plain of Moreb, as here in rendering the Oak of Mamre the Plain of Mamre. Sc≈omen writes, that this Oak was still samous in the Time of Constantine for Pilgrimages, and for the anniversary Feast which was solemnized there: That it was distant from Hebron but six Miles, where there were still to be seen some Cottages which Abraham had built near to that Oak, and a Well which he had digged; and whither the Jews, Pagans, and Christians, travelled every Year, either out of Devotion, or a Defign to trade. Brochard affures us, that he had seen this Oak, and had carried home some of the Fruit and Wood of it; and he observes, that its Leaves are somewhat larger than those of the Mastich-Tree, but that its Fruit resembles an Acorn.

and Gomorrab, in their Flight, are said to have fallen. But whether being pursued among those Pits, they were overtaken and slain, or whether taking Shelter there, they hid and secured themselves till the Pursuit was over, is not express'd. However, after the Rout, the Conquerors plunder'd the Cities of Sodom and Gomorrab, carried away all the Goods and Provisions, and made the Inhabitants Prisoners: Amongst whom was Abram's Nephew Lot, who by this Time was become an Inhabitant of Sodom, though upon his parting with his Uncle, we left him only pitching his Tent towards Sodom; but now he was gone to dwell in Sodom, and with the Sodomites was taken Prisoner.

But some made their Escape; one of which came and brought the News of this Defeat to Abram, who remained still near the Oak that belonged to Mamre, with his two Brothers, Eschol and Amer, who were in Confederacy with him. Abram in haste musters up what Force he could to rescue his Kinsman; and chusing amongst his own Servants such as were fit to bear Arms, to the Number of Three hundred and eighteen, accompanied with his (i) Confederates, he pursues the Enemy as far as Dan. The Night favouring his Design, he divides his Forces into small Parties, and attacks them on all Sides. The Unexpectedness of this sudden Attempt upon a victorious Army laden with Spoil, and the Midnight Alarm, struck them with such Horror and Amazement, that Abram obtained a fudden and easy Victory. Chedorlaomer, and the Kings that were with him, fell in the Action, and their whole Army was routed, which they drove as far as Hoba, which is on the Left of Damascus. Thus Abram rescued his Nephew Lot, and all the Prisoners, and retook all the Booty.

⁽i) Confederates. See Gen, xiv, 13, and v. 24.

GENESIS CHAP.XIV. Melchizedek gives presents to Abram.

GENESIS 14. Verse 18.

And Molechizedek king of Natem brought forth broad and wine and he was the priest of the most kings GOD, cic.

The first that congratulated him upon his Victory was the King of (k) Sodom, who, in thankful Acknowledgment of the Benefit he had received from Abram's Assistance and Courage, offered him the Goods which he had retaken, desiring him only to restore the Prisoners. Abram was not so fordid as to take the Advantage of the Misery of War; for saving to his Confederates that Part of the Plunder which by the Rules of War belonged to them, he restored to the King of Sodom both the Prisoners and the Goods, having before resolved not to keep any thing of them, that it might be said he undertook that Enterprize for the publick Good, which all Men of Honour and Piety ought to Support.

The next that congratulated Abram upon his Success was (1) Melchizedeck, King of Salem, who, meet-

(k) Sodom. By this it seems, Gen. xiv. v. 17. the King of Sodom was not sain at the Battle of the Kings aforesaid. For the Text saying only that the King of Sodom came out to meet him, it may reasonably be supposed he came from some Place where he had hid himself, or from Sodom, whither, after the Conqueror had withdrawn, he might return.

(1) Melchizedeck. There have been, and yet are, great Disputes among the Learned, who this Melchizedeck was, and where this City Salem Rood. And that which still hath aggravated the Difference, is the Description of him in Heb. vii. 3. where it is faid, That Melchizedeck quas without Father, without Mother, without Descent, bawing neither Beginning of Days, nor End of Life. These Words have occationed many wild and whimfical Speculations. But among all the Opinions about him, that of Epiphanius, and others, as to his Person, is very probable; who think that he was a Sidonian, which they seem to take from Josephus, who calls him a Prince of the Canaanites. But we may observe, that the Apossle does not describe him by those Qualities with respect to his Person, but to his Office or Dignity of Priesthood, which made him like Jesus Christ: And on that Account it's enough that his Genealogy, Birth, and Death, are not recorded in Scripture, to justify this Description, as several have observed. But since it is usual in the best Authors to describe Famous Nations and Persons, as if they were the first of their Order, and as if they had produced themselves, it is more natural to have Recourse to this Custom. History speaks of several People who had no Original a The Italians about Rome were called Aborigines, the Athenians called themselves Autochthones: And Seneca speaking of two Kings of the Romans, Ancus and Servius, Says, The first had no Father, and the second no Mother. After all, to come the nearest to the Light we can; If it be true that Melchizedeck was descended of wicked and idolatrous Parents, as most of the Fathers think, and that he was the first and last Priest of the True God, of his Race, the Apostle might in the Epistic to the Hebrews very well describe him under those Characters in Ver. 3. And fince our Language is not so metaphorical as the dead Languages, we should follow in a popular Version the Meaning which we have observed, and translate with Outram this Text. Heb. vii. 3. That Melchizedeck rvas the most illustrious of his Family, and bad neither Predecessor nor Successor in bis Employ. Which Version is very natural, and expresses fully the Sense of the Words of the Original.

Ing him in his Return from the Battle, brought him a Present of Bread and Wine, to refresh him and his Men upon their March; and both blessed Abram, and God too, that had given him good Success. In Requital of which Kindness, Abram made him a Present of the tenth Part of the Spoils that he had taken in that Expedition.

Notwithstanding this Victory over these Kings, A-bram considering himself but as a Stranger in that Country, might be apprehensive that the Babylonians, whom he had lately deseated, to repair their Loss, might meditate a Revenge; therefore to take off any Anxiety of Mind that might proceed from temporal Causes, God encourages him, saying, Fear not, Abram, for I am thy Shield, and thy exceeding great Reward.

Tho' this Providential Care of the Almighty was an opportune Hint to Abram, to put him in Mind of the Promise he gave him, that his Issue should inherit the Land; yet he had not been pleased hitherto to bestow any Heir upon him; but that his Servant was like to inherit his Estate. Whereupon God, to satisfy him, tells him, That not his Servant, but one that should come out of his own Bowels should be his Heir, and that he should not only have an Heir of his own Body, but a numerous Offspring, like the Stars of Heaven for Number. But Abram desiring some Assurance for these Things, God gratisied him in making a Covenant with him by express Promise, attended with a very solemn Ceremony after this Manner: Take (saith God) an Heifer of three Years old, and a She-Goat of three Years old, and a Ram of three Years old, and a Turtle-Dove, and a young Pigeon. Abram obey'd, and dividing the Beasts, but not the Birds, he laid each Piece one against the other; and when the Fowls came down upon the Carcasses, he drove them away. About Sun-set a deep Sleep seiz'd Abram, which afsected him with Horror. But God spoke to him, saying, "Know for certain, that thy Seed shall be a "Stranger

"Stranger in a Land that is not theirs, and shall serve them, who shall afflict them Four hundred Years: But that Nation which shall afflict them will I judge; and afterwards they shall come forth with great Substance. And thou shalt go to thy Father in Peace; thou shalt be buried in a good old Age. But in the fourth Generation they shall come hither again: For the Iniquity of the Amorites is not yet sull." And for a similar Demonstration how this should come to pass, the Lord caused two Emblems of all this to appear; first a Smoaking Furnace (a plain Representation of the heavy Sufferings his Seed should undergo in Egypt) and a Lamp of Fire (a lively Emblem of their Deliverance after the Expiration of their Four hundred Years Servitude:) (m) These passed between the divided Pieces of Flesh.

Sarai having for about ten Years expected a Performance of God's Promise, and judging according to the Course of Nature, that her Husband's Issue must proceed from some other, and not from her Body, now despairing of her own Conception, partly from her own great Age, which was seventy-sive, and partly from a Sense she had that God had restrained her from Bearing, (n) prevailed with her Husband to take her Handmaid (o) Hagar to be his (p) Concubinary Wise, pleasing herself with the Thought, that if her Maid should conceive by her Husband, it would be a Means of building up her and her House, in the compleating of the Divine Promise.

(m) Gen. xv.

(n) Prevailed. This shews the singular Chastity of Abram, Gen. xvi. 2. who could not without the Importunity of his Wife be persuaded to take their Servant to his Bed.

(o) Hagar. She is supposed by St. Chryfilom to have been given by Pharaob to ribram, whilst he sojourned in Egypt, and was, by the pious Example of her Master and Mistress, converted to the true Faith, and Worship of the true God.

(p) Concubinary. In Concubinage those Secondary or Half-Wives, were accounted lawful and true Wives, and their Issue reputed legitimate, and they had a lawful Right to the Marriage-Bed, and might justly claim the Privilege thereof, as well as the chief Wife: Yet in all other respects they were inferior to her. And as they had no Authority in the Family, nor Share in Houshold-Government; so if they had been Servants in the Family before they came to be Concubines, they continued to be so afterwards, and in the same Subjection to their Mistress as before.

Hagar soon conceived by her Master Abram; and forgetting her former Condition of a Slave, values herself upon her Conception, and treats her Mistress with ill Manners and Contempt. Sarai, who had been the Cause of this Egyptian's Advancement, is stung to the Quick at her scornful Carriage, which not being able to bear, she complains to her Husband; hinting as if Hagar durst not have been so sawcy to her without some Encouragement from him, and expostulates with him very sharply about the Matter. But Abram, to let his Wife Sarai see that he would not countenance her in any disrespectful Carriage towards her, delivers Hagar into her Power as her Mistress, bidding her do as she pleased with her. Sarai, no Doubt, shewed her Resentment in some Severity, which we find not particularly express'd: However, it was such, it seems, as Hagar's proud Mind could not bear; for she ran away immediately, making the best of her Way to her own Country, which was Egypt. As she travelled through the Defart Country, finding a Fountain of Water, she tarried to rest and refresh herself, Here the Angel of the Lord found her, who in his first Address, to put her in Mind of her Relation and Duty, gave her the Appellation of Sarai's Maid, plainly denoting that her Advancement to her Master's Bed had not exempted her from her Mistress's Service. Then expostulating with her about her intended Journey, Whither she would go? She told him she sled from her Mistress. The Angel inquired no further; but bid her return to her Mistress, and submit herself to her. And the more to persuade her to a Thing so much against her Inclination, he told her that God would (4) multiply her Seed exceedingly, so that it should not be number'd; and to convince her that he was a Messenger sent on purpose from God to take Care of her, he told her that which none else could tell her, namely, that she was with Child, and should bear a

Son, giving her a particular Charge about the Name

she should give him, which was Ishmael.

Hagar, as has been before noted, having been brought up in Abram's Family, was no Doubt instructed in the Knowledge and Fear of the true God, which is plain from her acknowledging that it was God that had visited her: And the Fountain also, at which the Angel found her, was called Beer-labai-roi, that is, The Well of him that liveth and seeth me. And now being in so extraordinary a Manner comforted and admonished, she returned to her Mistress, and being upon her Submission received, she in due Time was deliver'd of a Son, whom, according to the Angel's Direction, Abram called Ishmael.

At the Birth of this Child Abram was eighty and six Years old; and lest he in the Excess of Joy should mistake this Child for the Heir of those great Promises God had before made to him, for a further Trial of his Faith and Obedience, deferred yet thirteenYears longer before that Blessing which should befall him; for in the Ninety ninth Year of Abram God appeared to him again, and said, "I am the Almighty God; walk before me, be thou perfect, and I will make my Covenant between me and thee, and will multiply thee "exceedingly." Abram in humble Reverence falling on his Face, God talked farther with him, and, for a further Confirmation of his Faith, told him he should be a Father of many Nations, changing his Name from (r) Abram to Abraham. At the same Fime did God in-Litute Circumcision, as a Seal of the Covenant he now had made with Abraham, commanding that every Male Child of eight Days old, whether born in the House, or bought with Money, should be circumcised in the Foreskin of his Flesh, upon Pain of being cut off from his People. Whereupon Abraham and Ishmael, and

Twelve Tribes, but the Ishmaclites, the Edomites, and all the Posterity of Keturab, descending from him.

⁽r) Abram. This Name imported a high Father, but his new Name Abrabam signifies a Father of a great Multisude: As indeed he was; not only the

all the Men of his Family, were circumcifed the same Day. And as God had changed Abram's Name to that of Abraham, so did he at the same Time change his Wife's Name from (s) Sarai to Sarab. The Difference in Sound is but little, but great in Meaning. And now at the changing of their Names did God promise a Son to Abram by his Wife Sarah. I will bless her (said he) and give thee a Son also of her. This was joyful News to Abraham indeed, who did not in the least question the Performance of it; but considering that he was at this present a real Father in Ishmael, the natural Affection he bore to him as his First-begotten, and Fear that upon the Birth of another he might be deprived of him, made him break forth into this earnest Supplication, O that Ishmael might live before thee! God foon dispels these Anxieties of Abraham; and to take off his Fondness of advancing Ishmael to any Share in the Covenant, assures him that Sarah should bear him a Son, whose Name he should call Isaac, promissing him to establish his Covenant with him for ever, and with his Seed after him. And at the same Time, that he might not seem wholly to reject Abrabam's Request for Ishmael, he adds, As for Ishmael, I have heard thy Prayer, and have blessed him; he shall be fruitful, and multiply so exceedingly, that he shall beget twelve Princes, and I will make him a great Nation. And to take off any further Doubt or Scruple of the Performance of these Promises, God appoints a set Time, telling him that Sarah should bring forth a Son, the (t) next Year. And to assure him further of it, in a short Time after this God appears to him in another Manner, to confirm him in the Truth of what he had told him: For as Abraham one Day sat in his Tent-Door, in the Oak-Grove he espied three Persons, whom he took for Men, coming towards him; whereupon, rising from his Seat, he went to meet them, and after the Custom of the Country, saluted them by bowing himself to the Ground. And still supposing them to be Men, he is very importunate with them to stay, and take a Repast with him. They readily consented, and he immediately gives Order for an Entertainment, which was accordingly ferved in, and himfelf waited at the Table, which was under the Covert of a fine shady Oak. During their seeming Refreshment, one of them asked him where his Wife was; and Abraham telling him she was in the Tent, he said, I will certainly return to thee according to the Time that Women usually go with Child, and Sarah thy Wife shall have a Son. By which Abraham once more was assured that this Visit was from Heaven, and that one of them represented God himself. Sarab overheard all that passed in this Conversation; and considering her own and Husband's great Age, she could not believe what was said, having still a greater Regard to the Order of Nature than God's Promise, but laughed within herfelf at the Improbability of the Matter. For which being reproved by one of their heavenly Guests, tho' The knew herself guilty, she denied that she laughed. But the Lord positively fix'd it upon her, telling her, Nay, but thou didst (u) laugh.

Upon this the Conversation ceased, and the Company breaking up prepared to be gone, having first asfured Abraham of God's Return at the promited Time; and he understanding they design'd for Sodom, would needs wait on them, and bring them on their Way. As they walked, God was pleased to give a singular Instance of his Favour to Abraham, in acquainting him

(u) Laugh. This shows how piercing dulity, and was not an Act of Scossing or Contempt. And yet there is a great Difference between Abraham's Laughing and Sarah's Laughing, the' much uson the same Occasion: For Abraham, when the Promise of a Son by Sarab was made to him, Gen. xvii. 17. laughed for Joy, and was not reproved.

the Eye of Providence is, from which no Secret can be hid. She thought none could discover her Inclinations or inward Actions; and because she did not laugh outwardly, she therefore persisted in the Denial. Her only Excuse could be, that her Laughter proceeded from her Increwith his Purpose concerning Sodom; which gracious Act was grounded upon the Assurance he had, that Abraham would (w) command not only his Children, but his Houshold after him, to keep the Way of the Lord, to do Justice and Judgment. Upon which God acquaints him with his Design to (x) destroy Sodom, which whilst he was doing, the two Angels left them, and went towards Sodom; but Abraham remained communing with the Lord, and interceding for that wicked City, which this great Condescension of the Lord, in communicating his Purpose to Abraham, gave him Opportunity to do. He therefore taking for granted that God, the Judge of all the Earth, must do right, proceeded to mediate for Sodom in fix petitionary Propositions, lessening the Number from sifty to ten; that in case there were but ten just Persons in Sodom, he would not destroy it for their Sake. This God at Abraham's Intreaty was graciously pleased to grant; and so left Abraham to return Home.

The other two Guests, who come along with them from Abraham's Tent, (and who were indeed Ministring-Angels, that God had (y) appointed to execute Judgment upon the wicked Sodomites) held on their Course towards the City, where they arrived in the Evening. Lot, who sat in the Gate of the City, seeing them, went to meet them, and having saluted them invited them to his House to refresh and repose themselves that Night; which they at first declined, but by his Importunity were prevailed upon to accept.

(x) Destroy. Here is another great Inflance of God's Patience, who, tho' he knew all without Inquiry, yet would not condemn even the most stagitious without due Examination and Trial. Before the Flood God proceeded against the old World upon ocular Evidence: Ged save that the Wickedness of Man was great, Gen. vi. 5. & 12. So also at the Building of Babel it is said, The Lord came down to see the City and the Tower, which

And now again, before the Destruction of Sodom, the Cry against Sodom and Gomorrab was great, because of the Grievousness of their Sin, yet the Lord would not proceed against them upon Generals; or upon common Fame, but I will go down, saith the Lord, and see whether thy have done altegether according to the Cry of it; and if not, I will know, Gen. xviii. 21.

GENESIS CHAPXIX. Lot Journeying to Zoar

GENESIS 19. Verse 26.

But his wife looked back from behind him, and she became a Pillar of falt.

During their Entertainment, the Men of Sodom in a very mutinous and riotous Manner encompassed the House, and commanded Lot to bring forth his new Guests, that they might (z) know them. Lot thinking by mild and quiet Words to appeale his unreasonable Neighbours, steps out of the Door, and shutting it after him, intreats them not to offer any Affront to his Guests: And so great was his Concern for their Safety, that he made an unwary and unwarrantable Offer to the Sodomites, to bring out his two Virgin Daughters to them, to do with them as they pleased, rather than they should abuse his Guests: Which, tho an Error in the good Man, yet shews how sacred the Laws of Hospitality were then held among the virtuous. But the Sodomites naturally wicked, and in order to their Destruction grown very harden'd, scorn'd to be directed by him, who was but a late Inhabitant among them, and threatened to deal worse with him than with his Guests; and pressing hard upon Lot, they intended to force the Door. The heavenly Guests seeing Lot so put to it, engag'd in the Quarrel; and pull'd him into the House, and struck these unnatural Monsters with a Blindness, which so puzzled them that they could not find the Door: Which when they had shut again, they inquired of Lot what Family he had; and letting him know that the Destruction of that Place was now determined, and that God had sent them to destroy it, they bid him take all his Family and Relations, with whatsoever he had in that Place, and bring them out.

Upon this Admonition Lot went out, and spake to those that were to (a) marry his Daughters, and advised the Practifers thereof are called Sodomites both in Holy Scripture, (1-Kings xiv. 24. & xv. 12. 2 Kings xxiii. 7.) and our English Laws, which (as did the Law of God of old) do yet make the Punishment of Death.

⁽²⁾ Know them. That is, abuse them in that unnatural and filthy Manner which was afterwards expressly forbidden in the Law, Levit. xviii. 22. and thereby made capital, ch. xx. 13. Which vile Sin continued among the Gentiles even to the Apostles Time, (as may be gathered from Rom. i. 27. and 1 Cor. vi. 9.) and was so generally practised amongst the People of Sodom, that from thence it took the Name Sodomy, and them to go with him to avoid the common Destruction: But to little Purpose; for they look'd upon all he faid as a Jest. By this Time the Night was far spent; and as foon as the Day began to break, the Angels hasten'd Lot to be gone, saying, Arise, take thy Wife and thy two Daughters, lest ye be destroyed in the Iniquity of the City. Lot was still for delaying, hoping the Fate of this wretched People might be reversed. But in vain; instead of ten righteous that Abraham capitulated for, but four, and they of Lot's Family (including himself) were thought worthy to escape the dreadful Judgment designed for this Place. The Angels therefore seeing Lot's Lingering, took him, his Wife and Daughters, by Force, and brought them out of the City, bidding them hasten for their Lives, and charging them not to look behind them, nor make any Stop in the Plain, but to escape to the Mountain, lest they shared in the common Fate. Lot looking forward, and seeing the Mountain was far distant, intreated the Angels that he might be excused from flying so far, and be permitted only to go to a little City hard by, which was then called (a) Bela. They granted his Request, and that City being saved for his Sake, he was commanded to hasten thither; for, said the Angel, I (b) will not do any Thing towards the Destruction of Sodom and the other Cities till thou be secured.

absolute Impossibility to do any Thing, but only a Defign or Will not to do it. or a Repugnancy to the doing of it. But yet it is certain, that Christ, if he had pleased, could have wrought Miracles in Nazareth, and that God too could have destroyed Sodom independently of Lot: And all this Impotency is to be attributed to the Want of Will. And therefore fince People are so apt to take these Places literally, it is proper they should be rendered, They would not, and not, They could not; the last of which is an ambiguous Expression, and naturally gives us an Idea which is contrary to the Design of the sacred Writers.

⁽a) Bela. This Bela was the Seat of one of those five Kings, who fought the first Battle with the four Kings, and were beaten in the Vale of Siddim, Gen. xiv. 2.

⁽b) Will not. Translators often give Occasion, especially to the Unlearned, for whom they are chiefly designed, to imagine that Jesus had not Power enough to work Miracles in Nazareth, Mark vi. 5. John xii. 39, &c. and here in this Text (not to mention many others) where 'tis said, That God could not do any Thing to Sodom till Lot had left it. Tho' Commentators and Preachers have not sailed to observe that this Expression does not always denote an

The Injunction laid on Lot, his Wife, and Daughters, upon their Escape was, That they should not look behind them, nor tarry in the Plain, but hasten to the Mountain. Yet before Lot could reach the little City of Bela, which was afterwards called Zoar, his Wife, either forgetting what the Angel had said, or out of Love to the Place of her Habitation, looked back, and became a Pillar of (c) Metallick Salt, a lasting Monument of God's Vengeance on obstinate and unbelieving Offenders.

Lot's Wife being thus made a dreadful Example of Fondness to what God had forbidden, he with his Daughters proceeds in his Flight to Zoar, where he arrived by Sun-rise. And now being out of Danger, God prepares his Judgments against Sodom and Gomorrab, and the rest of the sinful Cities of the Plain: The angry Heavens pour down Showers of liquid Fire, which in an Instant devour'd those guilty Wretches. (d) Lot seeing that other Cities of the Plain besides Sodom were destroyed, thinking himself not safe in Zoar, withdrew to the Mountains to which he was first directed, and there dwelt in a Cave with his two Daughters; where the greatest of Mischiess besel him, no less than that of Incest; for his two Daughters having lost their espoused Husbands in Sodom, and despairing of

⁽c) Salt. All the Versions say that Lot's Wife became a Pillar of Salt. Gen. xix. 26. And, as Josephus affures us, that it was to be scen in his Time, and several modern Travellers relate, that it is still to be seen between Mount Engaddi and the Dead-Sea, Interpreters do observe, that we must not take the Salt here mentioned for common Salt, but for a Metallick Salt, which was hewn out of the Rock like Marble, and was made use of to build Houses, according to the Testimony of several famous Authors. But fince by the Word Salt we always understand common Salt, which Water foon dissolves, and could not continue so long, being exposed to Wind and Rain, the Word Metallick should have been joined with Salt in the Version, to take away the Ambiguity. This made Vetablus and Bo-dinus take this Expression in a metaphorical Sense, as a sirm and sure Co-venant is called a Covenant of Salt, Num. xviii. 19. 2 Chron. xiii. 5. And this Sense should be expressed in a Translation, to give no Advantage to Atheists and Libertines.

⁽d) Lot. God's Favour in preserving Lot was very great: But yet it is not altogether to be imputed to Lot's Virtue; for we must consider that Lot was very near of Kin to Abraham, and very much esteemed by him, and, no Doubt, Lot fared the better for Abraham's Sake; for it is said, Gen. xix. 29. When God destroyed the Cities of the Plain, he remember'd Abraham, and sent Lot out of the Midst of the Destruction, &c.

ever having any others (for they thought all Mankind were destroyed in the late Conflagration, but their Father and themselves) plotted together to betray their innocent Father, under the Pretence of preserving the Race of Mankind. They had lived in Sodom, and, it is to be feared, had learned too much of the Licentiousness of the Place. However they might be instigated, it is certain they had a very unnatural Design upon their Father; and considering his great Virtue; they knew they could not perfuade him to commit for great a Wickedness so long as he retained his Reason, therefore they intend by an intoxicating Draught to deprive him of his Sense, though not of his natural Strength. The eldest Daughter being the most forward in this wicked Contrivance, having represented to her Sister the Condition they were in, proposed the Expedient to her, which was to make their Father drunk with Wine, and then to lie with them. The younger as readily embraced what the elder as wickedly proposed: And accordingly having sufficiently stupefied the old Man with Wine, and put him to Bed, the eldest went to Bed to him; and having obtained her End of him, she rose again, he not perceiving when she lay down, or when she arose. The next Night the younger Daughter takes her Turn, and both succeeded alike in their vile and abominable Project; for they were both with Child by their Father, and had each of them a Son from that incestuous Congress. Thus was Lot, though the unwitting Instrument of their Generation, both a Father and Grandfather to his Daughters Children; but, as if he abhorred this incestuous Breed, we do not find that he took so much Notice of them as to give them a Name; for the Mothers named them, the elder calling her Son Moab, and the younger her Son Ben-ammi; both mischievous Enemies in After-times to Israel, especially the Moabites. Thus much of Lot, of whom facred History gives us no further Account.

Return we now to Abraham, who abode in Mamre till he had seen the Destruction of Sodom and Gomorrab; soon after which he removed more Southward, and fix'd in Gerar, the chief City of the Philistines. Here again the same Apprehension possessed him about Sarah his Wife, as before, and therefore he had Recourse to his former Policy, and by Agreement he was to call her Sister, and she him Brother. The (e) King of Gerar supposing Sarab to be no other than Abraham's Sister, caused her to be taken from him, intending to (f) keep her for himself. But God appeared to that Prince in a Dream, and told him he should be punished with Death for the Woman that he had taken; because she had an Husband. Abimelech excused himself, alledging that Sarah and Abraham had given out they were Brother and Sister. And calling for Abraham, he reproves him smartly; demanding why he imposed so on him, who never offered any Ill to him, but rather did him all the kind Offices of a Friend? Abraham's Excuse was, that he did it to save his Life, though at the same Time he told him no Lie in saying she was his Sister, for she was the Daughter of his Father, but not of his Mother. Abimelech thus admonished by God is easily reconciled; for he not only restored Abraham his Wife with a Royal Present, and Leave to dwell in what Part of the Country he liked best, but paid an extraordinary Compliment to Sarah in these Words, "Behold I have given to thy Brother man Emperors Casfar.

(e) King. The King of Gerar's Title Days were as fresh and vigorous as those was Abimelech, as that of the Kings of of forty now. But besides, Sarah might Egypt was Phurash, and that of the Ro- probably retain her Beauty upon the Account of her Sterility; whereas frequent (f) Keep. Others, as Procop. that a Woman of her Age should bear her are of Opinion that God having taken of Years so well, as to be desired by a King, Sarab's Barrenness, her Beauty returned who in those Times might command the with her Fruitfulness: For by this Time it may be supposed that Sarab had conceived that promifed Seed which was to be Abraham's Heir, most youthful Beauties in his Dominions. But, according to Interpreters and Commentators, People of ninety in those Covering of the Eyes to all that are with thee, and to all others, for thou art fully (g) justified." Then, upon Abraham's Prayer, God took off from Abimelech that Difability by which he had restrained him from Sarah; and also restored to his Wife and Women their former Fertility, which on that Occasion he had before stopped.

And now the Time appointed being come, God gives a miraculous Instance of his Power and Justice in blessing Abraham with a Son, whose Birth was wonderful, considering the Age of his Parents. But his Justice exacted the Performance of his Promise, who cannot be unjust. Sarah is delivered of a Son, which Abraham according to former Direction called (b) Isaac, and circumcised him when he was eight Days old. Who can express the Joy of this ancient Pair? Who will distrust God's Promises? Now might Sarah laugh with Comfort, and not in Distrust as she did before.

*Thousand, &c. By Pieces of Silver here are meant the Common or Civil Shekels, which are but half the Value of the Shekels of the Sanctuary. Therefore the thousand Shekels which Abimelech gave to Abraham amounted to about Fifty sinen Pounds seven Pence Half-penny English.

(g) Justified. Our Translators have committed a double Mistake in rendsing that which Abimeliel tays to Sarah, Gen.xx 16. Rebold I have given thy Brother a thou-Sand Pieces of Silver: Behold he is to thee a Covering of the Eyes to all that are with thee, and with all others. Thus was the reproved. For, First, The Words which they render repreved never has that Meaning, but fignifies to search or inquire into a Thing till it is cleared, and put out of Doubt. Secondly, There was no need then for a Reproof; for Abraham had already fully justified Surab, vo. 12. and Abimelech had accepted of his Defence: Thirdly, Abimelech was to far from irritating Abraham or Surab by Reproaches. that on the contrary he endeavoured to win their Friendship by a very considerable Present: Nay, before Abimelech was farisfied, hisReproaches to Abraham were rather obliging Remonstrances than bitter Invectives, v. 9, 10. He therefore declares that Sarah was fully justified, as the Septuagint and Chaldee Paraphrase bave render'd it.

But there is another Mistake in the Translation of this Text; for it is of Abraham that it lays, He was a Covering to the Eyes of Sarah; whereas the Original fays this of the thousand Pieces of Silver, which were a publick Testimony that Adimelech rendered to her Virtue, as the Veils of the Hebrero Women were the Symbols of their Modestry, whereas the Harlots went open fac'd. So that this Present rather regarded Sarah than Abrabam, to whom that Prince had already given Sheep and Oxen, and Men-Servants and Women-Servants, and restored him Sarah his Wife, giving him likewife an Offer of fettling in any Place of his Country. Abimelech's Design then by this Liberality was to justify Sarab's Virtue to them who belonged to her, and to all others, it being then usual to give Prefents to confirm the Truth of any Thing that might be called in Doubt, as may be seen, Gen. xxi. 30.

(b) Isaac. Which signifies Laughter.

The Birth of Isaac, as it was Matter of great Joy to Sarah, was, no Doubt, a great Disappointment to Hagar, who from her Mistress's great Age, might naturally conclude she would have no Child, and therefore promised herself the Satisfaction that her Son should be Abrabam's Heir. This Disappointment soon grew up to a Resentment, which could not long lie hid in Mother or Son; for after Isaac was wean'd, and grown up a little, his watchful Mother catch'd Ishmael (i) mocking him. Sarah could by no Means bear to have her Son derided by the Son of a Bond-woman, therefore she was very importunate with Abraham to turn both Mother and Son out of Doors, hinting to him, that her Son was to be the Heir of the Covenant, not the Slave's Son. This put Abraham upon a very difficult Dilemma: He was fond of Ishmael, whose infant Familiarity had very much engaged him to the Child. But God, who always had a great Regard to Abraham's Quiet and Good, soon made it easy to him; bidding him not to be sollicitous about the Bond-woman and her Son, but to mind what his Wife advised him to, confirming what she said, That Isaac was to be his Heir; assuring him at the same Time, that because Ishmael was his Son, he would make him considerable in the World.

Once more Hagar turns Wanderer, but by Compulsion: The Almighty will have it so, and Abraham must obey. His Fondness for Islomael must give Way to God's Promises, which were his only Comfort at this sad Separation. All her Equipment of Provision was only some Bread, and a Bottle of Water, with which she sets out, wandering in the Wilderness of Beersbeba

For she was to be cast out as well as he; which it's probable, would not have been, if she had not been faulty. This may reasonably be supposed from her former Deportment upon her conceiving Ishmael, when she carried herself very haughtily to her Missies.

⁽i) Mocking. It is reasonable to suppose that this Mocking might be upon the Account of the Heirsbip, Ishmael icorning that this Young ster, so much his Inferior in Years, should take the Inheritance from him; and so upon this decided him: And that Hagar, Ishmael's Mother, d.d countenance him, if not tutor him to it.

till her Water was spent, and in vain searching for a Supply in that parched Country, she in Despair lays the Child, fainting with Thirst, at the Foot of a Tree, herself retiring a little Distance from him, that slie might not see him die. In vain his feeble Tongue calls on his mourning Mother, who can only answer him with Tears; he cries, she weeps, and in an alternate melancholy Harmony they echo their sad Distress to one another. But the boundless Pity, which alone can help when all human Means fail, bids the weeping Mother dry up her Tears, and fear no more; for he had heard their Prayers, and would make the Child the Father of a mighty People. Then Hagar looking about her found a Well of Water, and she gave the Child Drink, which refreshed him, God afterwards providing for him. And here they both took up their Abode in the Wilderness of Paran, where Ishmael became an expert Archer, by which Employment it is probable he got Provisions to sustain his Mother and himself. And when he was grown to Man's Estate, his Mother, being herself an Egyptian, took him a Wife out of the Land of Egypt.

Abraham being so kindly treated by Abimelech, and invited to dwell in his Country, accepts his Offer; and Abimelech seeing how visibly God blessed Abraham in all his Undertakings, and that he grew very powerful, he takes Phicol, the General of his Forces, and made a League with him, fearing lest, as Abraham became more powerful, he might attempt something in Prejudice of him, or his Successors in the Government. This League thus made, and confirmed by an (k) Oath between them, and a little Difference composed about a Well of Water which Abraham had digged, and Abimelech's Servants without their Master's Knowledge had forcibly seized, but was now upon Abraham's Complaint restored, Abraham made a Present to Abimelech of some Sheep and Oxen, who with his General Phicol took Leave, and returned. But Abraham intending to settle for some Time in that Country, planted a (1) Grove in Beersheba, and there called on the Name of the Lord, the everlasting God.

Amongst all the Circumstances and Trials of Abrabam's Faith and Obedience, the greatest that ever befel him was that of being commanded to sacrifice his Son. Ishmael, once the Delight of his Heart, and Joy of his declining Age, is now no more to him, being obliged by the divine Mandate to banish him his Presence; and now Isaac, the Son of his Joy, whom he fo dearly loved, who had been conceived beyond the Course of Nature, and in whom God had promised that all the Nations of the Earth should be blessed, must bleed by the Appointment of the Almighty. This was a severe Trial to human Nature: But God's Command made it easy. Abraham neither disputes nor delays; but early in the Morning set forward on his Journey, accompanied only with his Son Isaac, and attended with two Servants, who led an Ass that carried the Wood, and other Instruments for the Sacrifice, as well as Provisions for themselves, having three Days Journey to go, as far as the Land of (m) Moriah.

(1) Grove. The Criticks generally agree in the use of Groves, as either for Refreshment, or Places of Worship; but E/rvood makes the most useful Observation on this Text of any, p. 30. By this, fays he, we may fee how apt the Customs of the Places we live in, and of the People we converse with, are to steal and prevail upon even good Men: By an Heathen King, Abraham was just before drawn to swear; and from the Heathen's Practice he now plants a Grove to perform his Devotions in. For that it was the Custom of the Heathen to plant Groves, and therein to fet up their Idols and Altars, will appear from the Command afterwards given to Israel to destroy their Altars, break down their Images and cut down their Groves, Exod. xxxiv. 13. and to burn their Groves with Fire, Deut.

xii. 3. And they were forbidden to plant any themselves to perform their Devotions in, Deut. xvi. 21. And when the Kings of Israel departed from God, they set up Groves; and it was one of Abab's provoking Sins, that he made a Grove, I Kings xvi. 33. But though Abraham herein sollowed the Custom of the Philiphines, among whom he lived, yet the Object of his Worship was the true God, Jebovab the Everlasting God.

(m) Moriab. That is, The Fear of the Lord. This is the Place where Jerusa-lem after food: For Mount Moriab, where Abraham was to offer his Son, is by some thought to be Mount Sion, on which Solomon built the Temple, where God commanded the Offerings to be made, z Chron. iii. v. I.

On the third Day they came within Sight of the Place 3 when Abraham ordered his Servants to (n) stop, telling them he and his Son would go and worship, and come to them again. The innocent Child, ignorant of what his pious Father intended to do with him, goes on chearfully; and the faithful Patriarch, having by the Strength of his (o) Dependance on God's Promises overcome those Pangs of natural Affection, which otherwife might have made him besitate in the Performance of this bloody Act, went on with a Resolution anfwerable to his Faith and Obedience. Thus they walked together; but Isaac, who saw the Wood and Infruments provided for the Sacrifice, and no Lamb for a Burnt-offering, innocently asked his Father, Where he would have a Lamb? To which the Father prophetically replied, My Son, God will provide himself a Lamb for a Burnt-effering. Abraham, being come to the Place God had told him of, builds an Altar, and having laid the Wood in Order, bound his Son Isaac, and laid him upon the Wood on the Altar. Isaac being at that Time at least three and thirty Years of Age, (tho' he was then called Lad and Child) was capable of making Resistance; but whether being by his Father made acquainted with God's Command, or being naturally subject and obedient to his Parents, he quietly submitted, yielding implicitly to whatsoever his Father would do with him.

All Things being thus prepared, Abraham stretches out his Hand with the Knife in it to give the fatal Stroke; when Heaven regarding the Father's Piety, and the Son's Obedience, timely interposes, and, with a Reduplication of his Name, charges him not to hurt

⁽a) Dependance. From what the Apost'e says, Hieb. xi. 19. may be eathered, that Abraban had so steady a Faith in God's Omnipotence, that though he neither the Child, adding this divine Applause of his Faith, Now I know that thou fearest God, seeing thou hast not with held thy Son, thine only Son, from me. Abraham, not a little surpriz'd at the Voice, turns about to see whence it came, and spies a Ram caught in a Thicket by the Horns, which he immediately took and offer'd up for a Burnt-offering instead of his Son: A happy Exchange! Upon this compleat Obedience of Abrabam's, it pleased the Lord to renew his Promise to him with great Amplifications, and confirm it to him by Oath. Whereupon Abraham returning with his Son Isaac to his Servants, they joyfully go together to Beersheba, at that Time the Place of Abraham's Residence; where he is no sooner arrived, but he is welcom'd home with the happy News of the Increase of his Family; for Milcab, his Brother Nabor's Wife, had made him the glad Father of Rebecca, who was afterwards Wife to Isaac.

It's not certainly known how long Abraham abode at Beersbeba; but the next Place where we hear of him was at Kiriath-arba, afterwards called Hebron, in the Country of Canaan; where he buried his Wife Sarah in the hundred and twenty seventh Year of her Age. For whom having observed the usual Ceremonies of mourning, he addressed himself to the (p) Hittites, desiring a Burying-place for his Dead. They, not understanding his Meaning, with great Coarseness answer'd, He might bury in what Sepulchre he pleased. But this would not do Abraham's (q) Business: For he proposed to buy a Piece of Ground tor a separate Sepul-

Seed from all other People: And that therefore it was not lawful for him to mix with any of the other Nations which did not worthip the true God. As therefore he afterwards took especial Care that his Son Isaac might not marry with any of the Daughters of the Canaanites; so now he was wary not to bury his Dead promiseuously among theirs.

⁽⁷⁾ Business. Abraham knew the Lord had called him forth from among his Idolatrous Kindsed, and from his Father's House, Gen. xii. 1. and given him the Covenant of Circumcision, Ch. xvii. 9, 10, &c. whereby he had distinguish'd him and his

chre for himself and Family; and therefore desired them to intreat Ephron, the Prince of the Country, to sell him the Cave of Macpelah, offering to give the full Worth of it. Ephron being a generous Prince, tho? a Heathen, offered Abraham not only the Cave, but the whole Field also, that he might bury his Dead without Delay. But Abraham, not willing to bring himself under so great an Obligation, or be at an Uncertainty about the Piece of Ground, urged Ephron to fix a Price; who feeing him pressing, told him, since he would purchase it, the Ground was worth (r) four hundred Shekels of Silver, which being so inconsiderable a Trifle between Men of Rank and Condition, he desired he would make no Words about it, but accept it, and bury his Dead without any more to do. Abraham having got the Price, never offers to beat it down, but immediately paid the Money by (s) Weight to Ephron in the Presence of the People, and the Field was, according to the Custom of those Times and Places, formally conveyed and made fure to Abraham, and to his Heirs for ever: And till then did not Abraham bury his Wife there.

Abraham, being at this Time near an hundred and forty Years old, was desirous to see his Son Isaac married and settled in the World before himself died. Therefore calling his eldest Servant to him, who was his chief Steward, he laid a strict Charge upon him that he should not take a Wise for his Son of the Daughters of the Caneanites; but obliged him to go into his own (meaning Abraham's) Country, and bring a Wise from thence of his own Kindred. Chatge, he made him take a solemn Oath of Fidelity, the Ceremony whereof was then performed by the Servant's putting his Hand under his Master's (t) Thigh; which, with some Conditions and necessary Cautions, he did. After which, receiving his Master's Instructions, he set out with a Retinue of Servants and Camels suitable to his Master's Quality and Estate, and the Business he went about. No Doubt it was one great Part of the Steward's Charge to go first to Haran in Mesopotamia, his Brother Nabor's City, because he heard before that Milcah his Wise's Sister, who was married to his Brother Nabor, had borne him several Children, one of which, named Bethuel, had a Daughter named Rebecca.

Eliezer, for that was the Steward's Name, arriving one Evening at Haran, caused his Camels to rest themselves by a Well of Water without the City: About which Time it was usual for the Women to come out of the City to draw Water at that Well. Eliezer, who had been religiously brought up, and instructed by his Master Abraham in the Fear of God, knowing of how great Concern the Business he went about was, had his Mind continually on God, begging his Direction and Success in this weighty Affair; and fearing lest in a Matter of so great Moment he should mistake the Person, he humbly besought the Lord to direct him by a Sign, that he might make a right Choice for his young Master. The Sign he desired was, That she, who at his Request did let him drink of her Pitcher, and offer to give his Camels Drink also, should be the Person whom the Lord had appointed for his

Sign whereof they bore about that Part of their Body: Others more probably think it to be a myfferious Signification of Christ the promised Seed, who was to come out of Abraham's Loins or Thigh, Gen. xlvi. 6. which is a modest Expression of the sacred Historian; for, says one, per semur sive coxam, partes etiam genitales quæ in semora sunt, tacitè intelliguntur.

⁽t) Thigh. Among the various Ways of Squearing, sometimes he that took the Oath did put bis Hand under the other's Thigh which administer'd it: As the Case here between Abraham and his Steward, Gen. xxiv. 2. and afterwards between dying Jacob and his Son Joseph, Gen. xlvii. 2. Which Ceremony some interpret to hear a Joken of Subjection; others as a Mystery of Circumcision, the Servant Isaac. The honest Man's Request is no sooner made than heard; for he presently spies Bethuel's Daughter come out of the City with her Pitcher upon her Shoulder, to (u) fetch Water. After she had filled her Pitcher at the Well, and was coming away, Eliezer went to her, and desired a Draught of her Water. She courteously consented, and not only for himself, but for his Camels too, if they would drink. Eliezer permitted this, which in good Manners otherwise he would not have done, but only to be convinced of the Sign he had desired.

After the Camels had drank, Eliezer viewing the Damsel well, and seeing her exceeding beautiful, with abundance of Joy presents her with a Pair of golden Ear-Rings, and a Pair of Bracelets for her Hands; asking her at the same Time whose Daughter she was, and whether there were Room in her Father's House for him and his Company to lodge that Night. She, to his great Astonishment, tells him she was the Daughter of Bethuel, the Son of Nahor by Milcab; assuring him at the same Time, that they had both Room and Accommodations for him and his

Eliezer was still more and more surprized with these Crowds of Joy succeeding each other; insomuch, that being deeply affected with a Sense of God's Goodness, in guiding him so directly to the House of his Master's Brethren, he bowed down his Head in humble Acknowledgment, and worshipped the Lord, saying, Blessed be the Lord God of my Master Abraham, who hath not withdrawn his Mercy and Truth from him. The Damsel leaves Eliezer in this Rapture, and ran Home to acquaint her Friends with what had happen-

her Father Laban's Sheep; and some Ages after that, the seven Daughters of Jethro, who was a Prince as well as a Priest of Midian, kept their Father's Flocks, and used to draw Water, and fill the Troughs for the Cattle.

⁽u) Fetch. Great was the Simplicity and Humility of those early Ages, when Persons of the best Rank, and of the semale Sex too, did not distain to be employed in such service Offices. Thus in the sollowing Age Jacob sound his Cousin Rachel sollowing and watering ed; but soon returned with her Brother Laban, who could not but expect something extraordinary from the Bracelets on his Sister's Hands, and from the Account she gave him of the Man that presented them to her. Laban hasted to the Well, and saluting the Man in the Stile of (w) Thou Blessed of the Lord, invited him in, telling him there was Preparation made for him and his Camels. The Man thereupon went in; and whilst they were preparing an Entertainment for him and his Company, he declared he would not take any Refreshment till he had told the Errand he was sent on; and having delivered his Credentials, by telling to whom he belonged, he gave a general Account of his Master's Estate, and then goes on with his Business. " Sarah, my Master's Wife, says he, bare him a Son " when she was old, unto whom he hath given all " that he hath. And my Master being old, made me " swear that I should not take a Wife for his Son of "the Daughters of the Canaanites, but that I should "go to his Father's House, and to his Kindred, to "take a Wife for his Son." Then he gave them an Account of his whole Journey, the Manner of his Meeting with Rebecca, and how signally the Hand of divine Providence had appeared in directing him thither; concluding thus, "And now, if ye will deal "kindly and truly with my Master, tell me; (x) if " not, tell me, that I may turn to the Right-Hand, or " to the Left."

It is to be supposed orm of Salutation in those Times, to that Besbuel, Rebecca's Father, either was superannuated, or laboured under some bodily Infirmity, which rendered him less capable of managing the Affairs of his Family, otherwise we can scarce suppose his Son Laban would have taken so much upon him in his Father's House.

fore, says he, we (x) ought not to say any Thing to it. Here is Rebecca before thee; is she consent, "take her, and let her be thy Master's Son's Wife." Eliezer having her Consent, makes his Acknowledgment in a Return of Thanks to the Lord; and making his Presents to her, her Mother and Brother, they went to Supper. Next Morning he desires them to dispatch him back to his Master, being impatient to carry these joyful Tidings. The Brother and Mother being loth to part with Rebecca so soon, would have her tarry a little longer; but Eliezer, like a diligent as well as faithful Servant, was for hastening Home with her, which, with Rebecca's Consent, he did. Accordingly she prepares for her Journey, being attended with her Nurse Deborab and Maid-Servants, and parted with her Relations with this Blessing, "That the might be fruitful, and that her Offspring might fo have Dominion over their Enemies."

Whilst the faithful Servant was conveying his fair Charge to his Master's House, Providence had so ordered it, that Isaac walking out in the Evening, to meditate on the Goodness of the Lord, saw his Servants and the Camels upon the Road; whereupon he went forward to meet them. Rebecca soon spied him, and asked Eliezer who he was. And being informed that it was his Master's Son, she alighted, and (a) veil'd herself. Isaac with great Respect received her, and

(z) Ought. Our Translation lays, We cannot speak unto thee either Good or Evil. Commentators indeed do observe that this Expression, We cannot, here in Gen. xxiv. 52. and in Gen. xix. v. 22. That God could not do any Thing. to Sodom till Lot had escaped, does not always denote an absolute Inability to do any Thing, but only a Defign or Will not to do it, because it may not be proper or convenient; and that all this Impotency is to be attributed to the Want of Will. But fince People are apt to take these Places literally, they ought to be translated properly and clearly, and after such a Manner that should leave no Room for Doubt and Mistakes. And therefore when Laban answered Eliezer, he told him, They ought not, or would not, say any Thing good or had to him; that is, they would not oppose his Demand of having Rebecca for Wise to his Master's Son: And this was manifestly the Essect of their Submission to the Will of God, from whom they did believe this proceeded, and they were persuaded they were bound to obey.

conducted her to his Mother's Tent, which he allotted for her Apartment. Soon after they were married; and Isaac grew so fond of her, that her Charms soon obliterated his Grief for the Loss of his Mother, which to that Time had sat heavy on him.

Isaac being thus happily matched, the good old Patriarch begins to entertain Thoughts of another Wise; and casting his Eyes on his Maid (b) Keturah, he took her to his Bed, and she was his concubinary Wise. By her he had six Sons; to each of which he gave Portions in his Life-time, and sent them Eastward, that they might not stand in Competition with Isaac for any Part of his Estate, nor settle any where in the Land of Canaan, which his Seed by Isaac was to inherit.

Isaac was forty Years old when he married, and lived twenty Years with his beautiful Wife before God bleffed them with any Issue, which at last he obtained by his importunate Prayers; for Rebecca soon after conceived. And when she felt the Children struggling within her (for she had Twins) it somewhat startled her, and made her wonder what the Meaning of it might be. Upon which she went to (c) inquire of the Lord, and received for Answer, "That two Nations" (or Heads of Nations) were in her Womb; and "that two Manner of People should be separated from sher Bowels: That one of those People should be stronger than the other, and that the Elder should serve the Younger." The Time of their Birth being come, Rebecca is first delivered of Esau, who was

(b) Keturah. The Jewish Writers are very sabulous about this Keturah, some supposing her to be the same with Hagar; but in all Probability she might be dead as well as Sarah; and if she had been alive, too old to answer Abraham's Design, which was to have more Children. But laying aside Fables and Whimsies, it is certain from Gen. xxv. 6. that Keturah was a Servant; for if she had been a free Woman, she would not have been called a Concubine. But besides, the Word Concubine (not only here in Gen. xv. 6. but also in I Chron. i. 32.)

gives Occasion to some to suppose that he married her in Sarab's Life-time; for Concubine was a Term not usually given to such second Wives as succeed others, but to such as in the Life-time of the sirst Wise were Partakers of the Marriage-Bed.

(c) Inquire. This in those Times was usually done by consulting some Prophet: And her Father-in-Law Abrabam being a Prophet, (for so he is expressly called by God himself, Gen. xx. 7.) and then living, it is most probable she red and hairy. His Brother Jacob followed him so close, that he took hold of his Heel with his Hand. The Boys growing up, Esau delighted altogether in the Fields, being addicted to Hunting; and because he furnished his Father with Venison, a Sort of Food of which Isaac was very fond, therefore he loved him best. But Jacob, who was of a less robust Disposition, was beloved by his Mother, being more conversant with her, and ready at Hand to wait on her. By that Time these Boys were sisteen Years old, their Grandsather Abraham took his Leave of this World, being an hundred seventy and five Years of Age, and was buried by his two Sons Ishmael and Isaac, in the Cave of Macpelah, in the Field which he had purchased of the Sons of Heth, and where about forty Years before he buried Sarab his Wife.

As for Ishmael, Abraham's eldest Son (tho' not his Heir) he lived many Years after this, till he had attained to an hundred and thirty seven Years, and then leaving, as was (d) foretold of him, twelve Sons, who were all Princes of Nations, and possessed of Towns and Castles, he likewise died. And although he had been such a wild Man that his(e) Hand had been against every Man, and every Man's Hand against him, yet he died at last in the Presence of his Brethren, that is, a natural Death, having his Family and Relations about him.

Esau and Jacob being grown to Man's Estate, it happen'd one Day that Esau, having fatigued himself extreamly in the Field, came fainting to Jacob, who at that very Time had just made some Pottage of (f) Lentils, and it was of a red Colour. Esau, seeing the Pottage, and his Spirits being very much wasted with Hunger, desired his Brother to let him eat with him, telling him, the more to move him, that he was very saint. Jacob finding him so indifferent, was not content with his Word, but to make the Bargain fure, will not part with his Pottage till he had obliged his Brother to confirm the Birth-right to him by an Oath. Esau never scruples it; and so sold his Birthright, with all those excellent Privileges that depended on it, for a Mess of Pottage. This in Esau is caled (i) Despising his Birth-right.

Isaac had hitherto made Beersheba his usual Residence, as his Father Abraham had before him; but a Famine happening in that Part of the Country where he lived, he was obliged to remove. Now while he deliberated whither to go, the Lord appeared to him, and charged him not to go down into Egypt, but to stay in the Land which he should shew him, promising to be with him, and bless him; and assuring him that he would give all those Countries to him and his Descendants, in Performance of the Oath which he swore to his Father Abraham, and that he would cause his Family to multiply as the Stars of Heaven; and Nations of the Earth to account themselves blessed therein, because of the Faith and Obedience of Abraham.

Isaac, in Pursuance of the Divine Direction, travels to the Country of the Philistines, and fixes in Gerara. And here the same Temptation attended him that did his Father in the same Place; Rebecca his Wife was a very beautiful Woman, and he fearing the People would kill him that they might enjoy her, when they asked him what Relation she had to him, told them she was his Sister, an Appellation then common amongst Kindred in almost any Degree. Isaac had not long continued unsuspected; for (k) Abimelech, (or the King) looking out of a Window, saw him so familiar with Rebecta, as gave him Cause to think she was his Wife; and sending for Isaac he reproved him for imposing upon him, telling him confidently she was his Wife. Isaac being thus charged, could not deny it, but excused himself, saying, he did it to save his Life. The King first blamed him for laying such a Snare for him and his People, faying, "What is " this thou hast done? One of the People might have se lain with thy Wife, and thou wouldst have brought "Guilt upon us;" and then gave a strict Charge on Pain of Death to all his Subjects, that none should offer any Injury to him or his Wife.

Isaac by this Protection being encouraged to tarry there longer, applied himself to Husbandry, wherein he was so successful, that the Land he sowed yielded him a Crop of an Hundred-fold, by which, and God's continual Blessing upon him, he became so wealthy and powerful, that Abimelech's Servants grew jealous, and to oblige him to depart the Country, silled up the Wells his Father's Servants had digged. Abimelech himself was possessed with the same Jealousy, and therefore spoke to Isaac to withdraw to some other Place, because he was grown more potent than himself.

Isaac, as well to secure himself, as make Abimelech easy, departs to the Valley of Gerara, where he clears the Wells which Abraham had formerly caused to be digg'd, and the Philistines had fill'd up, giving them the sameNames they had before. Here he likewise dig-ged a new Well; but a Quarrel happening between the Shepherds of Gerara, and those of Isaac, the former affirming those Wells belonged to them, Isaac's People quitted it, calling that Well Esek, which signifies Contention. They likewise digged another Well, which was also contested for, and Isaac called it Sitnah, or Hatred. Isaac grown weary of such quarrelsome Neighbours, removed further from them, and then digged another Well, about which there was no Controversy, and therefore he named it Rehoboth, which is Spaciousness; for now, said he, the Lord hath given us Room, and we shall increase upon the Earth.

Isaac tarried not long here, but went to Beersheba, where the same Night he arrived God appeared to him, comforting and encouraging him, and renewed his Promise to him, to bless him, and multiply his Seed, for his Servant Abraham's sake. Then Isaac built an Altar there, and worshipped the Lord; and because he intended to reside there for some Time, he ordered his Servants to dig a Well; for in those hot and dry

Countries Water was very scarce.

During Isaac's Abode here, Abimelech reflecting how unkindly he had treated him, and by the surly Carriage of his Servants forced him to remove, and justly fearing Isaac might resent it, thought it adviseable for preventing surure Animosities to make him a Visit, and try if he could draw him into a League of Amity: Therefore taking (1) Abuzzath, one of his Friends, and (m) Phicol his General, he went to Isaac at Beersheba. Isaac, to properly from to call this Abuzzath the Paranymeh or Brideman of Abimelech; for the Paranymphs were efficiented the most honourable among them, as being next to the Bridegroom, and they that always conducted them to the nuptial Bed. The Paranymphs among the Persians was afterwards the next to the King, and was the Person that always crowned him. And as such we may suppose this Abuzzath to have been to Abimelech.

(m) Phicol. This was not that Phicol who lived with the former Ahimelech in the Days of Abraham, mentioned Gen. xxi. 22. for that was an Hundred Years herore. It is therefore ve y probable, that as Abimelech was the Name for the Kings of the I bilifines, at Carar was for the Roman Emperors, and It is a know the Kings of Legypt, so this Word Place was the common Name of their Generals, not Captain of the King's Guard (for that was Alium ath's the Paranymph's Post) as the Word impries, which signifies the Face or Head, as a General is of the Forces he commands.

let them know he was sensible of the Injuries done him, gave them at first but a cold Reception; asking them wherefore they came to see him, whom they had so uncivilly treated? Abimelech unwilling to revive old Quarrels, addresses himself with much Respect and Friendship to Isaac, telling him, that he was convinced of the particular Regard God had for him, and for that Reason desired to enter into a League of Friendship with him; assuring him, that he was always his Friend, and wished him well, concluding with the pleasing Compellation, Thou blessed of the Lord.

Isaac finding what they aim'd at, and himself being of a quiet and peaceable Temper, entertain'd them with much Respect and Liberality; and the next Morning they made a League, and confirmed it by a mutual Oath: After which they took a solemn Leave and parted. Let us now return to Esau, of whom the last Act that we have recorded is the selling his Birth-right, The next Thing we find of him, is his afflicting his pious Parents with ungodly Marriages.

Esau was now forty Years of Age; never very good, but since the Slighting of his Birth-right much worse; tho' he could not be ignorant of the Care his Grandfather took, that his Father might not marry into an idolatrous Family; yet nothing would serve his Turn, but he must take two Hittites, Judith and Bashemath to be his Wives; which was no small Grief to his Parents. And yet natural (n) Affection so prevail'd with this good Father, that when he was grown old, and his Sight gone, he called his Son Esau to him, and advising him to consider his Age and the Uncertainty of his Life, bid him take his Bow and Quiver, and kill him some disappointed; and therefore being unwilling to deal hardly with Isaac, he permitted him to be imposed upon by his Wife and younger Son, and thereby drawn to that unwittingly, which to have done knowingly would have caused great Uneasiness to him.

⁽n) Assertion. Good Isaac, swayed by an over-fond Affection to a disobedient and rebellious Son, would have preferr'd the Order of Nature to the divine Will of God, who had expressly declared, before Esau and Facob were born, that the Elder should serve the Younger. But God would not permit his Purpose to be so

Venison, and make him a savoury Dish, that he might eat thereof, and give him the Blessing appendant to his Birth-right before he died. Rebecca overheard what had pass'd between her Husband and her Son Esau; wherefore as foon as Esau was gone to hunting she called her Son Jacob to her; and having told him what she heard his Father say to his Brother, first injoining him a punctual Obedience to all her Directions, she bids him go to the Flock, and fetch from thence two Kids of the Goats, and with them, said she, "I will make such sa-" voury Meat for thy Father as he loves, and thou " shalt bring it to thy Father; that he may eat, and " bless thee before his Death." Jacob had gotten the Birth-right already, and knew that the Paternal Blessing did usually attend it; but he was fearful that if he should get it by indirect Means, he should lose the Blessing, and get a Curse instead of it. This Fear was improv'd upon Consideration of the Difference between his Brother's Complexion and his; for Esau was hairy, and he was smooth; so that if his Father (to supply his Defect of Sight by Feeling) should handle them, he might easily discover the Cheat. And this he objected to his Mother; who having continually in her Mind the Words of the divine Oracle, [The Elder shall serve the Younger, Gen. xxv. 23.] with Assurance answered him, upon me be the Curse, my Son, only obey my Voice, " and without delay go fetch me the Kids." Jacob very sensible of his Mother's Tenderness towards him, disputed her Will no longer, but went and brought the Kids; of which she made such savoury Meat as she knew her Husband lov'd. Then dressing Jacob in Esau's belt Cloaths, and covering his Hands and Neck with the hairy Skins of the Kids, she gave him the Meat to carry to his Father; who, as soon as he heard Jacob enter the Room, ask'd, Who art thou? Jacob answered, (o) I am Esau thy First-born; I have done as thou com-

Jacob reply'd, because the Lord (p) brought it to me. Isaac not willing to trust to his Hearing only, called Jacob to come near him, that he might feel him, and thereby know whether he was his very Son Esau, or not. The good old Man, when he had felt $\Im a$ cob's Hands, being deceived by the hairy Kids Skins, could not be sure it was Jacob or Esau, but shewed his Uncertainty by faying, The Voice is Jacob's Voice, but the Hands are the Hands of Esau. Having nothing therefore but his Son's Veracity to depend upon, he put the Question more home to him, "Art thou my very Son " Esau?" To which Jacob more readily than truly anfwering (q) I am, the good old Man urged no further; but taking him indeed for E fau, bid him bring the Meat, that he might eat of it and bless him. Some will be apt to think that this imposing upon Isaac's Bindness was inexcusable in Jacob: but let such confider, that the Bleffing was due to the eldest Son, and Jacob having bought his Brother's Birth-right, the Blesling (which E/uv had despited in despiting his Birth-right) was due to him; and as for the Lie which they charge upon Jacob saying, The Lord brought the Venison to bim, it's highly probable he meant, that the Lord had put that Invention or Contrivance of the Kids into his Mother's Mind, and by her had brought it to him. And tho' he obtained the Bleffing by fuch Ways and Means as if they may be excused in him, or he in ufing them, on the Account that God had appointed the Blesling to him; yet they are not to be imitated, or drawn into Example by any other: Which they ought well to confider, who propose the whole Scripture and every Part thereof without Diffinction, for a standing Rule of both Faith and Practice to all Believers in all Timer.

Jacob was no sooner gone from his Father, but Esau came in, bringing his Father the Venison dressed, and said to him, "Arise my Father, and eat of "thy Son's Venison, that thy Soul may bless me." Isaac in great Surprize and Disorder hastily ask'd, Who art thou? To which Esau replying, I am thy Son, thy Firstborn, Esau; a very great Trembling seiz'd Isaac, so that he called out, "Who, and where is he that hath taken "Venison and brought it to me, and I have eaten of " all before thou camest, and have blessed him?" And, being by this Time sensible of a Divine ordering Hand therein, added, "Yea, and he shall be blessed." Esau hearing this, cried out, and in much Confusion, said to his Father, "Bless me, even me also, O my Father." Isaac to excuse himself for having given the Blessing from him, told him, That his Brother had deceived him, and got the Blessing from him. Esau complain'd, that his Brother had supplanted him, and having no Hopes to prevail with his Father to reverse the Blessing given to his Brother, said to his Father, "Hast thou not referved a Bleffing for me?" Isaac wanted not good Will to E fau; but he had emptied the choicest of his Store upon Jacob, faying, "I have made him thy Lord, " and all his Brethren have I given to him for Ser-" vants, and have wished him Plenty of Corn and Wine: "And what shall I now do unto thee, my Son? Alas! " said Esau, hast thou but one Blessing? Bless me, e-" ven me, Omy Father." At which Words he not only cried out, but (r) wept also. the Epistle to the Hebreros, Ch. xii. 16. yet he found no place of Repentance in 17. took Notice of this, where having his Father: Neither Prayers nor Tears branded Esau with Prophaneness in despifing his Birth-right, and felling it for a Morsel of Meat, he observes that, when afterwards he would have inherited the Blessing, he was rejected: For though

" and thou shalt have of the Dew of Heaven above:

Thou shalt live by thy Sword, and shalt be subject

* thou shalt shake off the Yoke."

Esau had conceived such a Hatred against his Brother For depriving him of his Blessing, that he resolved to be revenged; and supposing his Father could not live long, intended as foon as he was dead to murder him. Rebecca, being appriz'd of Esau's unnatural Design upon her favourite Son, acquaints Jacob with his Brother's Threats, and advises him to make a Visit to his Uncle Laban'at Haran, and stay there till his Brother's Rage might be appeased; which when she had observed, she would send for him home again. Jacob, who was of a mild, and perhaps fearful Disposition, knowing Esau's rugged Temper, was very willing to comply with his Mother's Proposal, but not to go without his Father's Consent, which he very much doubted. But Rebecca manag'dthat Matter cunningly enough; for taking an Opportunity, she politickly complains of the Uncasiness she was under upon the Account of E fau's Hittite Wives, urging her Fear, lest his Example should influence Jacob to do the like. Isaac knew not the Drift of this Complaint, but being a pious Man, and knowing that the Promise made to Abraham, and renewed to him, was to be compleated in the Issue of Jacob, and being careful that he should not corrupt his Blood by mixing with any of those Nations here said to Esau, looks more like a Prediction of what would befal him, than an Apprecation that they might besal him. To Jacob it was said, "God give thee of the Dew of Heaven, and the Fatness of the Earth, &c." But to Esau, "Thy Dwelling-Place shall be in the Fatness of the Earth, &c." And whereas Power and Sovereignty, not only over Esau and his Posterity, but more generally over People and Nations, is wished to Jacob; Esau is told, that he should live by his Sword (which is but an unquiet, uneasy, and unsafe Course of Lise) and should serve his Brother; which must needs grate hard on Esaw's haughty Temper. Only for his Comfort it is prophetically added, that he in his Posterity should at one Time or other have a Dominion also; and that then they should break his Brother's Yoke from off their Necks: Which was begun and attempted in King Joram's Time, 2 Kings xx. 22. but not compleated till King Herod's Time, who was an Edomite.

which were to be destroyed, forthwith called Jacob to him, and with his Blessing gave him a strict Charge that he should not take a Wife of the Daughters of Canaan, but to go to Padan-aram, to the House of Betbuel his Mother's Father, and from thence take him a Wife of the Daughters of Laban his Mother's Brother. And to encourage him, he said, "God Almighty bless thee, "and make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, that thou may'st become a Father of many People; may he beflow on thee and thy Race the Blessings promised to how in as a Stranger, and which he promised to thy Grand-sather." This Contrivance so luckily succeeding, Isaac dispatches his Son away immediately, who accordingly sets out for Padan-aram.

Esau understanding that his Father had confirmed the Blessing to his Brother, and sent him to Padan-aram, to take a Wife there, with a strict Prohibition not to marry any Canaanitish Woman, and that Jacob in Obedience to his Parents was gone; restecting likewise with himfelf, that his Father was displeased with him, for having taken those Hittite Wives, who were of Canaanitish Families, and thinking to re-ingratiate himself with his Father, he went and took Mahalath, his Uncle Ishmael's Daughter to be his Wise: Which mended the Matter but little.

Facob departing from Beersheba made the best of his Way to Haran; but being benighted, he was forced to take up his Lodging in the open Air, where the spangled Sky was his Canopy, and a hard Stone his Pillow. Whilst he slept, he dream'd he saw a Ladder set upon the Earth, the Top of which reach'd to Heaven, and upon it were Angels ascending and descending. Above it stood the Lord, and said to him, "I am the Lord "God of Abraham and of Isaac: I will give the Land "whereon thou liest to thee and to thy Issue; which shall be as numerous as the Dust of the Earth, and extend to all Parts of it; and all Nations shall be F 4

so bless'd in thy Posterity. I will be thy Guide wherefoever thou shalt go, I will bring thee back into this Country, and will not forfake thee, but perform all for that I have promis'd." This Dream made so great an Impression on Jacob, that when he wak'd, paying an awful Reverence to the Place where he had rested, he faid, Surely the Lord is in this Place, and I did not know it. This, in all Probability, was the first Time that God had so immediately appeared to him; and which affected him with such a religious Fear, that in a holy Rapture he said, "How venerable is this Place! This is "the House of God and the Gate of Heaven." Then getting up, he took the Stone on which he had slept, and set it up for a Monument of God's Love to him, in so eminently appearing and confirming his gracious Promises, and as a Mark to know the Place by, whenever he should come that Way again. Having set up the Stone he poured (t) Oil over it; and in pious Commemoration of the heavenly Vision which he saw here, this Place, which before was called Luz, he now calls (u) Bethel, that is, The House of God. But before he went from hence he took his Leave in a very solemn Manner, for repeating some Part of what the Lord had said to him, he made a Vow, the more strongly to bind himself to God's Service, saying, "If God will be with " me, and direct me in my Journey, and will give me Bread to eat, and Raiment to put on, so that I come

This being the first Mention we have of Oil, either as to the Ufe, Nature or Name of it, it feems more reasonable to suppose, that he used it here and so afterwards, Gen. xxxv. 14.) by Way of icligious Confecration, and that rather by divine Instinct and secret Direction from God, than by Imitation or Example from either his Father or his Grand-father; which some think he did. For if either Abraham or Isaac had used Oil in any of their religious Performances, it may well be thought there would have been some Mention made of it before, as well as now; whereas I do not find it fo much as named till now, nor after this (except once, when Jacob returning from Padanaram to this Place again, poured out Oil upon a Pillar then, as he had done now) until God in the Law appointed the Use of it in Consecrations, Offerings, &c. Having thus perform'd his Devotions, he proceeded chearfully on his Journey, till he came to Haran; and being near the Town he met with Flocks and Shepherds near a Stone Well. Heask'd them, whether they knew Laban the Son of Nabor; they told him they did, that he was in good Health, and that his Daughter Rachel would soon be there with her Flock. She came there in a short Time after this Discourse, and Jacob very obligingly rolled away the Stone from the Well's Mouth, and water'd her Sheep for her: Which done, he told her who he was, and saluting her with a Kiss, he wept for Joy. Rachel leaving Jacob at the Well, made haste to tell her Father whom she had met; who hearing of the Arrival of his Sister's Son, in joyful haste ran out to meet him; and having embraced and kissed him, he brought him home with him. To whom Jacob gave an Account of the Occasion of his coming from home, and of the Vision he had seen by the Way. By which Laban found that his Nephew had not misbehaved himself at home, or left his Parents without their Consent and Direction, tho' he came so bare and unattended. Besides, it was necessary for Jacob to let Laban see that he was under the immediate Protection and Care of Providence. Labanhaving heard these Things, acknowledges him to be his near Kinsman, and gave him a kind Reception; and Jacob, to let his Uncle see he was not used to an idle useless Course of Life, enters himself in the Business of the Family, as intending to make some Stay there.

is not expressed, unless it were by an Offering unto God, when Jacob built an Altar at Elbethel, and set up a Pillar in the Place where God had talked with him, and poured a Drink-Offering, and Oil thereon, at his Return from Padan-aram, Gen. xxxv. 7, 14.

⁽x) Tenth. This is the second Mention of Tythes or Tenths, and the first Vow concerning them, made voluntarily and expressed in the Terms of giving them to God, How, or when it was perform'd

Which when Laban saw, he took an Opportunity to discourse his Nephew, and let him know, that he did not expect, nor think it reasonable he should serve him for nothing; therefore he desired him to name what Wages he would have. The lovely Shepherdess at the first Interview had fir'd Jacob's Heart, and her he names as a Reward of Seven Years Service. Laban readily consented, and Jacob immediately enters upon his Seven Years, which his Fondness for Rachel made short.

The Time being expired, Jacob demanded his Wife. Upon which Laban solemnized the Nuptials publickly, inviting his Friends and Neighbours: But being desirous of detaining Jacob in his Service for a longer Time, he put a very unfair Trick upon him; for in the Evening he took Leab, and brought her to Jacob's (y) Bed, instead of Rachel. Jacob the next Morning finding the Cheat, complain'd to his Father-in-Law; who put it off with a very slender Excuse, alledging that it was not the Custom of that Country to give the Younger in Marriage before the Elder. This was but a poor Excuse indeed; but Laban, who had all along observ'd Jacob's Fondness for Rachel, knew he could bring him to any Terms, tho' never so unreasonable; which made him demand another Seven Years Service for his younger Daughter, tho' at the same Time he was afraid Jacob in Resentment of the Injury done him should throw off Leab, and not receive her for his Wife; wherefore he intreats him to fulfil her (2) Week; « And

Tho' by the Word Week here, some understand a Week of Years, or Seven Years: And to suisil her Week, he was to serve the other Seven Years for Racbel afterwards. Some old English Versions render it so; but the LXX is otherwise, for it is positively there a Week, at the End of which he was to have Racbel, and serve Seven Years for her afterwards. And this appears to be the right Sense of the Place by the Order of the Story: For tho face by the Order of the Story: For tho face with Laban Twenty Years, Gen. xxxi, 28 and 41, yet it is plain, at the

And then, said he, (a) I will give thee this also, for the "Service which thou shalt serve with me Seven other "Years." Jacob consenting to Laban's Proposal, fulfilled Leab's Week, and then married and bedded Rachel; of whom he was so fond, that he (b) slighted Leah. But God pitying her, made her fruitful, and restrained Rachel from bearing: So that Leab had four Sons, viz. Reuben, Simeon, Levi, and Judah, before Rachel had one. This was a great Trouble to Rachel, which in a short Time broke off all Family Coversation between them, and at last improv'd to real Enmity. Rachel being blinded with her too earnest Desire of Children, imputes her Barrenness to her Husband, and vents her Discontent in a very unadvised and passionate Expression, saying, "Give me Children or I die." Jacob was always very fond of her, but like a prudent Man his Judgment got the Ascendant of his Affection; and tho' he was naturally of a mild Temper, yet these rash inconsiderate Words of Rachel incens'd him to that Degree, that he could not forbear giving her this smart, tho' short Reproof: "Am I in God's Stead, " said he, who hath made thee barren?

Rachel thus rebuk'd and brought to a Sense of her Folly, began to think with herself of another Way to supply this Defect of Nature, as she thought, by having recourse to her Grand-mother Sarah's Stratagem; and therefore she, having before discoursed the Matter with her Husband, gives him her Maid Bilbah for an Under-Wise or Concubine, reckoning with herself, that what Children Jacob should have by her Maid, should be her's; for she would cherish them as if they had

End of the Fourteenth Year Jacob propos'd to part, and return home. But Rachel had borne Joseph before that; Gen. xxx. 25. and besides, she had been a barren Wise a good while before she bore Joseph; and had two Sons by her Maid Bilbab, before she conceived Joseph; all which could not have been, if she had not been married before the End of his second Seven Years.

(a) I will give, &c. Some will have this, we will give; that is, I, and my Wife and Friends: But the LXX say, I will give.

(b) Slighted. Our Version renders this bated; but it should have been considered, that the Word which is rendered to bate, does also signify to love less, or take less Care of a Thing, and not to wish or do it any Harm.

been her own. Accordingly, when Bilbab bore Jacob a Son, Rachel claims him, takes him for her own, and names him Dan; she likewise did the same by the second, and called his Name Naphtali. Leab imitates her Sister's Policy, because she thought herself to have done Childing; and gave her Husband her Maid Zilpab to Wise, who had two Sons, which she called Gad and Asser.

By this Time Reuben was grown up big enough to be trusted by himself in the Fields; where, as he was one Day wandering he found some pretty (c) Flowers, which he brought home to his Mother. Rachel seeing them, had a great Desire to have them, and prayed her Sister

(c) Flowers. What these Flowers were is undeterminable, they are render'd Mandrakes, which is an Herb, whose Root is said to have the Likeness of a Man. But some Criticks give Reasons to shew that these could not be the same. However, it is certain, that whatever they were, the Versions could not have chosen a more improper Word than that of Mandrakes, to express the Hebrew Word Dudaim, Gen. xxx. 14, 15. For the Mandrakes have nothing in them which should render them so passionately desireable, either as to Smell, Taste, or Virtue: Whether we suppose that Rachel desired them to fatisfy her Hunger, according to Josephus; or whether we suppose with some Rabbies, that she was to make a Philtre or Love-Drink of them; or to help her to have Children; or, with others, that she desir'd them only for the Smell: For it is an ill scented, stinking Fruit, of a cold Quality, stupefying and poisonous; and all that is alledged to the contrary, evidently false and sabulous, as Antoninus Deysingius has proved. But it is not in the least probable, that Rachel was under a Necessity of desiring a Fruit which the Shepherds could scarcely eat in the Fields, when they could find nothing else; nor that she stood in need of any Thing to make her beloved of her Husband, who gave her Marks of the most tender Assection. Besides that Leab, who was in Comparison despised by Jacob, would not have parted with it to Rachel, had it been proper to beget Love.

Nay, the Time, in which Reuben found this Dudaim, does not suffer us to believe that she defired to eat them, nor that they were Mandrakes: For it is observ'd, that it was in the Days of Wheat-Harvest, that is, at the End of April or Beginning of May, which was the Time of their Harvest in Palestine, and in which the Mandrakes only did begin to bud, not producing their Fruit till Autumn, This has obliged Junius, Tremellius, &c. to render this Word by those of fine and lowely Flowers, and some Rabbies by that of Violets and Jessamines; which agrees pretty well with the Time of which Moses speaks, and to the Expression of the Spouse in the Canticles. Others think that this Word denotes the Lily; which in Syria is of a most agreeable Beauty and Smell; and this feems to be with some the true Signification of it: But then Rachel needed not to have been so defirous of having them from Reuben, if they had been fo common as to growin the Fields. In fine, it is most probable they were Flowers, but what Sort is hard to guess at, tho' it may reasonably be supposed very scarce, otherwise confidering the Difference between Leab and Rachel, the latter would have gone or sent for them, rather than have been beholden to the Son of her Rival. That which renders this Difficulty more unsolvable, is the rare Mention of the Word Dudaim, it being no where made use of in the Holy Scriptures, but here and in Canticles vii, 13.

to give her some of them. Leab thinking Rachel had too great a Share in her Husband's Affection, and forgetting that her Sister, not herself, was Jacob's Choice, answers her somewhat churlishly, "Is it not " enough, said she, that you have taken my Husband from me, but you must take away my Son's Flow-" ers too?" Rachel might have retorted sharply, but having a Mind to the Flowers she would not contend, but proposed an Agreement. Jacob in course was that Night to have been Rachel's Bedfellow; therefore she tells her Sister, that, if she will give her some of the Flowers, she shall enjoy her Husband's Company that Night. Leab likes the Proposal, and they agree upon it; and Leab, to make fure of him, went out in the Evening to meet Jacob at his Return from the Field; and having acquainted him with the Terms of their Agreement, invites him to her Apartment, and had his Company that Night.

Leab, who but a little before thought she had done Childing, conceived again, and brought forth her sisth Son, whom she named Islachar, because he was the Fruit of her Hire. After that, conceiving again, she had a sixth Son, whom she named Zebulun; and at last she bare Jacob the only Daughter we read he had,

whose Name was Dinah.

Hitherto Rachel had no Issue of her own Body: But now it pleased God to remember her; and having by long Barrenness corrected her inordinate Desire of Children, he at length hearkened to her Request, and blessed her with a Son: Upon which rejoicing that God had taken away her (d) Reproach, and predicting that the Lord would give her another Son, she called the Name of this Boy Joseph. try; therefore putting Laban in mind, that the Time for which he had contracted to serve him was now expired, he desired him to deliver him his Wives and Children and send him away. This was very disagreeable Discourse to Laban; who acknowledging the great Advantages he had received from Jacob's Service, and that he was sensible the Lord had blessed him for his Sake, he earnestly importuned him to tarry still with him, offering him at the same Time what Wages he would ask. Jacob was as sensible of the Benefits of his Service as Laban, and valued himfelf upon them, telling him how, by the Bleffing of God upon his careful Management, his little Flock was increased to a Multitude, wishing him to consider how his own Family was increased, having now many Children, for whom it was Time to make some Provision, and therefore infifted upon his Return to his own Country. Laban could not hear of parting, and therefore presses him to stay, offering him his own Terms. Jacob, overcome by Laban's Importunity, told him he should give him nothing; but if he approved of the Terms he should offer, he would continue in his Service. The Terms were these: They should pass through the whole Flock both of Sheep and Goats, and separating the speckled Cattle from the white, Laban's Sons should take Care of the spotted Flock, and Jacob of the white: and then whatsoever spotted or brown Cattle should be produced out of the white Flock, which he was to keep, should be his Hire. Laban readily closed with these Conditions, and accordingly they parted the Flocks, delivering the spotted Cattle to Laban's Sons, and the rest to Jacob to keep: And Laban, that he might prevent any Intercourse between them, set them three Days Journey asunder.

GENESIS CHAP.XXX.
Jacob fets rods before the flocks.

GENESIS 30 Nerse 38.

And he feithe rods which he had pilled before the flocks in the gulters in the watering-troughs, when they came to drink

The Flocks being thus disposed, the (e) Divine Wisdom by enlightning Jacob's Understanding, put him in a Way to improve his own Stock, and at the same Time to lessen that of Laban for his Covetousness. Jacob takes Twigs of green Poplar, Hasel, and Chesnut-Trees, and peeling off the Rinds in strakes, made the White to appear in the Twigs; which he placing in the watering Troughs, when the Cattle came to drink in Ramming-time, they seeing the speckled Twigs conceived and brought forth speckled Cattle. Besides, he took special Care to lay the Twigs before the lustiest and strongest Cattle; but before the Weak and Feeble he did not lay any: By which Artifice he procured to himself not only the greater Number, but the ablest and strongest. Laban envying Jacob's Prosperity, repented of his Bargain, and several Times altered the Agreement, which God still turned to Jacob's Advantage. And now Jacob having been twenty Years in Laban's Service, he happened to over-hear his Brothers-in-Law Laban's Sons grumbling and complaining, that he had raised himself a fair Estate out of their Fortunes; and having observed for some Time Laban's Coolness and Indisference, he began to think of leaving him, and returning to his Father's House, which God in a Vision obliged him to do; but before he put this in Execution, he thought it adviseable to consult his Wives, and to draw them to consent to go along with him; and sending for them both into the Field, that he might with the more Freedom and Privacy discourse with them, he communicated his whole Design to them; telling them he had observed, that their Father's Carriage of late

Here is a Reward of Jacob's Dependance on Previdence for his Wages; for he had found so much Fraud in his Father-in-Law's Dealing, that he had little Reason to trust to his Honesly. And in the same Instance God remember'd Laban's unrighteous Dealing with Jacob, how he deceived him in his first Marriage, giving him his deform'd Daughter Leab instead of the beautiful Rachel; and how out of a covetous Desire to serve himself upon him, he had contrived Ways to detain him in his Service a Now therefore God takes from Laban the Riches he had before given him for Jacob's Sake, and bestows them upon Jacob: And that in such a Manner, as Laban could neither help himself, nor justly find Fault with Jacob.

towards him was very much changed; though he knew not for what Cause; for he appealed to them concerning his Fidelity and Diligence, and their Father's unfair Dealing towards him, in deceiving him, and changing his Wages so often: But God had turned all their Father's Contrivances against him to his Advantage, and had taken away their Father's Cattle and given them to him. Then he told them the Lord had lately appeared to him, and put him in Mind of the Vow he had made at Bethel, in his Pasfage from Canaan thither (of which he had formerly given them an Account at his first Coming) and that the Lord had now commanded him to return to the Land of his Kindred. His Wives having heard him very attentively, declared themselves of his Opinion concerning their Father, and consented to go with him, desiring him to set out when he pleas'd, and they would attend him. Jacob therefore preparing all Things for his Journey, mounting his Wives and Children upon Camels, set forward with all his Cattle and Goods which he had gotten in Haran, taking the Advantage of his Father-in-Law's Absence, who was at that Time gone to shear his Sheep; which likewise gave Rachel Opportunity to steal and carry away his (f) Teraphim. Jacob passes the River Euphrates, and

(f) Teraphim. The Word Teraph fignifies in general the compleat Image of a Man, 1 Sam, xix, 13. More particularly it fignifieth an Idol, or Image made for Man's private Use in their own Houses; so that these Images seem to have been their Houshold Gods; Wherefore hast thou stole my Gods? My Teraphim, Gen. xxxi. 30. And the Man Micab had an House of Gods, and made an Ephod and Teraphim, Judg. xvii. g. The Manner how these Images were made, is fondly conceited among the Rabbies; They kill'd a Man that was a First-born Son, and wrung off bis Head, and seasoned it with Salt and Spices, and wrote upon a Plate of Gold the Name of an unclean Spirit, and put it under the Head upon a Wa!!, and Way Jacob took in his Flight.

lighted Candles before it, and worshipped. With such Lakan spake, say they. But without Controverly, the Teraphim which Michal put into the Bed, I Sam. xix. 13. was a compleat Statue or Image of a Man. The Use of these Images was to confult with them as with Oracles, concerning Things unknown for the present or future. To this Purpose they were made by Astrologera under certain Constellations capable of heavenly Influences, whereby they were enabled to speak. The Teraphim bave Spoken Vanity, Zach. x. 2. And among other Reasons, why Rachel stole away her Father's Images, this is thought to be one, that Laban might not by confulting with these Images discover what makes

make to Mount Gilead; and tho' he had the Advantage of three Days before Laban pursued him, yet in seven Days Time Laban came up with him.

At his first setting out after Jacob, no Doubt, Laban pursu'd him with a Mind whetted with Revenge; but God in a Dream by Night charged him not so much as to speak roughly to Jacob. Therefore the next Morning, when he with his Kindred came to speak with Jacob, he in soft and quiet Words expostulated with him the Unhandsomeness of the Action in so slily stealing away from him, carrying his Daughters away like Captives, and not suffering him to take Leave of them or their Children, and to send them away with an Equipage becoming their Rank; telling him, it was very unadvisedly done of him to give such a Provocation, confidering it was in his Power to have done him Hurt; nay, he plainly hinted he would have done it, had not God appeared to him, and laid a Restraint upon him. But Laban did not only chide Jacob for his Unkindness, but charg'd him with Thest, faying, "Tho' thou had ever so great a Desire to re-"turn to thy Father's House, yet why didst thou steal " my Teraphim?

Jacob excused his clandestine Departure from Laban, by telling him, he was afraid that, if he had acquainted him with his Purpose, he would forcibly have detained his Daughters; but as to the Theft (not knowing that Rachel had stolen the Teraphim) he warmly reply'd, "With whomsoever thou findest thy Teraphim, let him not live." And to vindicate his Innocency, he bids Laban search his Goods in the Prefence of his Friends; and if he could find any Thing of his, he might take it. Upon this Laban searched the Tents of Jacob, Leab, and the two Handmaids; and not finding what he look'd for, went into Rachel's Tent. Rachel was partly put to it, for she very well knew, that if the Idols should be found in her Custody, both her Father and her Husband would be Vol. I.

highly offended with her. She had but just Time, whilst Laban was searching the other Tents, to contrive how to conceal them; which she did by putting them into the Camels Furniture, and having set herfelf down upon them, Laban enters the Tent; whereupon keeping her Seat, she begged his Pardon for not rising to salute him, alledging for Excuse, that the Custom of Women was upon her. Laban in point of Modesty desills from any farther Search, not suspecting the Trick his Daughter put upon him; upon which Jacob very sharply reproached him for his unjust Suspicion, appealing to Laban's Friends to judge between them. Then recounting the long Servitude he had held him in, his Faithfulness, Care, and Diligence in his Service; the Hardships he had under gone therein both by Day and Night, and the hard and unequal Terms he had held him to all along, he concluded thus, " Except the God of my Father had " been with me, surely thou hadst sent me away " empty: But God hath seen my Affliction, and the "Labour of mine Hands, and rebuked thee yester-" night.

This Charge of Jacob's was so just, that Laban could make no Defence for himself; and therefore he thought best to let fall the Debate; and changing his Resentment to a Fit of Fondness, calls Jacob, his Wives, Children, and all that he had his, and pretending for that Reason, he would not hurt them, lest therein he should hurt himself, he proposed a Covenant of Peace between them, which they did by erecting a Pillar or Heap of Stones for a Memorandum of it, and they took an Oath of each other, that neither of them should invade the other, and that Jacob should not missise his Wives. After this, Jacob gave them an Entertainment, and next Morning, Laban having embrac'd his Daughters and their Children, returned home.

This Rencounter had not a little ruffled Jacob's mild Disposition, and therefore God, to comfort and confirm him in an Assurance of the Divine Protection, was graciously pleased to send his (g) Angels, who met him on the Way: Which Jacob espying, he said, This is God's Host.

No sooner is one Storm over, but another threatens. Facob being now near the Confines of Edom begins to recollect, that he was within the Reach of his incens'd Brother Esau, whom he had highly provok'd, and in what a revengeful Humour he left him; and considering that in all this Time (which was Twenty Years) he had received no Account from his Mother of the Abatement of his Brother's Resentment, which she had (b) promised to do when she found it, he thought it adviseable to send a pacifying Message to him, to know what Temper he was in before he came near him. Jacob therefore instructing the Messengers, order'd them to address themselves to him in these Words: "Thy Servant Jacob saith "thus; I have sojourn'd with Laban, and stay'd there "till now; where I have exceedingly inrich'd myself, " and now I have fent to acquaint my (i) Lord with

(g) Angels. Interpreters conclude these to be two Hofts or Armies of Angels; whereof one was that of the Guardian Angel of Mesopotamia, who with his Company conducted Jacob fafely to the Confines of Canaan; where the Guardian Angel of Canaan with his Company received him into their Care. And the is inferr'd from the Necessity of Jacob's being exposed to the dangerous Treachery of Laban, and the Cruelty of E_{fau} , which made Providence more particularly careful of Jacob, to whom the Promiles were made. But confidering the Etymology of the Word Mahanaim (which fignifies Two Armies o Camps) there is probable Ground for the Corjecture of the Interpreters and others.

(b) Promised. See Cen. xxvii. 45.

nour and Dominion conferred by God upon him: but patiently waiting for the Execution of God's Will, he kept himfelf within the Bounds of Nature, and reverenced Efau as his elder Brother. Befides, it may be question'd whether $\mathcal{J}a$ ccb meant any more by thefeWords (Lord) and Servant) than what was customarily used among all Sorts then, especially by those who had aMind to ingratiate them selves with others. That the first Use of the Word Lord between Man and Man was a mere honorary Compliment, and practifed fi:st among the idolatrous and Heathen Nations, appears from the Children. of Heth (who were Heathens) calling zibram Lord and Prince; and from them. came to be taken up and used by the Fathers and People of God afterwards, as many Things besides were contracted by conversing with them. However, it is while liere, that Jacob thro' Fear of Esau used the Words, thinking that he might thereby please and soften the rugged Humour of his haughty Brother.

"this, that I may find Favour in thy Sight." The Messengers set out, and soon return, giving Jacob fuch an Account, as put him into a terrible Fright for they brought no Answer from E au, but only told Jacob, that his Brother Esau was coming to meet him at the Head of Four hundred Men. Jacob immediately concludes from the Number of the Men, that his Brother came against him with an hostile Intent, which threw him into a great Distraction of Thought: He was too weak to fight him; and his Retinue too heavy and cumbersome to fly with; at last he comes to this Resolution, viz. to divide his Company and Cattle into Two Bands; which being set at a convenient Distance, he hoped that if Esau should fall upon one of them, the other might have Opportunity to escape.

This was Jacob's human Contrivance, but his Safety lay in a divine Protection; which he had lately in the like Distress experienced, when his Uncle Laban pursued him. Therefore, as then, so he now addresses himself to God in this earnest Supplication. "O "God of my Father Abraham and Isaac, which " saidst to me, Return to thy Country, and I will "do well by thee: I am not worthy of the least of "thy Mercies; but thou hast increased my Stock; " for when I passed over this River sirst, I had no-"thing but my Staff, and now I am become a Mul-"titude: Deliver me, I pray thee, from the Hand of " my Brother, for I fear his Malice, lest he smite me " and mine. Remember how thou saidst, I will " furely do thee Good, and make thy Posterity as the Sand of the Sea, which cannot be numbered for "Multitude." Having thus implored the Divine Protection, he bethinks himself of another Expedient to solten his Brother's Resentment. He might perhaps think that his Brother looked upon his first Message as a dull dry Compliment, an empty Piece of Formality; and therefore, since he had by his Messengers acquainted his Brother that he was grown so rich, he resolves to send him a very handsome Present; but fearing he should be upon him before the Present could be delivered, he was forced to take it of that which came first to Hand; which was thus: Two hundred She-Goats, and Twenty He-Goats; Two hundred Ewes, and Twenty Rams; Thirty Milch-Camels with their Colts; Forty Kine, and Ten Bulls; and Twenty She-Asses, with Ten Ass-Foles; all in separate Droves, ordering the Servants to keep them at a reasonable Distance, charging the Servant that followed the first Drove to deliver the Present to his Brother; the same he delivered to the rest; hoping that the Sight of so many and different Presents, delivered in a submissive and obliging Manner, might work upon his Brother's harsh Temper.

The same Night he with his Wives and Children pass'd the Brook Jabbock, himself being the last; and being left alone, there appeared a Man, who (k) wrestled with him till it was Day, and permitted Jacob to prevail; but that he might be sensible he did not prevail by his own Strength, he gave him a Touch in the Hollow of his Thigh, and put the Joint out.

Then said the Man, Let me go, for Day breaketh. But Jacob said, I will not let thee go till thou hast blessed me. The Man then asking him his Name, and he saying it was Jacob: Thy Name, reply'd the other, shall not only be called Jacob, but likewise (1) Israel: For as a Prince hast thou Power with God,

(k) Wrefiled. The Person that is here said to have wrestled with Jacob was an Angel, and the Reason of his permitting Jacob to prevail, was to give him Hope, that in like Manner he should nutigate and conquer his Brother Esau. This was the Opinion of both the Greek and Latin Fathers.

If any should inquire how Jacob's Thigh being put out of Joint should so soon be reduced, and he consequently able to travel, it may justly be replied. That the same Power, which miraculously appeared to him, wrestled with him, and put his Thigh out of Joint, could as easily reduce the Dislocation; for it was all but one Miracle.

(1) Ifrael. It's certain Translations do often contradict themselves, of which we have a remarkable Instance, Gen. xxxii, 28, where 'tis translated, Thy Name shall no more be called Jacob, but Israel. Tho' it's certain this Patriarch was afterwards often called by the Name of JACOB; No more therefore ought to be translated, not only, which it very properly implies here in this Place, and that would take away the seeming Contradiction.

3 and

and with Men, and hast prevailed. Jacob demanded his Name; which he was sliy of telling him; he therefore blessed him, and departed. Jacob, as the Sun arose, passing from the Place where he had this wrestling Exercise, called it Peniel, which signifies the Face of God, because, said he, I have seen God Face to Face, and my Life is preserved.

After this, Jacob proceeded on his Journey, and had not gone far before he espied his Brother Esau coming, attended by Four hundred Men; upon which he began to dispose his Company into the most commodious Order, either for the Reception of his Brother, or Safety of those he most regarded. Putting therefore the two Handmaids Bilbab and Zilpab with their Children foremost, and Leab with her children next; he set his beloved Rachel and her Son Joseph in the Rear, and himselt passed before. When he was come near he bowed himself Seven Times to the Ground, but Esau not able to resist the powerful Impression which Jacob's meek Submission made upon his Spirit, with eager Joy runs to meet him, falls upon his Neck and kisses him: Revenge and murderous Designs are turn'd into Pity and Tenderness; and Esau, who once thirsted after his Brother's Blood, now melts into Tears of Joy at this happy Interview, and nothing but Instances of Brotherly Love and Friendship pass between them.

Esau, thus transported with Joy at the Sight of Facob, with Pleasure surveys his Store, and is with great Difficulty persuaded to accept of a Present. He salutes his Wives and Children, and to shew surther Marks of his Reconciliation and Fondness, offered to bear him Company the remaining Part of his Journey. But Jacob, still retaining his former Jealousy, excus'd himself, by telling him, that the Children and Cattle could not keep Pace with him, without much Fatigue, and therefore desired him to go before, and himself would follow leisurely, as the Children and Flocks Flocks could bear, and that he would wait on him in his own (m) Country of Seir. Then Esau very courteously offered to leave some of his Men to guard and attend him; but Jacob handsomely excused it as an unnecessary Compliment. Upon which they parted very friendly, * Esau taking his Way towards Seir, and Jacob by easy Journeys travelled to Succoth; where intending to settle for some Time, he built an House and Conveniencies to shelter his Cattle.

Afterwards he removed to Salom, a City of Shechem; where having bought a Piece of Ground of the Children of (n) Hamor for a Hundred (o) Pieces of Money, he spread his Tent, and erected an Altar there, and called upon the Name of the Mighty God of Israel.

During Jacob's Stay in this Place, his only Daughter Dinab took a Walk abroad by herfelf, out of Curiofity to see the Women of that Country. It happened, that young Shechem, the Son of Hamor, Prince of that Place, saw her, and falling desperately in Love with her, could not restrain his Passion; but taking Advantage of the dangerous and unlucky Opportunity of her being alone, ravish'd her. Notwithstanding this dishonourable Act, his Soul is so strongly possessed with her Charms, that he cannot live without her; and therefore he importunes his Father had Eliphaz, and the Third Rabuel, and that he left the Land of Canaan to go live on the Mountains of Seir. Moses names the Descendants of Eliphaz and Rabuel, and the Princes of the Tribes of the Edomites, the Kings that succeeded them, and the Chiefs, who govern'd after the Kings. See Gen. xxxvi. and xxxv. 29.

(n) Hamor. St. Stephen, in Acts vii, 16.

calls this Man Emmor.

(o) Pieces of Money. This is sometimes rendered an hundred Lambs, because the Image of a Lamb was stamped upon it.

⁽m) Country. It may reasonably be supposed that Jacob never intended to meet Esau in Seir; because it doth not appear, that he ever did go thither. Besides, it's possible he might apprehend himself not safe in his Brother's Dominions, who might there take Occasion to renew his former Grudge, and in Revenge destroy or enslave both him and his Family.

Esau. Moses gives no further Account of Esau and his Family, only that he had three Wives, Abolibama, and Eda, Canaanites; and Basemath the Daughter of Ishmacl. That the first had three Children, Jehus, Ibelen and Core; the Second to enter upon a Treaty with their Friends, that he might have her for his Wife. Jacob soon heard of this Rape committed upon his Daughter; which he concealed till his Sons were come home; which when they heard, they were incens'd at the Dishonour done their Family, and fecretly vow'd Revenge.

Hamor's Fondness of his Son Shechem makes him foon yield to his Importunity: Taking the Opportunity therefore, when Jacob and his Sons were together, he acquaints them with his Son's Passion for Dinab; intreating them to give her to him; and inviting them to intermarry with his People, offered them the Freedom of the Country, to dwell, trade, and make a Settlement there. And to back these, Shechem (who was present at the Treaty) in general offers them what Advantages they please to ask, bidding them name their Terms, and they should have them, provided they would but give him their Sister. Jacob's Sons neglect no Opportunity of revenging the Affront done their Family by this Rape: Therefore cunningly observing the Fondness of Shechem and his Father to close with them, they insist upon the more high and unreasonable Terms; no less than a general Circumcision will oblige them to accept of an Agreement to settle among and incorporate with them.

Hamor and Shechem readily agree to these Conditions; and when they returned to the Town, summoning their Subjects together, commend the Israelites for a peaceable good-natured People; and that if they intermarried with them, they should be Masters of all their Substance, which was very considerable; and all this to be obtained upon their Consent to be circumcised. The Thirst of Gain soon prevailed upon this silly People, and being back'd with Shechem's Interest among them, which was very great, they all consented, and were every Male of them circum-

GENESIS CHAP.XXXIV.
The Shechemites are flain by the fons of Jacob.

GENESIS 34 Verse 26.

End they flew Hamor and Shechem his fon with the edge of the sword & took Dinah out of Shecheme house & went gut.

Jacob's Sons having thus disguised their Resentment, in deluding the unwary Shechemites, the (p) third Day after they were circumcised, when their Wounds were sorest, put their bloody Purpose in Execution.

(g) Simeon and Levi put themselves at the Head of the Party that was to attack the City, which they boldly entered, and put all the Men to the Sword; and searching Shechem's House, they found their Sister Dinah. After this they fell to plunder, and carried off not only what they found in the City, but all that was in the Field, making the Women and Children Prisoners; and what they could not carry off they spoiled. Thus the Sons of Jacob glutted their Revenge upon the Shechemites for the Rape of their Sister.

Peaceful Jacob knew nothing of this bloody Massacre till it was over; and when his Sons brought the Trophies of their Cruelty to him, he took no Joy in their Conquest; and was so far from approving this rash Action in them, that he reproaches them for their Barbarity, and dreads the Consequence, which might end in the Ruin of him and his Family. But his two boisterous Sons Simeon and Levi, who had been the Ringleaders in this Mischief, took upon them to answer their Father for what they had done, saying, Shechem ought not to have used their Sister like a Harlot,

(p) Third Day. This was the Time, as Physicians observe, when Fevers generally attend Circumcision, occasioned by the Instammation of the Wound, and which was more painful then, as the Hebrews observed, than at any Time else; for which Reason the Sons of Jacob took that Opportunity of selling on the Shechemites, who were then less able to defend themselves.

(9) Simeon. In this Action there are none named but Simeon and Levi, whom we may suppose to be the chief Contrivers and Managers of this bloody Massacre, as being own Brothers to Dinab both by Father and Mother, and elder than the rest, except Reuben, who was of more gentle and humane Duposition;

(as we find in Gen. xxxvii. 22. when he faved poor Joseph's Life; contrary to the Will of his other cruel Brothers) yet it is reasonable to think, that the rest of the Sons of Jacob, who were old enough for fuch an Exploit, and their Servants also, were engaged in this Execution; though these two only, as Authors of the Design, are named. And indeed it is scarcely conceivable, that two Men should be able to master a City, and flay all the Men in it (though they were hurt in so tender a Part of the Body as disabled them from Action and Defence) and should also take all the Women Prisoners, who of themselves may be supposed to have been more than sufficient toover-power two Men.

by which he had dishonoured not only her, but their whole Family.

It is plain, that Jacob's Fear was not groundless, by the Care God took to remove him from the Danger that must necessarily have attended this cruel and inhospitable Fact of his inconsiderate Sons. For tho' they had extirpated one Colony, there were more People that bordered thereabout, who, either in Desence of themselves, or in Revenge for such unjustifiable Dealings, might give Jacob great Uneasiness, if not totally destroy him. God therefore to secure him, bid him arise and go up to Bethel, and dwell there; and erect an Altar there to God, who had appeared to him to comfort and strengthen him, when he fled from the Face of his Brother Esau, whom he then as much dreaded, as he did these People now.

In Obedience to the Divine Call, Jacob strictly charges his Family, and all that belong'd to him, to put away the strange (r) Gods which they had, and be (s) clean, and change their Garments; and then, said he, let us arise and go up to Bethel, the House of God. By these Means Jacob got from them their Idols, and their (t) Ear-rings too. And that these Ear-rings might not be a Snare to him and his Family, as the like were afterwards to (u) Gideon, Jacob resolv'd to make sure of them, as well as of the Idols; and therefore he buried them so privately, that none of his Family should

(r) Gods. Perhaps by this Time Jacob might have discovered that Rachel had gotten and kept her Father Laban's Idols, for which he pursued Jacob; or perhaps they might be some Idols which his Sons had got among the Spoils of the Sheehemites; or it may be, that neither his Wives nor Sons were guilty of, or inclinable to Idolatry, but only his Servants or Slaves might be Idolaters.

(s) Clean, &c. This may probably be meant of abstaining from conjugal Enjoyment, and sanctifying themselves, not only from idolatrous Pollution, but from the late Massacre at Shechem. See Exed. xix. 10, and 15. But that it was a Custom for those that came to appear before the Lord to wash their Cloaths, appears plainly from Exod. xix. 10. Level. xv. 13. and 2 Sam. xii. 20.

(t) Ear-rings. These were worn by some People in a superstitious Devotion, as being thought to have some magical Virtue or Charm in them; and it is not unlikely, that some of Jacob's Servants, if they themselves were not Ishmaelites, might have taken up the Use of Earrings from the Ishmaelites, amongst whom it was atterwards a known Fashion. Judges viti. 24.

(u) Gideon. See Judges vili. 27.

know where they were, to take them up again; for he hid them under the Oak by Shechem; and then set forward for Bethel; whither he passed in great Quiet and Security; for God had struck such a Terror into the Cities round about him, that notwithstanding the Provocation his Sons had given by the Outrage they had committed at Shechem, no body offered to molest

Being safely arrived at Bethel, he erected an Altar there, as God had commanded him: And upon that Altar, and at that Time, it is supposed he performed the Vow which he had made when God appeared to him in the same Place, as he fled from his (w) Brother Esau. Which when he had perform'd, God appear'd to him again, confirmed his new Name Israel to him, and gave him repeated Assurances of his Promises made to Abraham and Isaac, with new Blessings to himself. Then did Jacob, in the Place where God had now talked with him, erect a Pillar of Stone, as a lasting Monument of his Gratitude and Devotion, pouring a Drink-offering and Oil upon it. In this Place, and about this Time, (x) Deborah, Jacob's Mother's Nurse, died, and was buried under an Oak, which was therefore called the Oak of Weeping.

Jacob having safely arrived at Betbel, makes no long Stay there; but silial Affection prompting him, he hasten'd to Mamre to pay a Visit to his aged Father; and (y) Ephrath being in the Way, they intended to have got thither: But tho' they had but a little Way to it, they could not reach the Town before Rachel fell in Labour of her second and last Child; and having a hard Time of it, the Midwise, to encourage her, bid her not fear, for han's House, till Jacob returning home, she having a Desire once more to see her old Mistress, put herself into the Company. Without Doubt she was very much respected by them, because they bevailed her Death so much, that the Oak, under which she was buried, was called the Oak of Weeping.

(y) Ephrath. This Place was afterwards called Betblebem.

⁽x) Deborab. Who this Deborab was, and for what Reason she is mentioned here, is not clear, and hath given Occasion of various Conjecture among Commentators. Some are o' Opinion, that after she had brought her Mistress Rebecca to her Marriage, and seen her well settled in her Family, she went back to Haran again, and there dwelt in La-

The should have this Son also. Of whom indeed she was delivered, but died immediately; and just before she died, she call'd the Boy's Name Benoni, that is, the Son of Sorrow: But his Father, unwilling to perpetuate the sad Remembrance of so forrowful a Subject, call'd him Benjamin, which signifies the Son of my right Hand: Intimating hereby how dear he should be to him.

Jacob thus deprived of his beloved Rachel, raises a (z) Monument over her Grave to perpetuate her Memory. This was no Doubt an Occasion of great Grief to Jacob, whose Fondness may be measured by the double Servitude he underwent to obtain her: But before he could reach to Mamre a greater Missortune befel him; for Reuben his eldest Son committed Incest with Bilbab, his Father's Concubinary Wise. Jacob soon heard of it; and tho' he took no publick Notice at that Time of it; yet it sate deep in his Mind, and stuck by him to his (a) dying Day,

These two Afflictions sate heavy upon him for a time; but continuing his Resolution of visiting his Father, the Expectation of seeing that good old Man kindles a new Joy in his Heart. At length he reached Mamre, the City of (b) Arbath, where his Grandsather Abraham had for-

(2) Monument. Bochart says this was a very curiously wrought Pyramid, on the Basis of which were disposed twelve very large Stones, hinting the Number of his Sons. In this we see the Antiquity of erecting Monuments and Epitaphs in the Memory of the Dead near the Place of their Burial; of which this of Ruchel is the first that we read of in holy Scripture. Thus Simon Machabee erected a magnificent Monument over the Grave of his Father and Brothers. And St. Jerom, in his Epistle to Marcella, fays, that he himself had performed his Devotions at David's Sepulchre, of which St. Peter, Asts ii. 29. says, And his Sepulchre is now among us.

(a) Dying Day. Jacob, just before his Death, giving his Blessing among his Children, gave Reuben a reproachful Hint of his incestuous Crime; Reuben, fays he, thou art my First-born, and the Beginning of my Strength, the Excellency of Dignity, and the Excellency of Power. This was to have been his Portion, by Virtue of his Birthright, had he not by Transgression forfeited it. But now, being as unstable as Water, (which tho) advanced never to high, falls down aagain) his Doom was, Thou shalt not excel, because thou wentest up to thy Father's Bed, and defiled it, Gen. xlix. 3, 4. So Reuben's Birth-right was transferred to Judah, of whom our Lord was to come, (ver. 8.) from whom also in Time it fell to the Son of Racbel, who in Right should have been Jacob's first Wife, and whom Jacob thought he had embraced, when he begat Reuben.

(b) Arbath. * This was afterwards called Hebron.

merly liv'd, and his Father Isaac then dwelt; who (no Doubt) was overjoy'd at the Return of his Son Jacob, after so long an Absence: Nor could pious Jacob's Joy be less, to find his aged Father living, and in Health.

Faceb had not long enjoyed the Blessing of his good Father's Company, but another Misfortune happened to exercise his Patience: [So variously is the Life of frail Man checquered with the alternate Course of Good and Evil.] His Son Joseph, being about seventeen Years old, was with his Brethren feeding the Flock; and Jeseph observing their wicked Conversation, told Tales (c) of them to his Father. This set their Hearts very much against him, for they could not but look upon him as a Spy upon them, and therefore resolve to remove him: And that which advanced their impious Rage, was the Marks of extraordinary Love his Father shewed him more than to all his other Children; which he did, perhaps, not only as he was the eldest Son of his beloved Rachel, but because he was (d) wise beyond his Years. This was indeed an engaging Quality; and the fond Father, to express his greater Esteem for it than any Endowment in all his other Children, distinguishes Joseph from the rest of his Brethren by bestowing on him a fine Vest of several Colours, little thinking it would breed such ill Blood among them. This Note of Distinction, so soured Ja-

(c) Tales. What Crime it was that occasioned Joseph to tell Tales of them to his Father, is the Subject of Variety of Conjecture among the Criricks and Versions. Some will have it to be their Quarrelling and contentious Way of Living; others, the Sin of Sodomy; others, of Bestiality, &c. But whatever it was, it may be gathered from their Malice to him, that it was no small Crime, because they hated him, even to Death.

(d)Wise, &c. Or, that be was wise as a Senator. The Versions do not seem to have well express'd the Reason for which Jacob loved Joseph more than his Brethren, by these Words, because he was the Son of his Old Age, Gen. xxxvii.

3. For if his Love had been only founded on this Reason, he must have loved Zebulun as well as Joseph, fince he was of the same Age; and he must have loved Benjamin more, fince he was born fixteen Years after Joseph. The Hebrew Text says only, because he was Son of the Elders or Senators, that is, hecause he was their Disciple, in the Stile of the Hebrewes, and therefore the Samaritan, Persian, and Arabick Versions, and the Chaldee Paraphiase render it, because be avas a avise and prudent Son: And it feems that they might be yet better translated, by saying, That he was rvise as a Senator, Wildom being a Quality which makes Parents fond of their Children, and preser them to their Brethren. Temper to the Favourite, but studied all the Ways that Malice could invent to make him uneasy: And that which inhanc'd their Hatred to him was, Joseph's two Dreams, which he very innocently related to them, not suspecting so severe a Resentment from them as he afterwards found. The first was; "That his Brethren and "he binding Sheaves together in the Field, his Sheaf a-"rose and stood upright, and their Sheaves round about fell down before his." His Brethren looking on him with Scorn, replied, "Shalt thou reign over us?"

His fecond Dream was a fresh Aggravation of their Spite, which the harmless Youth, in his childish Simplicity, likewise tells them: "I have seen, says he, the "Sun, and Moon, and eleven Stars fall down before me." Nor could he conceal this Dream from his Father (so strong was the heavenly Impulse upon him) but told it him. Good old Jacob, whether to mitigate the Resentment of his other Sons towards Joseph, or that he thought these Dreams the Effect of an aspiring and conceited Forwardness in him, chid him, saying, "Shall I, and thy Mother, and thy Brethren,

" pay Homage to thee?"

These two Dreams of Joseph were very significant; and tho' his Father was willing thus to make light of them, that they might give less Occasion of Offence to his Brethren, yet they made an Impression on Jacob's Mind. And now, whilst the envious Brothers were ruminating on Revenge, a fatal Opportunity offer'd itself, and the pious Parent becomes the Instrument of delivering his Darling into their implacably malicious Hands. The ten Brethren being gone to feed their Flocks at a Distance in Shechem, old Israel, out of his paternal Care, desirous to know of their Welfare, sends his beloved Joseph to see and acquaint them with their Father's sollicitous Anxiety for their Health. Joseph in ready Obedience goes to Shechem, and not finding them there, wandered about, till a Stranger directed him to Dothan;

Dothan; whither he went; and being come within Sight of them, their Malice, which hitherto lay latent for Want of Opportunity, revived, and immediately came to a fatal Resolution to dispatch him. "See, " cry'd the bloody Brothers, where the Dreamer " comes! Let us kill him, and bury him, and tell our "Father some wild Beast has devoured him; and then "we shall see what will become of his Dreams." But Reuben, who was of a milder Disposition than the rest, would not approve of this bloody Contrivance, and studied to prevent it, dissuading them from shedding his Blood, and rather cast him into some Pit. The rest considering, that if he perished in the Pit, it would anfwer their End, consented to Reuben's Counsel. By this Time the innocent Youth, not in the least apprehensive of their wicked Design on him, was come up to them, and as he was going to deliver his Father's indulgent Commendation to them, they seized and stript him of his fine Vest, and cast him into the Pit, which at that Time was dry and empty. Poor Joseph, extremely frighted at this vile and unnatural Treatment, begged his Life of his cruel Brothers, for he knew he must inevitably perish with Hunger there: But they are deaf to his Cries, being resolutely bent to destroy him. Joseph in vain complains of his hardhearted Brothers, who are so regardless of him, that they had no sooner thus disposed of him, but they sate down, and regaled themselves with what Refreshments they had, whilst he was thus exposed to Famine and Despair. But Providence, the faithful Guardian of Innocence and Virtue, had a watchful Eye over him.

Before these unnatural Brethren put Joseph into the Pit, it was by Reuben's Advice that they did not immediately dispatch him; and now another of them, namely Judah, begins to feel some Pangs of Conscience, which was awaken'd by the opportune Approach of a Company of Ishmaelites travelling from Gilead, and going down to Egypt with Spicery and other Merchandize.

Judab

Fudab lays hold of this Opportunity, and considering with himself that poor Joseph was exposed to certain Death in the Pit, proposes to the rest to sell him to these Merchants, urging the Unnaturalness of being instrumental in the Death of their own Brother, which would bring an indelible Stain of Guilt upon them; but by selling him, they should not only save his Life, but be Gainers by the Bargain. Considering this, they closed with the Proposal; and taking Joseph out of the Pit, notwithstanding his earnest Intreaty, having (now Reuben was absent) no Advocate for him amongst them, they sold him to the Ishmaelite Merchants for twenty Pieces of Silver; and these carrying him to Ligypt, sold him to Potiphar, an (e) Officer of the King, and Captain of his Guards.

Reuben having persuaded his Brothers to put Joseph into the Pit, contrived it on Purpose to preserve his Life, hoping he should find Means to deliver him from thence; and when they had bestowed him there, on some Occasion or other he pretended to leave them: But soon after returning, and not finding Joseph in the Pit, he (f) rent his Cloaths, and coming to his Brethren, he cried out, (g) Alas! the Child is gone; what will become of me, or whither shall I go? (b) But they soon appealed him, acquainting him with what they

(e) Officer. This is in the Text call'd an Eunuch; which cannot be taken literally here of one that was castrated, but of one employed in some high Trust. It was the Custom indeed, and is still in those Parts, to commit the Keeping of the Queen, and Women of Quality to Eunuchs; but Posiphar here cannot be supposed to be such, so he had a Wise, as we may see in the Story of Foseph: Resides it was customary among the Eastern People to call their Nobleinen Eunuchs.

(f) Rent. This was the Custom of those Countries and Times to express the highest Grief; and of which, tho' afterwards more frequently used, this is the first Instance we have.

(g) Alas! Reuben having greatly offended his Father before in his Trespass with Bilhab his concubinary Wife, and probably hoping to have regained his Favour by preserving his favourite Son, and restoring him safe to him, having now lost the Hope of that Advantage, and reasonably fearing that his Father's Displeasure would fall heaviest on him, both as he was highly offended with him already, and as he being the eldest, should have taken most Care of the Younger, was exceedingly troubled for the Loss of Joseph.

(b) But, &c. Here the Story in the Text seems to break off abruptly; but it must be supposed in Parity of Reason, that he join'd with them in contriving to take the Suspicion off to their Father, of having murder'd their Brother, and consequently that they had acquainted hims with the selling of Joseph in his Absence.

had done in his Absence; and then they began to contrive how to manage the Matter to their Father, so as to take off all Suspicion from themselves; which they did by dipping Joseph's Vest in the Blood of a Kid, and sent it to him, with this Message, "This we have " found; see whether it be thy Son's Coat or no." The bloody Fragment too soon convinced poor old Facob to whom it belonged; and not in the least suspecting any human Creature could be guilty of such unnatural Cruelty, concludes some wild Beast had devoured him. This was the greatest Trial Jacob ever yet underwent; the Loss of his beloved Rachel, tho? the Joy of his Soul, and Delight of his Eyes, was a Debt due to Nature, and which she paid in a natural Way; but the Loss of Joseph far exceeded all the rest; he is, as his Father might reasonably suppose, torn in Pieces, barbaroully mangled by a Brute, and cut off before his Time. The mournful Parent is lavish in his Grief, expressing it not after the common but unusual Manner: He not only rent his Cloaths, but put on (i) Sackcloth, and mourned a (k) long Time for his dear Joseph: And when his guilty Sons offered to comfort him, he rejected them, and in Despair declared he would never cease mourning so long as he lived.

But here we must for a while leave Joseph, that we may take Notice of some intermediate Passages. About the Time that this Affliction befel old Israel, his Son Judah had committed a great Fault in marrying a (1) Canaanitish Woman, by whom he had three Sons, Er,

⁽i) Sackcloth. Reuben, as we have hinted before, was the first, we find, that, to express an exceeding Sorrow, rent his Cloaths, which Jacob not only does (tho' it cannot be supposed in Imitation of Reuben, for that to be sure was concealed from him) but cloaths himself with Sackcloth, a Sort of coarse ordinary Habit, used asterwards by the Israelites in Mourning; of which Custom this is the sirk Instance.

⁽k' Long Time. It is not particularly express'd how long Jacob mounted for Jojeph, but it may be supposed to be to the Time that he heard Jojeph was alive in Express which was Two and twenty or (as some will have it) Three and twenty Years after.

⁽¹⁾ Canuantiffe, See Gen. xxxviii. 2. The Transgression of Judah in marrying this Woman led him into a greater attribute II.

Er, Onan, and Shelah; the Occasion of which was a Visit he made to Hirab the Adullamite, with whom he had contracted a Friendship, which proved a Snare to him: For being at Hirab's House, he fell in Love with the Daughter of a certain Canaanite, whose Name was Shuab, and married her, and by her he had the three Sons aforesaid. In process of Time, when Er his eldest Son was grown marriageable, he took a Wife for him whose Name was thamar. But Er proving a (m) wicked Man in the Sight of God, however he might appear to Men, God (n) took him off; after which Judab bids his second Son Onan marry his Brother's Widow, that the Family might not fail for want of Issue. Young Onan knowing that if Thamar should bear him any Children, the eldest would (o) inherit in the Name of his elder Brother that was dead, and not be accounted as his, seemingly obeyed his Father by going to Thamar's Apartment; but he disappointed them both, leaving his Bride unenjoyed by him. But the Manner of his Crime was so provoking to God, that he took him off, as he had done his Brother.

The third Son, whose Name was Shelah, was too young; therefore Judah desired his Daughter-in-Law Thamar to retire to her Father's House, and to continue a Widow till his Son Shelah was grown up, and then he should marry her. Thamar did so, and waited till Shelah was come to Man's Estate; but finding terwards; which was not fully compleated till after J.J.ph. was fold, and gone into Egypt, and therefore M.J.s. deterred the full Part of it, that he might give the Story intire together.

(m) Wicked. Both Hebrevo and Chriflian Doctors agree that Er as well as Onan were guilty of retracting of Gneration, which by the Hebrevos is compar'd to Murder, and is therefore, Gen.
xxxviii. 10 called detestable.

(u) Took, &c. What Sort of Death they died is not mentioned by Moses. Some imagine they were killed by Minodaus the Evil Angel, who sew the libidinous Husbands of Sarra, Tobic in. 7.

Others think God shewed some terrible Judgment upon them, by which it might appear, that they did not die a natural Death, but for their extraordinary Iniquities were taken off by God in an extraordinary Manner.

(3) This was long before the Law, by which it was afterwards injoined, Deut. xxv. 5, and yet, tho' this be the first Mention we have of it, it seems it was then a knew a Castern, and well understood even by young Onan. For he knew that the Issue should not be his, but that the First-born of such Marriage should be reputed his deceased Brother's, and bear his Name, as was afterwards declar'd, Deut. xxv. 6.

no Performance of Judah's Promise, she resents this Neglect, and resolves to be revenged. Watching a Time therefore when her Father-in-Law went to Timnah to divert and comfort himself for the Death of his Wife, with his Friend Hirah, she disguised herself in the Habit of a common Prostitute, and planted herself in the Way that she knew Judab must unavoidably pass to go to Timnah. Judah seeing her, an unlawful Fire soon kindled in his libidinous Breast, and concluding her to be what she seem'd, addresses himself to her, who was as forward to receive him, as he was to offer his Service; only she was resolved to make sure of the Terms of his Entertainment before she would permit him to enjoy her. He promised her a Kid; but she having a further Design upon him, demands a Security for the Performance of his Promise, which they agree to be his Ring or Signet, his Staff and (p) Cloak, and to be deposited in her Hands till he sent the Kid. The Terms being agreed upon, they went together, and she proved with Child by him. Judab retiring, she stay'd not long behind him; but taking the Pledge went home with them, and dressed herself. in her Widow's Weeds. In the mean while, Judab going to the Flock takes a Kid, and fent it by his Friend Hirah to redeem his Pledge: But Hirah not finding her, return'd and told Judah; who, thinking it best for his Reputation to make no further Inquiry after her, said, "Let her keep the Pledge, I will in-" quire no more after her, lest I expose myself.

About three Months after this, somebody informed Judah, that his Daughter-in-Law had played the Harlot, and was with Child. He resenting the Dishonour done to his Family, not confidering his own late Fol-

(p) Clock. Commentators and Versions. Others will have it to be the Mileta or it a Cleak, and seems to take it from the Septuagint, which call it Hormiskon, from the Greek Word Hormos, which lignifies a Shoulder; and this seems the most likely of any.

ly, rashly passes Sentence on her unheard, ordering her to be brought out and (q) burnt. But Thamar producing the Pledge, sent them to Judah with this Message, That he should consider well what he did, for the Owner of the Pledge was the Man by whom she was with Child. Judah seeing himself thus caught own'd the Pledge, and reslecting on himself for the Injustice he had done her in not giving her to his Son Shelah, as he had promised, excused her, declaring she was more (r) righteous than himself, thereby taking the whole upon himself.

The Time of her Delivery being come, she proved with Child of Twins; one of which putting out his Hand, the Midwise tied a Scarlet Thread about it to distinguish him for the First-born; but he drawing his Hand back, his Brother slipt by him, and came before him into the World: Whereupon he was called Pharez, which signifies a Breach; and the other with the Thread on his Hand was called Zara. (s) Thus in-

q) Burnt. As for the Crime of Adultery, of which Thamar was condemn'd, and of which on her Side she was guilty, (for the was espoused to Shelah) it was capital, being punishable with Death; but by what Right or Authority her Father-in-Law passed Sentence upon her, is the Question. The Ancients agree this best, supposing every one to be Judge or Chief Magistrate in hisown Family; and tho' Thamar was a Canaanite, yet as she had married into Judab's Family, and had brought this Difgrace upon it, she was within the Cognifance of him; who may be supposed (by what followed) to have suspended the Sentence, till he had first inquired into the Cause of her being with Child. But however, as one well observes, Judah in this truly personated the Hypecrites, who conceal and favour their own Follies, but fall unmercifully upon others.

(r) Righteous. He does not say that Thamar was more holy or chasse; but more righteous or just: Because Thamar had sinned more grievously in this Fact, it being Adultery as well as Incest in her, but Fornication and Incest in him. Nevertheless she was juster than he in this Respect; for Judah not keeping his Pro-woked her to lay this Trap for him, refolving, fince he would not let her have Children by Shelab, she would have them by him. And thus Thamar may be said to be more wicked in the Sight of, or before God, but juster before Judab.

(s) Thus, &c. Tho' this latter Part of Judab's Story relating to the Incest with his Daughter Thamar was acted after Jofor b was fold, and while he was in Egypt; yet the former Part of it relating to his Marriage with Shuab's Daughter, and the Birth of his Three Sons by her, must needs have fallen out before Joseph was fold. For there being but two and twenty, or at the most three and twenty Years, between Joseph's being sold into Egypt, and Jacob's going thither to him; it could not be, that in so short a Space Judah could marry a Wife, having three Sons at three feveral Births by her; marry two of those Sons successively to one Weman; defer the Marriage of the third Son to the fameWoman, beyond the due Time; afterwards himself have Sons by the same Woman (his Daughter-in-Law) and one of those Sons, Pharez, beget two Sons, Ecznon and Hamul, Gen. xlvi. 12. before Jacob went down to Egypt.

In the Beginning of Joseph's Story his Grandfather Isaac was alive and in Health, who lived longer than any since Terab; being an hundred and eighty Years old when he died, which was in the Year of the World 2229, and was buried by his Sons Esau and Jacob in the Cave that is in the Field of Machpelah near Mamre, which Abraham had bought of Ephron the Hittite

We will now return to Joseph; of whom the last Account that we gave was, that he was fold to Potiphar, Captain of the King of Egypt's Guards, who was not a little fond of his Bargain, when he found what a faithful Slave he had bought: And that which advanced Joseph still more in his Master's Favour was, that he was sensible that the Lord made every Thing to prosper that he undertook. Prosperity and Faithfulness are indearing Qualities in all, but chiefly in a Servant; which recommended Joseph so much to Potiphar, that, as it were, dismissing himself from any farther Trouble, he made him Steward over his House, leaving his whole Estate within and without Doors to his Care and Management; by which he drew a Blesfing upon all that he had.

Poor Joseph, thus happily placed, might reasonably expect to lead a comforcable Life, tho' in Slavery, and might hope for Liberty as the Reward of his faithful and advantageous Service. But his Virtue must pass some severe Trials before he can assure himself of an establish'd State of Peace and Tranquillity.

Nature had been very bountiful to Joseph in bestowing on him a most beautiful Form, to which his early Years added a female Sweetness, as his Sex did a manly Grace. His Charms were not long unregarded; for his Master's Wife soon grew enamour'd of him, and after all the Signs of her Desire to draw the virtuous Youth into a wanton Familiarity with her fail'd, and that her eager Passion more strongly pressed her, she resolves to break thro' the Rules of her Sex, and court him in plain Terms.

It was not long before an Opportunity offered, the bufy Fiend Luft feldom failing to affift his Servants. Potiphar being one Day upon Duty, and the rest of the Servants disposed at a Dislance about their Work, none but the handsome Hebrew and his lascivious Mistress were in the House. The Lady's Passion had long racked her Thoughts how to contrive to come at her beautiful Slave; at last this fatal Opportunity offered, which she as readily embraced, and in downright Words asked him to lie with her. This, from one of her Sex and Quality, was a great Surprize to our virtuous Innocent, who knew no other Way of Dealing with her, than first to expostulate the Heinousnels of the Crime, and then give her a positive Denial. "You see my Master, says he, has trusted me "with his whole Fortune, and the Management of it, to that he knows not what is in the House, and has reserved nothing to himself but you, who are his Wife: With what Face then can I be so ungrateful 46 to him who hath promoted me, and reposed so "much Confidence in me, as to violate his Bed, and "offend God?" Joseph hoped this Repulse would have mortified her lewd Delire; but she grows more eager and impatient, and taking the forefaid Opportunity, she caught him by the Cloak, and pressed him to lie with her. He not knowing how otherwise to get from her, left his Cloak in her Hand, and fled.

Despairing now of ever obtaining her Desire, and fearing a Discovery of her lewd Passion, being agitated by Revenge, she resolves to prevent his accusing her, by making the first Charge against him; and therefore politickly making a sham Outcry, and holding Joseph's Garment in her Hand, some of the Servants that were nearest to the House ran in to her Assistance. "See, faid she, how my Lord hath encouraged an (u) "Hebrew to expose us to Scorn and Infamy!" This she spoke with Design, to set them against Joseph (because the Egyptians hated the Hebrews) and to engage them to take Part with her, if Joseph should insist on his Innocence. Then craftily going on with her Story, she told them, That he came in to force her; but she crying out, he ran away, and left his Cloak. Having thus prepared the Servants to second her Charge against Joseph, she laid up his Cloak as an Evidence against her Lord's Return. Potiphar being come home, The flies to him with Tears, and makes her Complaint to him of Joseph's Insolence in the most aggravating Expressions. The credulous Husband, not in the least suspecting his Wife's Treachery, and considering the Circumstance of the Cloak, without examining Joseph's Virtue, inflamed with Rage and Jealoufy, without further Inquiry, commits him to the Royal Prison.

Friend or Relation to plead his Cause, soon finds the comfortable Effect of an innocent Mind, his Virtue is his Guard, and Providence his Protection, which God, who never leaves his Servants destitute, extended in a wonderful Manner to him, making his Imprifonment the Cause of his After-Greatness; for Joseph, by his virtuous and harmless Deportment, grew into so great Favour with the Keeper, that he committed all the Prisoners to Joseph's Care, and all Things in the Prison were managed by his Order and Direction; for the Jailor was sensible that God prospered him, and he was now Overseer of the Prison, as he had been before of Potiphar's House.

Whilst Joseph was a Prisoner, it happened, that the King's chief Butler and Baker were committed to the same Prison where Joseph was confined, and the Keeper charging Joseph with the Care of them, he waited on them himself; by which Means he grew acquainted with them. In one and the same Night, while they were in Prison, these two Officers dreamed each of them a Dream. Joseph coming into their Apartment in the Morning, and finding them both melancholy, he demanded the Cause of their Uneasiness. They readily answered, and told him, that they had each dreamed a Dream that Night, and being under Confinement, they had no Opportunity of getting their Dreams interpreted. Joseph endeavouring to take them off from that superstitious Humour of trusting to Diviners, or Soothsayers (which was very common to the Egyptians) told them, Interpretations belonged to God, and desired to know their Dreams. The Butler told him he dreamt he saw a Vine, which had three Branches, that by Degrees budded, then blossom'd, and at last bore ripe Grapes; that he held Pharaob's Cup in his Hand, Iqueezed out the Juice of the Grapes, and gave it to Pharaoh to drink. Joseph no sooner heard the Butler's Dream, but he gave him a positive Interpretation of it. The three Branches, says he, signify three Days; within which Time Pharaoh will restore thee to thy Place. This was a joyful Interpretation to the Butler, of whom Joseph desired nothing in Return, but to remember him when he was in his Prosperity, and to intreat Pharaob to let him out of Prison; because he had been fraudulently brought from his own Country, and without any just Cause cast into Prison. No Question but the Butler readily promised, tho' he was long in performing. The GENESIS CHAPXLI. 22 Pharaobs two dreams.

GENESIS 41. Verse 1.

Ind it came to pays at the end of invo full years, that Pharach dreamed, and behold, he Swood by the river; etc.

The Baker hearing what a happy Interpretation the Butler had of his Dream, was the forwarder in telling his Dream also to Joseph. I dreamt (said he) that I had three Baskets on my Head, and in the uppermost was all manner of baked Meats for the King, and the Birds did eat them out of the Basket that was on my Head. Joseph as readily interprets this as the other, but in a different Manner. The three Baskets (says he) are three Days, at the End of which Pharaoh will hang thee on a Gibbet, where the Birds shall devour thy Flesh. The Event, according to Joseph's Prediction, answered; for three Days after, the Butler was restored and the Baker hanged.

Any one would be apt to think that the Obligation the Butler lay under to Joseph should not long have slept in his Breast; but that having, as Cup-bearer, continual Opportunities of remembring Joseph's Condition, common Gratitude might have stirred up some Thought advantageous to Joseph. But God did not think fit as yet; his Virtue had not passed Trials enough, Wherefore at the End of two Years a favourable Opportunity offered itself: For then Pharaoh himself dreamt, That as he was walking on the Banks of the Nile, he saw seven fat Kine which fed in the Marshes; after which he saw seven others frightful to behold, and exceeding lean, which fed along the Banks, and these last devoured the former. This Dream waked him; but falling asseep again, he dreamt a second Dream; which was, That he saw seven beauteous and full Ears of Corn shooting out from one Stalk, and seven others very small and withered devoured the first which were so beautiful. Pharaoh waking in a great Consternation called his People about him, and the Dream making a strong Impression on him, he summoned all his Magicians and Diviners, and told them his Dreams; but there was not one that could expound them.

Now at last did God put it into the Heart of the chief Butler to remember Joseph: Wherefore he, seeing the King's King's Perplexity for want of having the Dreams interpreted, acquainted him, that when he and the chief Baker were under his Majesty's Displeasure in Prison, each of them the same Night dreamt a Dream, which a young Man, an Hebrew, Servant to the Captain of the Guard, did interpret to them, just as the Event answered.

Pharaoh, pleased at this Discovery of an Interpreter, immediately fent for Joseph, and they that went for him brought him hastily out of the Prison; and having shaved and dressed himself, he was introduced into his Presence. Pharaob, impatient to know the Meaning of them, told Joseph he had had two Dreams, which none of his own Subjects could interpret, and was informed he was skilful in the Art of Interpreting.

Joseph, unwilling to assume any Thing that did not belong to him, declined the Character Pharaok was pleased to give him; and told him, It is from God, and not from me, that the King shall receive a happy Exposition of his Dreams. Pharaoh then related to Foseph his Dreams, who told him they both fignified the same Thing, and that it was God's Will thereby to give Pharach to understand what was to happen in the Time to come: That the seven fat Kine and full Ears denoted the same Thing, and signified seven Years of: Plenty: That the seven lean Kine and seven wither'd Ears expressed seven Years of Famine, which were to sollow: That there would be seven fruitful Years, followed by seven Years so barren, that the former Plenty thould be forgot, and all the Country would be confumed with Famine; and that the double Dream was a Token of the Certainty of the Event.

Jujeph, having thus interpreted Pharaob's Dream, proceeds to advite him how to improve the Dreams to Advantage, by making Choice of some wise and able Minister, who under him should be invested with full Power over all Egypt, that he might appoint Officers in all the Towns, who should, during the seven Years of Plenty, lay up in publick Granaries the fifth Part of the Product of the Earth; and that all the said Store should be at the King's Disposal, and secured in the Cities, to be preserved against the seven Years of Scarcity. Pharaoh approved of the Counsel as well as the Interpretation, and is not long in making his Choice; for turning to his own Subjects he said, "Can we find fuch an one as this is, a Man in whom is the Spirit of God?" And then turning to Joseph, said, "Since God hath shewed thee all this, I know none " fo discreet and wise as thou art: Thou therefore " shalt be the Man. Thou shalt be over my House; " and all my Subjects shall be at thy Command: Only " in the Throne will I be greater than thou." Then he bestowed the Ensigns of Royalty upon him, taking the Ring off his own Hand, and putting it on Joseph's, with other Marks of Distinction; and causing him to ride in the second Chariot, ordered his Heralds to proclaim before him (w) Abreth, in Token of Honour and Subjection, as Viceroy of the Country.

The King having invested him with full Power, to engage him more firmly to his Interest, changes his Name from Joseph to (x) Zaphnath-paaneah, and matches him into a Noble Family, giving him for Wife Asenath the Daughter of (y) Potiphar, Prince of (z) On. (2) On. This Place was also called He-Lopolis, or the City of the Sun, from the Worship the Johabitants there did to the Sun. Some take Potiphar, Joseph's Father-in-Law, to have been Priest of On; but the Hebrew Word figuriying indiffereptly Prince of Preft, Tremellius and Jumus render it Prince both here and after in Crap. xlvii. 22, and 26, and give Reafons to prove it should be read Princes, not Prieffe. Some English Translations. render it Prince in the Text, and fet P. ieft in the Margin. And the last Translation, though it renders it Priest in the Text, yet lets Prince and Princes in the Markin. Joseph began his Circuit, and visiting all Parts of E-gypt, he gathered up all the Food which could be spared from present Use, and laid it up in Store-houses. This he continued to do every one of the seven fruitful Years, till he had gotten such a Quantity that it was impossible to keep Account of it. In this fruitful Time God blessed Joseph with two Sons; the eldest of which he called (a) Manasseh, and the younger (b) Ephraim.

And now the seven Years of Plenty being expired, the seven Years of Scarcity commenced; and which was general, not only in Egypt, but in the neighbouring Countries. But in Egypt, by Joseph's Providence, they were furnished with Provision, which he sold out not only to the Egyptians, but to those also that came out of other Countries.

In the (c) second Year of the Famine, amongst those that came to Egypt to buy Food were Joseph's ten Brethren, who by their Father Jacob's Order came for that Purpose from Canaan, where the Famine raged more than in Egypt, because there were no Stores laid up there. Being come into Egypt, they appeared before Joseph, who had the intire Disposal of the Corn; and as foon as they were introduced, they (d) bowed their Heads to the Ground before him. Joseph no sooner set Eyes on them but he knew them; and having a Mind to terrify them (which was but a poor Revenge for what they had made him suffer) and try what Effect some little Severity or Threat would have, to bring them to a Sense of their unnatural Dealing with him, using an Interpreter to avoid Suspicion, he roughly asked them whence they came. They answered, from the Land of Canaan to buy Provisions. He replied, they were Spies, and came to make a Discovery of the Nakedness of the Country. They assure him they came upon no such Design, but only to buy Corn; that they were no Enemies, nor had any Thoughts of doing Harm: (e) That they were all one Man's Sons, that had been twelve formerly, whereof the youngest was with their Father, the next to him dead. But Joseph repeating the Charge upon them, tells them they are Spies: To try them, he would put it on this Issue; "Ye say ye have a younger Brother; agree upon one " of you to go and fetch him, and ye shall be kept " in Prison the mean Time, that I may be satisfied " whether what ye say be true; otherwise, as sure as " (f) Pharaoh lives, I shall look upon you as Spies." Then putting them into safe Custody for three Days, in which Time they might confult what was best to be done, on the third Day he commands them to be brought before him, and turning to them with an Air of Tenderness, tells them that he feared God, and therefore would act justly by them; and being unwilling that their Families should suffer for their Faults, or that they should suffer if they were innocent, therefore (says he) do this to save your Lives: " If ye be " true Men, let one of your Brethren be bound in Pri-" son, and go ye, carry Corn to prevent the familhing of your Families: But be sure to bring your young-" est Brother unto me; so shall you be justified for "honest Men, and your Lives be preserved."

(f) Pharaob. The Egyptians being Idolaters, and using to swear by the Life of their King, some think that Joseph living among them, had learned seme of their Corruptions; and this is the rather believed, because it is rendered By the Life of Pharaob: From which Charge of Swearing Bishop Sanderson defends Julieph, Prælett, z. greed. But at the same Time their own Necessity put them in Mind of the sad Condition of their poor Brother Joseph, who, for ought they knew, might be dead, or under some miserable Circumstance of Life; reproaching one another, they cry'd, " Justly do we now " suffer for our Cruelty to our Brother, to whom we " refuled Mercy, though he begged it in the Anguish of his Soul. Therefore God is just in sending this "Distress upon us." Hereupon Reuben, that dissuaded them from murdering Joseph, and advised them to put him into the Pit, that he might find some Way of preserving him, "Ay, says be, did not I intreat you not "to commit that Crime against our Brother? See, " now his Blood is required of us.

Joseph, as has been said, spoke to them by an Interpreter, who must be supposed absent now, because he heard and understood their Discourse, they speaking freely to one another before him, because they thought he did not understand them: But their Words so affected him, to see them in this Distress (though but a sham one) that he was forced to withdraw for a while to give Vent to his Tears: After which returning, and by his Interpreter conversing with them, he took Simeon, and causing him to be bound in their Sight, he set the rest at Liberty; who having their Sacks by his Order filled with Corn, and Provision given them for their Journey, they loaded their Asses, and departed.

When they came to their Inn the first Night, one of them opening his Sack to give his Ass Provender, spied his Money in the Mouth of his Sack (for Joseph had ordered his Steward to put every Man's Money into his Sack again.) Being surprized at this, he tells the rest what had happened to him; who seeing the Money looked confusedly one on the other, and the Sense of their Guilt concerning Joseph haunting them, they looked upon this as an additional Judgment of Being arrived in Canaan, they gave their Father an Account of their Journey, relating the Treatment they received from the Viceroy of Egypt; how he had fuspected them to be Spies, of which they had no Way to clear themselves but by leaving Simeon bound in Prison as a Pledge till they should bring Benjamin, to shew that what they had told him of their Family was true. This News was very ungrateful to Jacob, which was much increased when, upon the opening of their Sacks, they found every Man's Money in his Sack; for they feared that when they should have cleared themselves of being Spies, this might afford new Matter of Accusation. Upon which the poor afflicted Father breaks into this Complaint, crying, "Ye " have deprived me of my Children: Joseph is dead, " and Simeon is lost to me; and now ye will take my "Darling Benjamin away too. These Things are hard " upon me." Reuben, thinking to perfuade his Father to consent to part with Benjamin, desired him to commit him to his Care, engaging to bring him fafe to him again; " Which if I do not, said he, slay (g) " two of my Sons."

God upon them.

This unnatural Pledge carried but little Weight in it with Jacob, for he was casily sensible how sad a Recompence it would be to him, for the Loss of his Son, to kill two of his Grandsons: So that this Proposal, instead of allaying, did but aggravate his Grief, and made him resolve not to trust Benjamin with them:

"For, faid be, his Brother Joseph (his only Brother by the Mother) is dead, (for so he and they all thought) and he is lest alone; and if any Mischief

" befal him by the Way, then will ye bring down my

"Grey Hairs with Sorrow to the Grave."

In these Sorts of Debates they spent their Time till Necessity put them in Mind of returning to Egypt:

⁽g) Two. Reuben at this Time had which went down afterwards with Jacob four Sons, at appears to m Gen. xlvv. 9. into Egypt.

For

For the Famine increasing every Day, and the Provision they had brought being near spent, Jacob order'd his Sons to repair to Egypt again, taking no Notice of the Obligation the Viceroy had laid upon them, not to see his Face again without their Brother Benjamin. His Sons knew it was in vain for them to go without him; and how to persuade their Father to part with him, was hitherto aninsuperable Difficulty. Reuben had tried his Skill to no Purpose before, all his Rhetorick and Arguments proving ineffectual to move the Patriarch to a Compliance; therefore Judab accosts him in somewhat a rougher Manner, and in very short and downright Terms urges the Necessity of carrying Benjamin with them. " (b) It is in vain, fays he, " for us to go; for the Viceroy folemnly protested "that we should see his Face no more, except we " brought our Brother with us." This put poor Jacob to a great Straight, and drew from him a fresh Complaint: " Why, says he, did ye deal so unkindly by me; " as to tell him ye had another Brother? They in Excuse answered, "I-Ie examined us so strictly of our Fa-" mily and Condition, we could not avoid it; for he " inquired particularly whether our Father was yet a-" live; and whether we had another Brother: Besides; " could we expect that he should oblige us to bring our Brother with us?" Judah observing his Father to begin to waver in his Resolution, reiterates the Necessity of their Return, and presses his Father to confent, faying, "Send the Child with me, and we will e go, that we may live and not perish by Famine. I " will be Surety for him, and at my Hand shalt thou require him: If I bring him not fafe again, then let me bear the Blame for ever."

to a Parent. Wherefore Junius softens the Expression, We cannot go without our Brother, unless we violate our Promise, and hazard the Displeasure of the Vice-roy.

⁽b) It is, &c. Our English and some Latin Versions, as likewise the Septuagint, render this very harshly, and make Judah very bluntly and irreverently tell his Father they will not go without Benjamin; which is very indecent from a Son

At last Fondness submits to Necessity, which drew the good old Patriarch into a Compliance more than all their Reasons and Importunities. "Since there is no "Remedy, said he, take some of the best Fruits, and " carry the Man a (i) Present, some Turpentine, some " Dates, some Storax, Laudanum, &c. Take with " you also (k) double Money, and the Money that was brought back in your Sacks, perhaps it was an "Oversight, and take your Brother Benjamin; and 46 Almighty God incline the Viceroy to be favourable " to you, that he may send back your other Brother and " Benjamin." Then taking Leave of them, he said, "If I be depriv'd of my Children, I am depriv'd." Thus quietly submitting all to the Disposal of Providence, he dismiss'd them; who, having their Brother. Benjamin, double Money, and a Present to appease the angry Governor with, go on chearfully, and hope to appear with some Credit and Assurance before him.

Being come into Egypt, they appeared before Joseph, who seeing them, and Benjamin in their Company, bad

(i) Present. The Versions have ill expressed the Present which Jacob sent to Joseph, Gen. xlini. 11. Carry down the Man a Present, a little Balm, and a little Honey. Spices, &c. For the Text evidently speaks of Fruit, and such Things as were taken from Trees; and the Balm did not grow in Judea, but on this Side Jordan, near Engedi and Jericho, and not on the other Side in the Country of Gilead, where Jacob was then, as several Historians relate. Befides, the Balm was unknown in Judea before the Days of Solomon, in which the Queen of Sheba brought it thither from Arabia Fælix, as J. sephus affirms.

It is evident that the Hibrew Word Nicoth signifies some particular Drug, if we compare Gen. xxxvii. 25. with this Text, Gen. xxxiv. II. And since the Storax is very common in Syria, whence the Arabians transport it elsewhere, it is probable that Aquila had Reason to render this Term by that of Storax, as Bochart has proved at large. He proves also, that the Word Seri cannot signify Balm, but only Rosin or Turpentine, as several have rendered it. And J. H.

Urfin has proved that the Hebrew Word Loth signifies Laudanum.

The Versions likewise consound the Honey with the Dates, because the He-brew expresses both by the same Name.

Some perhaps may wonder that such Things as this Present was made up of could be had in so great a Famine: But let them consider that this was but the second Year of the seven, and these Things not being used for common Food, there might some small Quantity of the old Stock remain.

(k) Double Money It is strange that some should take this double Money to be ordered by Jacob to make Amends for the Money that they brought back in their Sacks, whereas the very next Words in the Text clear that, mentioning the Money sound in their Sacks. This double Money then must be ordered by Jacob upon Consideration that as the Famine increased the Price of Provisions would likewise be advanced; and therefore he ordered them to take the more Money, that they might not be disapapointed.

his Steward to bring them into the House, and provide for their Entertainment, for they should dine with him. The Steward obeyed, and conducted them in. This put them into a new Fright, not knowing the Honour that was intended them; and therefore conferring together, they concluded it was upon the Account of the Money they had found in their Sacks, and that they should be made Slaves upon that Pretence; to prevent which, as they thought, they immediately applied themselves to the Steward, telling him they had found that Money in their Sacks, which they had brought again, with more to buy what they wanted. The Steward bid them fear nothing; for it was their God, and the God of their Fathers, who had put that Treasure into their Sacks; for he had received their Money, and was satisfied; and finding them somewhat dejected, to comfort them he brought forth their Brother Simeon to them, and gave Order for Water to wash their Feet, and that Provender should be given to their Asses.

And now being informed that they were to dine with the Viceroy, they got their Present ready against he came; which he soon did, and they offered him their Present with the most submissive Prostration. Joseph saluted them in a friendly Manner, and asked them how their Father did, the old Man they had told him of, whether he was still alive? They answered him, "Thy Servant our Father is still alive and well:" And they (1) bowed low. Joseph spoke to his Brethren in general, but his Eyes were chiefly employed in surveying his Brother Benjamin, who was most dear to him of any of them; therefore very samiliarly addressing himself to them concerning him, he asked, "Is this your younger Brother, whom you "mentioned?" And not waiting for an Answer, he

thus kindly salutes him: "God be gracious to thee "my Son." Joseph's Affection shewed itself in his Eyes, which forced him to withdraw, that he might not yet discover himself; therefore retiring hastily to his Chamber, he there gave his Passion Vent in a Flood of Tears; which as foon as he had dried up, and washed his Face, that it might not be observed he had wept, he returned very chearfully into the Room to them, giving Order for Dinner to be brought in. Immediately the Tables are spread. Joseph, by reason of his Dignity, fat by himself; for his Brethren there was Provision made by themselves; and for the Egyptians, who were to dine in his Company, by themselves, because the Egyptians disdain'd to eat with such inferior People as Shepherds, for fuch the Hebrews were. The eleven Brethren being placed in their Seats according to the exact order of their Births, could not forbear admiring at the (m) Strangeness of the Thing. However, being kindly entertained (for Joseph sent to each of them their Mess from his Table, but to Benjamin he sent a Mess five Times as much as any of theirs) they drank freely, and were merry with him.

Things succeeding thus happily beyond the Expectation of Jacob's Sons, they might reasonably conclude all Dangers and Storms of Calamity over; but, alas! the sharpest Trial is yet to come: Their hard Hearts, which could not be moved at the Anguish of Joseph's Soul, must be afflicted still more. And tho' Joseph for the Sake of his Brother Benjamin longed to discover himself, yet he delayed to do it for some time, till he had put them into another Fright, to take an innocent Revenge on them for their cruel Usage of him; which he put in Execution thus: He ordered his

Steward to fill their Sacks with Corn, and to put the Money into every Man's Sack; but in the youngest's Sack to put the Silver Cup he used to drink out of. This done, the next Morning early they set homeward; but they were not gone far, when Joseph, calling his Steward, bad him purfue them, and charge them with stealing his Cup. He soon overtook them; and first reproaching them for their Ingratitude, he then demands the Cup. They knowing their Innocence, feemed not affected with the Charge, but, as an Argument of their Probity and just Dealing, they reminded him of their bringing back the Money which they found in their Sacks. But to put the Matter out of all Doubt, in Confidence of their Innocency, they offered to stand a Search under the severest Penalties; " With whom-" soever of thy Servants, say they, it shall be found, let "him die, and we also will be my Lord's (n) Bondmen." The Steward took them at their Word, but with this Mitigation, that only he on whom the Cup should be found should be his Servant, and the rest be blameless. Then every one unloaded his Beast, and as they opened the Sacks he searched them, beginning at the eldest, and so going on to the youngest, found the Cup in Benjamin's Sack. Here was a plain Conviction, and yet no body guilty: The poor Youth on whom it was taken was struck with Horror and Amazement; it was to no Purpose to offer at a Defence, for upon such Demon-Aration none would believe him: Besides, by mutual

The Scripture sometimes gives the Name of Cuddien not only to those that are in Childhead, but likes wise to Persons who are simple and inspecent, and whose Sincerity has not been corrupted by the Malice of the World, as in Mar. 21, 25, and in 1 John ii. 12, 14. It knowise gives the Name of Son to those who are most in Esteem, as in Gen. xliii. 39. For the Quality of Children could neither agree to Jacob or his Some upon that Occasion. The Latins did also use the Word Puer often in the same Sense; and it is manifestly so taken in some other Places of Scripture

Agreement between them and the Steward, Benjamin's Life was forfeited, at least his Liberty. Their Grief and Despair shewed itself in their rending their Cloaths, and not knowing what to say to palliate or excuse the Fact, they silently load their Asses, and in a mournful

Manner return to the City.

Joseph staid at home impatiently expecting their coming, who no sooner entered into his Presence, but they sell to the Ground in a most forrowful Submission: And before they could offer the least Desence or Excuse for themselves, Joseph sternly accosts them, saying, "What is this ye have done? Could you imagine ye should pass undiscovered?" In the Midst of this great Consternation and Fear, Judah prostrating himself in a pitiful Manner, cries out, "We have nothing to say for ourselves: God hath sound out our Sins, and we must remain Slaves with him in whose Sack the Cup was found. Not so, said Joseph, God forbid I should do such an Injustice: He only who fole the Cup shall be my Slave; but as for the rest of you, return home to your Father."

Judah finding the Viceroy begin to melt, took the Freedom to approach a little nearer, and in a very moving Speech repeated the whole Case between them and their Father, in relation to their bringing Benjamin into Egypt, to take off the Suspicion of their being Spies; Then passionately describing the melancholy Condition of their Father for the Loss of his Son Joseph; the extream Fondness he had for his Son Benjamin; the Difficulty they had to prevail with their Father to trust his beloved Benjamin with them, so that himself was forced to become Security for the safe Return of his Brother; and that since his Father's Life was wrapt up in the Lad, if they should return without him, it would occasion his Death, and they should draw the Curse upon themselves of bringing their Father's grey Hairs with Sorrow to the Grave; concluded his Speech with this Petition, Now therefore, I beseech my Lord, let me thy Ser"vant abide here a Slave instead of the Lad, and let him go up with his Brethren; for how shall I see my Father without him?" Joseph was so sensibly touched with this moving Harangue of Judah's, that he could no longer act the majestick Part of Viceroy and Judge; and therefore causing all others to withdraw, that he might with more affectionate Freedom discover himself, breaking forth into a loud Weeping, he cried to his Brethren, "I am Joseph, doth my Fa-"ther yet live?" The Name of Joseph rouzed the Sense of their Guilt, to which the Dread of the Power he had now to revenge himself on them did not a little contribute; so that in this terrible Consuson they were not able to answer him.

Now struggling Nature appeared more plainly in Jofeph's Eyes and Voice; for observing the Disorder of his Brethren, in a compassionate Accent he bids them come near him, and assures them he was their very Brother Joseph, whom they fold; and tho' he had acted with the Austerity of a Viceroy, he still retained the Tenderness of a Brother; and to mitigate the Remembrance of their Cruelty towards him, he bids them no longer afflict themselves with the Thoughts of it, for it was all (0) God's Doing, who permitted them so to dispose of him for their Preservation: "God, saith " be, sent me hither before you, to preserve you a "Posterity in the Earth, and to save your Lives by a "great Deliverance. Ye ought therefore to be convinced that it was not you that fent me hither, but "God, who, by the various Dispensations of his Pro-" vidence hath brought me to this Dignity and Power "here, that I may be an Instrument of preserving the "Family of the Faithful. And that they might not (r) doubt that he was indeed their Brother Joseph, he told them, "Your Eyes sce, and the Eyes of my Brother Benjamin, " (whom my Father will especially regard) that it is I " myself that speak to you. And to comfort my Fa-"ther, tell him of my Glory here, and all that you " have seen; and make haste and conduct him hither." Then taking Benjamin in his Arms, they wept for Joy; and, as a Seal of Pardon for all Offences, he tenderly embraced and kissed them severally, and wept over them. Joseph's kind Carriage and Reconciliation having difpelled their Fears and Apprehensions of the severe Resentment they might justly have expected from him, they took Heart, and conversed familiarly with him.

The Report of the Arrival of Joseph's Brethren soon spread in Pharaoh's Court, which, for the great Respect all had to Joseph, was very agreeable to the King and all about him; who immediately orders Joseph to send his Brethren to conduct his Father, and all that belonged to him, into Egypt, where he should share of the best during the Famine, of which there were five Years to come. Joseph gladly obeys, and accordingly provides Carriages and Food for their Journey. But for a Present is, Governor. Counsellor, or Moderator; for so Joseph by his Wisdom had all the Kingdom of Egypt, and Family of Pharaob, committed to his Care, and therefore might justly be called Father of the Kingdom under the King. Thus Haman is, in Esth. xiii. 6. called a second Father to Artaxerxes; which was reckoned the first Title of Honour and Dignity in the Courts of Tyre, Egypt, and Persia.

And the more to chear his Brethren, and confirm his Love to them, he gave to each of them Changes of Raiment; but to distinguish Benjamin from the rest, he gave him three hundred Pieces of Silver, and five Changes or Suits of Cloaths: And knowing their quarrelsome Disposition, and fearing they should enter into some Debate who was most in Fault for the Injury done to him, he lays a strict

Joseph having dismissed his Brethren, they make the best of their Way to Canaan, where they were joyfully received by their good old Father, especially upon the Return of his two Sons, Simeon and Benjamin, whom he scarce expected to see again. But when they acquainted him with Joseph's being alive, and the Grandeur he lived in, his former Grief revived, and in his Judgment diftrusting the extravagant Account they gave, he had like to have died: But when he saw the Carriages with the Presents and Provisions Joseph had sent for him, his fainting Spirits, like an Oil-spent Lamp opportunely supplied, revived, and in an Exstasy of Joy he cried out, "This " is beyond my Expectation: My Son Joseph yet alive! "I will go and see him before I die." Accordingly he took his Journey with all that he had; and stopping at (1) Beersheba, he offered Sacrifice to the God of his Father Isaac. For as to Ifracl's dying in Egypt, it's plain, that God at the Time of this Vision told him he should die there, Gen. xlvi. 4. for there Joseph is promised to close his Eyes.

(w) Close. From hence Jacob might justly infer that he should die a natural Death, and that his Son Joseph should be with him to the last Moment of his Life; which was a great Comfort to the fond old Patriarch,

(x) Daughters. This will admit of a two-fold Meaning: First, As it was a general Way of speaking, such as Sarab used when the said, Who should have said to Abraham that Sarah should have given Suck to Children? Gen. xxi. 7. whereas the never gave Suck but to one Child, Isaac. Secondly, Tho' Jacob Strictly had but one Daughter, which was Dinab, yet here he may be understood to speak of his Daughters-in-Law.

(y) The Names of Jacob's Family, which he brought with him into Egypt, are particularly expressed, Gen. xlvi. 8, to 25. And both here and Deut, x. 22. are computed to be in the whole Number Threescore and ten Persons. But because there is an apparent Difference between theAccount here, and that which is given by St. Stephen, All vii. 14. the one reckoning Seventy, the other making it Seventy five, it may not be unpleasant to reconcile these two different Accounts from the Opinion of a certain Learned Man. This Difficulty, fays he, will be small, if we tay, that the Places are not parallel: For Moses makes a Catalogue, in which, together with Jacob, his own Offspring only, they that came of his Loins, are comprehended, his Sons Wives being expressy excepted, v. 26. For which Reason not only they who actually went into Egypt with him, but Joseph also, with his two Sons Ephraim and Menasseb, although they were in Egypt before, are contained in the Number Seventy; because they having sprung from Jacob's Loins, and taking their Original from the Land of Canaan, did live as Strangers in the Land of Egypt, and therefore were justly to be reckoned as if they had entered Egypt with Jacob. A special Reason there is also, why Hezron and Hamul, the two Grandsons of Judab by Pharez, are put into that Number, tho' they were born afterwards in Egypt, that they might supply the Place of Judab's two Sons, Er and Onan, who were dead before. But St. Stepben in his Oration doth not let forth Jacob's Genealogy; but declares who they were that Joseph called out of the Land of Canaan into Egypt: For he called more than sprung from Jacob's Loins. There, in the first Place, are to be shut out Judab's two Grandsons Hezron and Hamul, and in the next Place Joseph and his two Sons: Judab's two Grandsons he could not call, because they were not yet born : Himself and his Sons he could not call, because they were in Egypt already. Those five therefore, and then Jacob, whom St. Stephen mentions by himself, being fet aside, there remain of Moses's Number Seventy but Sixty four, viz. the elevenBrethren, one Sister, Dinab, and two and fifty Children of the Brethien; to which add the eleven Wives of the eleven Biethren, whom Joseph must needs call together with their Husbands, and which belonged to the Kindred, you have all his Kindred in threescore and fifteen Souls.

Jacob

Jacob being arrived on the Borders of Egypt, dispatches his Son Judah before him, to receive Directions for going to Goshen; who soon returns to his Father, and conducts him thither; where Joseph with a Train becoming his high Station meets him, and with infinite Satisfaction congratulates his happy Arrival in a Place where he had Power to make the rest of his Life easy and comfortable. Here were the highest Ecstasses of Filial Duty and Parental Affection expressed: Tears of Joy slowed from both Sides; and whilst Joseph was contemplating the Divine Goodness that had restored him once more to the Sight of his aged Father, the pious Patriarch thinking his Joy on Earth compleat, desired to live no longer: "Now, says be,

" let me die, since I have seen thy Face.

After these mutual Indearments were somewhat over, Joseph proposes to his Father and Brethren that he would go and acquaint the King with their Arrival; which he was in Gratitude obliged to do, since the King had sent for them, instructing them at the same Time, that he would acquaint him with their Manner of Life, which was in breeding and nourishing Cattle, that if he should inquire of them what Occupation they were bred to, they should answer accordingly; by which they would secure the Land of Gospen for their Use, where they might live and take Care of their Flocks and Herds by themselves; for the Egyptians did sominate Shepherds, that they would never suffer them to live promiscuously amongst them.

Then Joseph taking five of the most graceful Persons of his Brethren, went and acquainted Pharaoh that his Father and Family were arrived in Goshen, and presented the five he had brought with him to the King, who treated them respectfully for Joseph's Sake; and demanding what they were bred to, they, according to their Instructions answer'd, that they were Shepherds, and humbly begged Leave to settle in Goshen. The King turning to Joseph told him, "The whole Land is at thy Disposal, place them in the best Part of it, in Goshen, if they like that best; and

" if there be any among them of extraordinary Skill

" in their Way, let them have the Care and Manage"ment of my Cattle."

Joseph's Project thus happily succeeding, he introduces his Father to the King, whom Jacob reverently salutes. The King graciously condescending to talk with him, inquires his Age; who tells him he was an hundred and thirty Years old, tho' his Ancestors had lived to a greater Age. Then taking Leave of Pharach, Joseph placed his Father and his Brethren in Rameses, a City afterwards of Goshen, which was the most fertile Part of Egypt, where he nourished them, and provided for them according to their Families, with that Care and Tenderness, as if they had been his Children.

Good old Ifrael and his Family being thus happily disposed, Joseph returns to his Charge. And now the Famine increasing, People from all Parts of Egypt and Canaan repair to Joseph, who furnished them with Provisions as long as their Money held out; by which Means he had collected all the Money in the Land, and brought it into the King's Exchequer: And when their Money failed, they brought their Cattle, and he gave them Bread in Exchange for them. Thus they went on till the (2) sixth Year, and then the Famine pressed them so hard, that they were forced to lay their Condition before him, telling him that their Money was spent, and he having got their Cattle already, they had now nothing left to offer him but their Bodies and Lands, which they befought him in Pity to accept, or else they must perish. Joseph took them at their Word, and in the King's Name, and for his Use, bought all the Land of Egypt, except the Land of the Priests, who having an Allowance from the King, were not compelled to part with cond from the Time that their Money failed, which was indeed the fixth of the feven; Gen. xlvii. v. 18.

⁽²⁾ Sixtb. This generally is tranflated the second Year; but it must not be understood to be the second Year of the seven Years of Famine, but the setheir Possessions: But the rest of the Egyptians sold their Estates; and thus the Land became intirely the King's. Then Joseph repeating the Condition of the Bargain, tells them: "Behold, I have this Day bought "both you and your Land for Pharaoh: Now here is Seed for you, and ye shall (a) sow the Land. But " upon these Terms shall ye hold your Land: Ye shall "every Year give the fifth Part of your Increase to " Pharaoh, and the other four Parts shall be your own " for Seed, and for Food for yourselves and Families."

Thus Joseph settled it a standing Law all over Egypt, that Pharaob should have the fifth Part of the yearly Increase of the Lands, except the Lands of the Priests. As for the common People, Joseph (b) removed them from the Places of their constant Abode to a greater Distance, whereby they in Time knew not where to claim. Thus the Egyptians saved their Lives at the Loss of their Estates and Liberties, and of Freemen became Bondmen; in which Condition they yet rejoiced, and gratefully acknowledged Joseph's Care, calling him their Preserver: And to shew how willingly they submitted to these Terms, which the Sons of Liberty and Property would inveigh against as insupportable, to assure their Prince, notwithstanding this, of their Duty and Loyalty, they unanimously cry out to Joseph, "Let " us find Favour in thy Sight [that those Conditions "may be ratified and we will be the King's Servants."

The seven Years of Famine were succeeded by plentiful and seasonable Years, the Earth resuming its former Fertility, and the whole Land abounding in all the usual Productions of Nature. Twelve of these Years of Plenty Jacob lived to see; at the End of which Nature's Lamp grew dim, and near extinguish'd in him:

the seven barren Years, they might sow leaving none upon their own, he migh in Hopes of Plenty again.

(a) Sow. This being the last Year of and for one upon another's Land, but the better confirm Pharaob's Title to the Whole. Besides, this changing of Habitations shewed they had nothing of their own, but received all of the King's Bounty.

⁽b) Removed. This Joseph probably did, with Intent, that by to displacing and unsettling them from their ancient Seats and Demetnes, and thifting them to

His decayed Spirits warn him of approaching Fate; and each drooping Faculty beats an Alarm to Death. He therefore fends to his Son Joseph, and obliges him by an Oath to bury him in the Sepulchre of his Fathers, which Joseph swears to do: Upon this Jacob bowed himself to God, who, besides all his other Mercies, had given him a fresh Assurance by Joseph's Promise and Oath, that he should be carried out of Egypt into the Promised Land.

Joseph leaving his Father intirely satisfied in the Assurance he had given him, returns home; but is soon recalled by the sad Message of his Sickness: Whereupon he took his two Sons Manasseh and Ephraim, and went to visit him. The feeble Patriarch summoneth all his Spirits, and exerts them so far as to sit up in his Bed to receive his favourite Son. And when Joseph came near him, he (c) recounted to him the Promise which God had made to him of the Land of Canaan: "God Almighty, " said be, appeared to me at Luz in the Land of Canaan, " and blessed me, and said unto me, Behold I will make " thee fruitful, and multiply thee, and will make of thee " a Multitude of People, and will give this Land to thy "Seed for an everlasting Possession." Then taking Joseph's two Sons into a peculiar Participation of this Promise, he adopted them as his own immediate Offspring; as for Reuben and Simeon, fays he, they shall be mine, (so as to become each of them Head of a distinct Tribe in Israel, and to enjoy the Privilege of Primogeniture in Right of their Father Joseph, to whom the Birth-right was transferred from Reuben, because of his incestuous Transgression against his Father:) But as for the Issue thou shalt beget after them, they shall be thine, and shall be called by the Name of their Brethren in their Inheritance. And going on, he gave Joseph a short Account of the Death and Burial of Rachel his Mother.

⁽c) Recounted. Perhaps Joseph might not parated from his Father's Family when know of this before, he having been se- he was but a Boy.

All this while that Jacob was talking with Joseph concerning himself and his Sons, he had not taken Notice that Joseph's Sons were with him, but spoke of them as if they had been absent; but turning to Joseph, and feeing fomebody with him, though he could not well discern who they were, (for his Eyes being dim with Age, and the Children standing between their Father's Knees, he could not distinguish them) he asked, Who are these? Joseph as piously as directly answers, They are my Sons, whom God hath given me in this Place. Then Jacob bids him bring them near him that he might bless them: And kissing and embracing them said to Foseph, in a Transport of Joy, "I was out of "Hopes of ever seeing thy Face again, and now God " hath doubled that Bleffing; for he hath suffered me "to live to fee thee and thy Children.

Joseph placing the Children according to the Order of their Birth, had set Manasseh so as to receive the Blessing of his Father's Right-Hand, and Ephraim that of his Left, guiding his Hand at the fame Time: But Ifrael stretching out his Right-Hand laid it upon the Head of Ephraim, who was the younger, and his Left upon Manasseb's Head; and he blessed Joseph in blessing his Children, saying, "God, before whom my Fathers Abra-" ham and Isaac did walk, the God which fed me all my "Life-time to this Day, and the (d) Angel which re-"deemed me from all Evils, blefs the Lads: And let my " (e) Name be named on them, and the Name of my Fa-"thers; and let them grow into a Multitude in the "Midst of the Earth." Joseph was uneasy that his Father laid his Right-Hand (which carried with it the Preference) on the Head of the youngest; and suppofing it had been done through Inadvertency, he held up his Father's Hand to remove it from Ephraim's to Manasseb's Head, saying, "Not so, my Father; for this 46 is the First-born, therefore put thy Right-Hand up-

" on his Head. But Ifrael, actuated by divine Direction, refused, saying, "I know it, my Son, I 46 know it: He also shall become a People, and shall so be great; but truly his younger Brother shall be er greater than he, and his Posterity shall become a Mul-"titude." Then adding to his former Blessing, he said, "(f) In thee shall Ifrael bless, saying, God make " thee as Ephraim, and as Manasseb;" still setting Ephraim before Manasseh. Then finding himself grow weaker, he said to Joseph, "I am now near my End; " but though I leave you, God shall be with you, and "bring you again into the Land of your Fathers: "And as for thee, my dear Joseph, as a distinguishing "Mark of my Love, I have given thee one (g) Portion 66 above thy Brethren, which I took out of the Hand of " the Amorite with my Bow and with my Sword."

The Conversation hitherto was private, between Jacob and Joseph only: But finding his End very near, he called for all his Sons together, that while he had Strength to deliver his Mind, he might take his Farewel of them; and not only distribute his Blessings among them, but foretel what should befal them and their Posterity in After-times. Then directing his Speech to them feverally, he begins thus to the Eldest:

(f) In thee, &c. That is, when any of the People of Israel shall bless their Children, they shall say, Be thou multiplied as Ephraim and Manasseh are mulciplied. From hence it was the Custom in Ifrael, that Children should be brought to Men eminent for Piety, that they might bless them, and pray over them: Thus they brought little Children to Jesus. But when a Blessing was given by Impolition of Hands, if it was to a Son, he that blessed, said, God make thee as Ephraim and Manasseh; if it was to a Daughter, God make thee as Sarah and Rebecca.

(g) Portion. Since Jacob was to peaceable a Man, that he never, as we read of, engag'd in any martial Enterprize, it may be inquired, How and when he took this Portion of Land, which he here gave to Joseph, from the Amorite with his Sword and Bow, or by Force of Arms? Some refer it to that Act of Si_{-} , meon and Levi, in destroying the Inhabitants of Shechem, Gen. xxxiv. But that cannot be: For, first, Jacob disavowed that Act, and blamed them for it both then and now, Gen. xlvi. 5, 6, 7. Secondly, Those People of Sheckem, whom they flew, were not Amorites, but Hiwites, descended from Hiwi, the fixth Son of Canaan, Gen. x. 17. whereas the Amorites came from the fourth Son of Canaan, v. 16. Others take these Words of Jacob to be spoken in a prophetick. Sense; forestelling what he in his Posterity should do: And through Assurance of Faith looking upon it as done, undertook to dispose of a double Portion (appendant to the Birth-right of Foseph, on whom he had conferred the Birthright) to be possessed by his Posterity.

Reuben.

Reuben, thou art my First-born, the Prime of my Strength, and by Right of Primogeniture wast born to many Privileges and Prerogatives, in Superiority over thy Brethren, and in Power from the double Inheritance annex'd in Course to the Birthright: But these thou hast forfeited by desiling thy Father's (b) Bed.

(i) Simeon in course is next; but he is join'd with Levi, for that wicked Combination between them, in the Massacre of Hamor and his People. Of these therefore facob says, that they were Brethren in Iniquity: Instruments of Cruelty were in their Habitations: Omy Soul come not into their Secrets; let not my Honour be united to their Assemblies; for in their Anger they slew a (k) Man, and in their cruelRage they (l) digged down a Wall: Cursed be their Anger, for it was fierce; and their Wrath, for it was cruel. Thus did facob set forth their Offence in very aggravating Circumstances, to which he pronounces a Sentence proportionate, I will (m) divide them in facob, and scatter them in Israel.

Jacob, having treated his Three eldest Sons with some Severity, softens his Stile, when he comes to (n) Judah;

(b) Bed. When Jacob heard that Reuben had lain with Bitbab, his concubinary Wife, Gen. xxxv. 22. the Text says that he took no farther Notice of it then; but now at his Death he reproaches him severely with it, and gives it as the Reason for which he deprived him of the Privileges of Primogeniture.

(i) Simeon. Reuben having forfeited his Right of Primogeniture, it might be expected, that it should have devolved upon Simeon, who was next: But for his Cruelty to Joseph, and the Idolatry of his Tribe in worshipping Baal-peor, Numb. xxv. the Priesthood, which was the nobler Dignity of the Primogeniture, was transferred to Levi, the third Son; and the Kingdom, the other Part of the Primogeniture, to Judah.

(k) Man. This is by the Figure Synec-deche put for all the Inhabitants of She-chem.

(1) Digged, &c. Meaning the Doftroy-ing and Spoiling the City.

(m) Divide. This dividing may be applied to Simeon, whose Tribe had not a distinct Lot assigned them in Canaan, as the other Tribes had; but they were thrust within the Lot of Judab, Josh. xix. 1. until in the Time of Hezekiab King of Judab, a Party of them smote the Remainder of Amalek, and seating themselves in their Possessions, 1 Chrone iv. 24. were thereby divided from the rest of their own Tribe. As for the Tribe of Levi, it was scattered through all the Tribes, having no peculiar Lot or Share of the Land as the other Tribes had.

(n) Judab. His Mother Leab, Gen. xxix. 35. at his Birth gave him that Name, in Gratitude and Thankfulness to God. But now his Father calls him so for another. Reason, alluding to the Praise his Brethren should give him; and that for many Reasons; mz. z. The Pribe of Judab was the First that enter'd the Red-sea after Moses. 2. After the Death of Joshua, the Tribe of Judab was pitch'd upon to whose Name signifying Praise, it led him to a high Encomium of him. Judah (said he) thou art he whom thy Brethren shall praise for thy Strength and Courage. Thou shalt put thy Enemies to Flight; thou shalt pursue them, lay hold of them, and destroy them: thy Father's Children shall (o) bow down before thee. And then wrapped up in the Contemplation of Judah's Strength and Glory, he breaks forth into these elegant Allegories; Judab is like a (p) Lion's Whelp. From the Prey my Son thou art gone up. He stooped down, he couched as a Lion, and as an old Lion, who shall dare to rouze him? Then describing the Duration of his Government; The Scepter (said he) shall not depart from Judah, nor a Law-giver be wanting of his Issue, till the Messiah come; and unto him shall the gathering of the People be. Then pursuing his Allegories, to set forth the Prosperity and Plenty of Judab's Tribe, and the abundant Fruitfulness of its Soil, he added, Binding his Fole unto the Vine, and his Ass's Colt unto the choice Vine, he washed his Garments in Wine, and his Cloaths in the Blood of Grapes: Signifying that Wine should with them be as plentiful as Water.

Jacob keeping still in Leab's Line passes by Islachar and takes Zebulun; whose Name signfying Dwelling, he only says of him, that he shall dwell at the Haven be Commander in Chief of all the other Tribes, in their Wars, Judg. i. 3. From this Tribe sprang the mighty and powerful King David, his Son King Solomon, and several other Kings till the Baiglo nish Captivity. 4. This Tribe waged War against the Isomaelites, Idumeans, Moabites, Arabians, and other neighbouring Nations. 5. From this Tribe descended Zorobabel, that commanded the People in their Return from Babylon. 6. And lastly, from this Tribe sprang Christ.

(a) Bow down. By this, that the Birthright was transferred from Reuben to Jofepb, 1 Chron. v. 1. with respect to the Prerocative of Primogeniture, which concerned Authority, or Government on ver the rest, is plainly conferred on Jundalo; and so it is explained here, r. Chrona v. 2. For Judalo prevailed above his Brethren, and of him came the chief Ruler, tho' the Birth right was Joseph's, with respect to the Inhantance.

(p) Lion's Whelp. Here are gradually described by the Lion's Age, the Three Degrees of the State of this Tribe of Judah. The First, it. Infancy under Josephua, The Second, its virile State under David. The Third, its confirmed State under Solomon.

of the Sea; and that he shall be an Haven for Ships, and his Border shall be unto (q) Zidon.

Coming next to Islachar, he compares him to a strong Ass couching down between two Burdens; seated in a pleasant and fertile Country; but being naturally slothful and pusillanimous, loved an inglorious

Ease more than active Liberty and Bravery.

The good old Patriarch having gone thro' with Leab's Offspring, he takes the Handmaids Sons next, beginning with Dan Son of Bilbab, Rachel's Handmaid. Dan fignifying Judging, he faid, Dan shall (r) judge his People, as one of the Tribes of Israel; that is, tho' it was smaller, yet it should bear as much Authority as another. That it should be like a (s) Snake on the Way, or an Adder in the Path, which bites the Horses Heels, and makes them throw their Riders. Here Facob cried out, (t) I have waited for thy Salvation, O Lord.

When he spake of Gad, alluding also to his Name, he said, A Troop shall overcome him: But he shall overcome at last. By which he is thought to have referred to what was afterwards performed by Jephthab, who was of this (u) Tribe.

Of happy After he foretels, his Bread shall be rich, and Kings should reckon it a Dainty : which denoted the exuberant Richness of the Soil.

(9) Ziden. Accordingly this Lot came forth, Jojh. xix. 11.

(1) Snake. This seems to intimate that the Danites should prevail more by Poulicy and Stratagem, than by open Force: Which Samson's Dealing with the Philislines, Judg. Ch. xiv. and xv. and the Danites taking Laift, Ch. xviii. confirms.

(t) I bawe. Modern Interpreters are very reliculously funciful in the Applica-most extravagant and contrary Meanings. There being no Context to make it out, it looks more like a recommendatory E-jaculation on the Death bed. But if we suppose something more than ordinary impress'd the Patriarch's Spirit at this Time, might be not have some Sense or Foresight of the Mischief the Danies afterwards brought upon themselves, when having risted Micha's House, and robbed him of his Gods, they fell into

(w) Naphtali.

⁽r), Judge. This was fulfilled in Samfon, yet was no more than Ifficebar did by Tola, Judg. x. x. But it is supposed, the Reason why this was said of Dan, was to shew that the Sone of the Handmaids (of which Dan is the first named) the as born of Bond-women, they were in that Respect inferior to the rest of their Brethren, should notwithstanding obtain some Share in the Government.

(w) Naphtali (says he) shall be like a Tree having Grafts, shooting out pleasantBranches in its Generation.

And now he comes to his beloved Joseph, on whom he expatiates very largely, thinking he cannot say enough of him. Joseph (says he) is like a fruitful Bough of a Tree planted near a Spring, whose (x) Branches run over the Wall. And having thus set forth his future Greatness in his Posterity, he looks back and recollects his past Troubles. The (y) Archers (said he) have sorely

(w) Naphtali. The Versions do generally confound the Animals that the Scripture speaks of, or transform them into other Things, and sometimes Trees or Plants into Animals. Thus here in Gen. xlix. 21. they make Jacob, prophelying of the Tribe of Naphtali, say, Naphtali is a Hind let loose, be giveth goodly Words. Interpreters differ in nothing for much as this, even those that are for it, confounding their own Opinion; for they would feem to justify it by applying to Barak, and cite the Song upon the Victory over Sifera in Defence of it, which is very wide from the Purpose, that Song being composed by the Prophetess Deborab. Besides, as to the Gift of Eloquence, which they suppose given to this Tribe, we do not find it any where recorded, that Naphtali or his Postcrity have been more eloquent than the other Tribes, nor that there was ever any School or famous City, or any Prophet of that Tribe; not to mention, that the Galileans, whose Countay was made a Part of that Tribe, were to clownish and unpolished, that those of Yerusalem could not endure their Gibberiffs. There, are many Fables produced to justify this Verfion: But fince neither Moses, nor any of the Prophets have spoken of this, it talls of itself; which made the learned Bochart translate the Words of the Original thus, Naphtali shall be like a Tree bawing Grafts spooting out pleasant Branches. This seems to be most rational and natural, not only from the Words, but from the Senfe; if we confider, that Jucob compares this Tribe to a Tree, us he does that of Joseph in the following Verse 3 and as good Men are often compared to fine Trees, Pf. i. 3, and xcii. 12. either because of their Frustfulness, (Naphtali having brought but Four Children to Egypt, Gen. xlvi. 24. which in less than 215 Years produced more than Fifty Thousand, Num. i. 42.) or upon the Account of the Fruitfulness of the Country which fell to their Lot, which Alofes and Josephus represent as the richest of all Judea. And it is thus that the Septuagint, the Chaldee Paraphrase, and the Arabick Version which Bochart consulted in Szueden, do translate the Words, without following the Pointing of the Maforets; which has often corrupted the Meaning of the Text, and has given Occasion to modern Interpreters to translate this Verse after a Manner which makes the fecond Part of this Oracle to have no Relation to the first, and supposes the Hinds were let loofe after they were taken, contrary to the Custom of Hunters.

(x) Branches. By this rhetorical Amplification. Jacob fets forth the Strength of Joseph's Family, and the large Extent of his twofold Tribe, Ephraim and Manafelo, which at the first Numbering of the Tribes, yielded of Men able to go forth to War Threescore and twelve thou-fand and seven hundred Men. (Num. i.) And at the second Numbering, Four-score and five thousand and two hundred (Num. xxvi.) far exceeding any other Tribe.

his Brethren may undoubtedly claim the first Place: For they are exprelly said to have hated him, Gen. xxxvii. 4. and to have increased their Hatted to him, v. 5. 8. to have conspited his Death, v. 18. and asterwards to have sold him, v. 28. Next to them his lewd Mistress, and, by her Means, his jealous Master Potipher may be reckoned among these Arechers that forely prieved him.

grieved him, and shot at him and hated him: But his Bow abode strong, and his Hands and Arms were made strong by the Hands of the mighty God of Jacob: From thence is the Shepherd, the (2) Stone of Israel: To which thou wast advanced by the God of thy Father, who shall help thee, and by the Almighty, who shall bless thee with the (a) Blessings of Heaven above, Blessings of the Deep that lieth under, Blessings of the Breasts and of the Womb. Then adding, the Blessings of thy Father have prevailed above the Blessings of my Progenitors, unto the utmost Bounds of the (b) everlasting Hills: And then, to centre them all in Joseph, he says, They shall be on the Head of Joseph, and on the Crown of him that was separated from his Brethren.

Jacob concludes with Benjamin his youngest Son, of whom he said, Benjamin shall be ravenous as a Wols: In the Morning he shall devour the Prey, and at Night he shall divide the Spoil. In which Words he as aptly as briefly foretels the sierce and cruel Nature of that Tribe, exemplified, amongst other Instances, in that of the (c) Levite's Concubine.

The good old Patriarch, having deliverd himself thus to his Sons, gives them his Blessing, not according to his own natural Affection or Inclination, but according to the divine Direction then given him; and

(2) Stone. So the last English Translation has it, making the Shepherd and Stone synonymous. That of 1610, reads it, of rukom was the Feeder appointed by the Stone of Israel; taking the Stone to be Christ, and the Shepherd or Feeder appointed by him to be Joseph. But Tremellius and Junius make Joseph to be both the Shepherd and the Stone, viz. of Refuge to Ifrael. There is an Ellipsis, or Desect in the Sentence; which Interpreters supply, as they think best. However it be taken, undoubtedly Jacob had a Regard to Joseph's constant resisting the Assaults of his Mistress, and patiently bearing the Severity of his Master, and likewise to his taking Care of and feeding both Ifrael and the Egytians, and others, as a Shepherd provides for his Flock.

(a) Blessings. These were Terms comprehensive of all outward Blessings.

(b) Everlasting Hills. Which is a Term of Duration commonly used in Scripture: But Deut. xxxiii. 15. seems to explain this Text more directly, where Moses repeating this very Blessing of Jacob on Joseph, does not seem so much to regard the Comparison of Hills in respect of Duration, as in Point of Blessing, which God more largely dispensed in Hills and Mountains.

GENESIS CHAP.L. Jacobs burial.

GENESIS 50. Nerse 13.

His fons carried him into the land of Canaan, and buried him in the cauce of the field of Elachpelah etc.

putting them in Mind of his Death, says, I am going to be gathered to my People, I charge you bury me with my Fathers in the Cave that is in the Field of Ephron the Hittite; which that they might not mistake, he further describes thus: In the Cave that is in the Field of Machpelah, which is before Mamre in the Land of Canaan, which Abraham bought with the Field of Ephron the Hittite, for a Possession of a Burying-place. And to engage them the more to perform his Will in this, he tells them, There Abraham and Sarah his Wife were buried; there Isaac and (d) Rebecca his Wife were buried; and there I buried Leab. And to assure them of their Right to that Buryingplace, he tells them further, That the Field and the Cave therein were purchased not only of Ephron, but of the Children of Heth. Having thus given his last Charge to his Sons concerning his Funeral, he (e) laid his Feet on the Bed and quietly expired.

The Loss of so good a Father must undoubtedly be very afflicting to so numerous a Family, whose chief Support depended on the Piety of him; yet we find none of Jacob's Sons that paid the least Demonstrations of silial Affection and Duty with so much Devotion as the Pious Joseph. He could not see his aged Parent's Face, tho' dead, without kissing, and bathing it with his Tears. And having thus given vent to his Passion, he commanded his Servants the Physicians to (f) imbalm him; which accordingly they did. And when the usual Time of Mourning was over, Joseph intreated some of Pharaoh's Courtiers (for as he was a Mourner, it was not proper for him to ap-

⁽e) Laid. Whilst Jacob was prophelying and blessing his Sons, he sat on the Bed, his Feet hanging down; but when he had done talking to them and taken his Leave of them, he gather'd his Feet into the Bed, and departed.

⁽f) Imbalm. This being the first Mention we have in Story of Imbalming the Dead, may well countenance a Supposition, that the Israelites here learning it of the Egyptians, and practising it afterwards on great and solemn Occasions amongst themselves, as in 2 Chron. xvi. 14. and John xix. 40. it might from them come into use among Christians.

pear in his Presence) to acquaint him, that his Father just before his Death had obliged him by an Oath, to bury him in the Sepulchre of their Family in the Land of Canaan; and therefore to beg Leave of the King for him to go and bury his Father, upon Promise to come again. The King readily consents, and Joseph sets forwards, attended not only with his own and his Father's Family, but with the chief Officers of the Houshold, and Nobility, who, to honour Joseph and grace the Funeral, would bear him Company, partaking in all the Solemnity performed to the Memory of his deceased Father.

After some Travel they came to the Threshing-floor of Atad, where they made a Halt; and Joseph made a solemn Mourning for his Father Seven Days together. The Cananites who inhabited the Land, seeing the Egyptians mix themselves in these Obsequies, were amazed, and thinking they had the greatest Concern in this Funeral Lamentation, could not forbear saying, This is a grievous Mourning to the Egyptians; From whence the Name of that Place was called Abel-Misraim, that is, the Mourning of the Egyptians. This Solemnity being ended they went on; and being come to the Field of Machpelah, which Abraham had bought for a Burying-place, they buried Jacob in the Cave there: And having thus performed Jacob's Will, they all returned to Egypt.

So long as Jacob lived, Joseph's Brethren knew themselves secure; but now their Father was dead, their former Guilt return'd, and suggested to them the just Revenge Joseph might take of them for the former Miseries they had occasioned to him. Wherefore they consider they foon agreed upon, and made in dead Father, whose Memory they knew was dear to pious Joseph, their Advocate; and framdes in Jacob's Name, they sent it to their mer in these Words. Thy Father commanded us before before he died, saying, "Thus shall ye say to Joseph: "Forgive I pray thee now the Trespass of thy Bre-"thren, and their Sin; for they did Evil unto thee; " but pardon them, not only for my fake, but be-"cause they are the Servants of the God of thy Fa-"ther." This Message was artfully worded; for they, fearing that the supposed Request of their dying Father might not be prevailing enough now he was dead, make God their Intercessor. But there was no need of fuch moving Arguments to Joseph's compassionate Temper: Their Diffidence of his Good-nature is as afflicting now, as their Offence was formerly to him. He wept at the Delivery of the Message; and sending for them, they falling down at his Feet in the most abject Manner, he tenderly dismisses their Fears, and comforts them: "Revenge, says be, belongs to God, " " and I forgive you. For tho' ye designed Ill against "me, yet God turned it to Good, making me, thro " your Malice, an Instrument under him to save much "People alive, and you especially, as now is evident. "Therefore fear no Hurt from me, for I will protect " and cherish you and your Families". Thus the pious Joseph dismissed his Brethren, with the Assurance that they should always find in him an affectionate Brother, and a constant Friend.

Joseph lived four and fifty Years after his Father's Death, having the Comfort of seeing himself the happy Parent et a numerous Offspring in his two Sons Ephraim and Manasseh, to the third Generation. And now finding himself near his End, he sent for his (g) Brethren, and faid thus to them: " My Death is " at Hand, but tho' I leave you, yet God will furely " remember you, and bring you out of this Land, " unto the Land which he sware he would give to

This he obliged them to by an Oath. And Joseph, being an Hundred and ten Years old, died; and in order to perform their Oath, they imbalmed his Body, and kept it in a Cossin till the Time of their Deliverance should come.

The Story of JOB:

AN

FIRSTBOK.

OSES, intending to carry on the History of Jacob and his Family, to the End of their Deliverance from the Egyptian Bondage, without Interruption, lays by the Story of Job, which, according to the Series of Time, should come in,

in the Time of the Israelites Servitude, and before their Deliverance: For which Reason I chose rather to insert it here, than to place it so far out of its due Course of Time, as the Compilers of the Bible have done.

Various have been the Conjectures concerning Job; few agreeing in the same Opinion, who he was. Some will have him to be descended from Naber the Son of Terab and Brother of Abraham: Others will have him to be descended from Esau, and to be Jobab his Great-Grandson. But the most probable is theirs who suppose him to have sprung from Abraham by Keturah, his second Wife. With this several Circumstances concur: For Job is said to be the greatest and most considerable Man for Wealth of all the Inhabitants of the East, into which Country Abraham sent his Sons by (b) Keturah. And amongst the People of the East are reckoned the (i) Midianites, descended from Midian, one of Abraham's Sons by (k) Keturah.

Taking it for granted, that this Story is (1) real, we will proceed to consider the Time when he lived. That Job lived before the Law, may be gathered from his offering Burnt-offerings in the Land where he lived, which God accepted and commanded; which Offerings were (m) forbidden by the Law in any other Place, than that which the Lord should chuse in some one of the Tribes of Israel. And that he lived after Jacob, may be inferred from the Character given him by God, (n) That there was none like him in the Earth, for Uprightness and the Fear of God. Which large Encomium could not be allowed to any, while Jacob lived, who was God's favourite Servant, descended from the Family of the faithful Abraham, in a direct Line from Isaac: Nor can it well be supposed, that so great a Commendation as that could be given after Jacob, to any whilst Joseph lived, who in moral Virtues, and other Excellencies, made as bright a Figure as any in his Time.

⁽¹⁾ Read. From the Uncertainty who Job was, some have taken the Liberty to question. Whether he was at all? Whether in Point of Fact, it be firicitly true, that there was fuch a Man, named Job, who underwent those Triais and Sufferings, which in this Book are recorded of him? Or whether it was only an in-Aructive and parabolical Poem, devised and composed by some of the devout Ancients, on Purpole to inful into the Reader those excellent Principles delivered in it. But besides other Arguments that might be uiged to prove the Reality of the Story, drawn from the Names of Ferions, Perp'c, Countries, and some particular Passages therein mentioned, the Credit given to it by God thro' his Prophet Ezekiel, Ch. xiv. 14. and his Apostle St. James, Cb. v. 11. in citing it, and referring to it, is enough, I think, to gain Belief with all, who have a due Regard for those Writings, that it is a real History.

⁽m) Forbidden. Deut. xii. 13, 14. (n) That, &c. See Job i. 8. and Cb. ii. 3. After

After these Conjectures, tho' the precise Time of 70b's Birth cannot with sufficient Ground be ascertained: Yet there is a general Concurrence in Opinion, that he lived in the Time of Ifrael's Bondage in Egypt; fome placing his (a) Birth in the same Year in which Facob went down into Egypt; and to date the Beginning of his Trials in the Year that Joseph died, being the seventy first of Job's Life.

Nor are there less various Conjectures about the Time of writing this Story; some will have it written after Moses's Death; others think it written by Moses himself. It matters not who was the Compiler: 'Tis certain the whole Story, as it is, is an admirable Commentary on the first Book of the Pentateuch: And therefore no great Quantity of Historical Observations can be expected from it.

St. Jerome is unnecessarily curious in defining the Stile of it: It is sufficient, that in Job we have the Character of an excellent Person exhibited to us by God himself, adorned with all the Virtues that can render him acceptable to God, and desirable by Men; to both which he is elegantly and briefly described doing his Duty, (p) fearing God, and shunning Evil.

How considerable Job was in the World, may appear from the Vastness of his Stock, which consisted of Seven thousand Sheep, Three thousand Camels, Five hundred Yokes of Oxen, and five hundred she Asses.

Then for personal Blessings, God had been very liberal to him, for he had seven Sons and three Daughters; who inherited their Father's Name, more than his Virtues, being wholly given up to worldly Pleasures. For when they were grown up, and remov'd from him, they

(o) Birth. It might not probably be so Year of his Age. At which Time, for any Thing that appears, he might well be without Competitor or Equal. And there being somewhat more than Sixty Years between Joseph' Death and Moses's Buth, the Story of Joh may firly enough fall within that Internal of Time.

(p) Fearing. Sec Job, Ch. i. w. 1. took took their Turns to feast from House to House, every one his Day, and (q) invited their Sisters to feast with them. When they had gone their Round, pious Job considering with himself the Dangers that attend such Junkettings, and fearing lest his Children in their Merriments might have committed some Extravagancies, he kindly sent and exhorted them to purify themselves by Repentance and other Ceremonies, in order to prepare them to facrifice to their offended God; the good Man himself rising up early in the Morning, and offering Burnt-offerings for them according to the Number of them all, And this he did from Time to Time after their (r) revelling Feasts. This pious Care of Job endeared him to God, who expressed his high Esteem of the good Man, at a Time when the (s) Sons of God came to present themselves (t) before the Lord; at which Time also Satan, the Adversary, came among them, to feek an Opportunity of doing Mischief. Then the Almighty, to set forth Job as an exemplary Patte'n of Virtue and Righteousness, said to Satan; "Hast "thou considered my Servant Job, that there is none " like him in the Earth, a Man exactly good, and one "that feareth God and shunneth Evil?" The malignant Adversary, unwilling to own that Job served God out of a religious Principle, but for Self-interest, reply'd: "Doth Job serve thee for nothing? Hast thou not in-" clos'd him on all Sides, and fecur'd him and all that

(s) Sons of God. That is, Good Angels; as, on the contrary, Satan is called the

Angel of Death.

(t) Before the Lord. Some will have this Convention of the Good Angels to be real, but at the same Time such as is agreeable to the Nature of Spirits; and that they met in a certain Place, and Satan with them, before the Angel who, in the Room of God, presided over that Assembly: But so, as Satan was seen of God and Angels; but he, by Reason of his Fall, not able to see God or them. Others take it to be parabolically spoken, that the Truth may be the better understand: For the Decrees of God, the Ministry of his Angels, and the Machinations of the wicked Angels, are often in Scripture express'd under the Form of the Judgments and Counfels of Kings; as we may see, I Kings xxii. 19. Zach. iii. 1. But be it how it will, it's certain these Things are not meant in a gross literal Sense, but as God is pleased to accommodate himself to our Understanding: For Satan can no other Way be faid to come into the Presence of God, nor to talk with him, &c. nor the Angels (properly speaking) to come to God, since they are always in his Presence; nor can any Day be assigned to God, who is without Time, infinite, immense, &c.

"he hath from the Reach of Misfortune and Danger: But withdraw thy Protection, and suffer him to be afflicted with the Loss of the mighty Wealth thou hast heap'd upon him, and he will curse thee to thy Face." God knew the Integrity of Job; and that the Exercise of it might redound to his Honour, and turn to the good Example of others, he exposed Job to the Trial. "Behold, says be, all that he hath is in thy Power; but dare not to touch his Person." The malicious Fiend having obtained his Permission, soon sets his wicked Engines to work; and, to sour Job's pious Temper into Blasphemy the more readily, attacks the good Man at once with a Crowd of Miseries, in all Probability too much for human Nature to bear.

Satan takes his Opportunity to begin his Assault upon Job on the Day that his eldest Son was in Course to entertain his Relations. He had in Readiness stirr'd up the (u) Sabeans to make an Inroad upon Job for Booty; which they did with fuch Fury, that but one Servant escap'd to bring the unhappy News to Job; "Thy Oxen, said " be, were plowing, and the Asses feeding by them, and the Sabeans fell upon them, and took them away; " and they have put all thy Servants to the Sword, ex-" cept myself." Job had not Time to restect with himself whether this might be the Effect of common Depredation, or a Judgment upon him for the Folly of his Children; for this Messenger is immediately succeeded by another, who in a great Consternation tells him, "The Fire of God is tallen from Heaven, and hath " burnt up the Sheep and thy Servants, and confumed "them all, and I only am escaped to tell thee." This Account was very shocking, and the Calamity coming from Heaven might make it look like a more immediate Judgment than the former; but before Job could animadvert upon it, a third Messenger rushes in upon him and tells him, "The Chaldeans in three Parties fell upon

"the Camels, and have carried them away, and all thy "Servants have they put to the Sword, but myself." Thus was Job stript of all his Substance in one Day, and he that in the Morning was the richest Man in all the East, before Night was perhaps the poorest Man in the World. The malicious Devil finding these Attempts too remote to raise that Passion which he expected in Job upon this sudden Course of Missortunes, to crown all, resolves to touch him in a more sensible Part, and to come as near him, as the Bound set him by the Almighty would permit. This Prince of the Air therefore raising a very great Storm threw down the House, where Job's Children were then merry-making, upon their Heads, and flew them all. And that Job might not have any Time to digest the Grief of his former Losses, before the last Messenger had made an End of relating to him the Loss of his Camels, another comes in Haste, and in a great Fright tell him, "That as his Sons and Daughters were "eating, and drinking Wine in their eldest Brother's "House, there came a great Wind from the Wilderof ness, and smote the (w) four Corners of the House, and "it fell upon the young (x) Men, and they are dead, and "I only escap'd to tell thee." This was a home Stroke indeed, and touch'd Job in a tender Part. The Death of his Children, all at one Blow, affected him deeply;

(70) Four Corners. This hath been a mighty Subject of Jest and Ridicule among the Atheists, who would fain argue a great Impropriety of Expression, and from hence invalidate this, and many fuch like Expressions in the holy Scriptures. They ask, how in the Course of Nature the Wind could blow from any four Points of the Compass at once? I will not answer them from the Extraordinariness of this Event, their Patron, the Prince of the Air, having at this Time an unlimited Power over the Elements to attack Job where he would, except in his Person, or how he pleased. But in Storms, especially such violent ones, as are even now-a-days usual, Navigators would be puzzled to fay, whether the Wind comes directly from one Point of the Compais, or from several at one and the same Time. And therefore I shall refer them to an Heathen Author, whom they will fooner believe than reveal'dReligion; and it I tell them that Virgil is of this Opinion, I do not question but they will believe him. Let them confult Vugit's Description of a Storm in his first Mineid, and there they will find thice Winds attacking the Seas at once.

Una Eurusq3 Notusq; ruunt, creberq; Africus---- (Procellis (x) Men. From the Dignity of the Masculine Gender, .he Word Men here comprehends both Sexes; to that Job's Daughters, as well as his Sons, were killed with the Fall of the House.

but the Circumstance and Manner of their Death was very afflicting, considering how unprepared Death found them.

These repeated Calamities did not betray Job to any Irregularity or Indecency; the only Vent he at first gave to his Grief was rending his Mantle, the common Token of Affliction and Sorrow in those Eastern Countries and early Ages of the World: Then deliberately sollowing the other usual Customs of Mourning, he shaved his Head, and in humble Submission of Mind sell upon the Ground and worshipped. His Misery could not make him forget his Duty, and therefore he humbled himself under the Divine Hand, without whose Permission he well knew none of these Missortunes could have befallen him.

The Devil's great Expectation was from this last Trial; he knew Job could with a serene Mind bear temporal Losses, which Time and Industry might repair, but this Wound of Nature in the Death of his Children, he thought would have transported him into some indecent and intemperate Expression against God. But to his great Disappointment Job stands the Shock, and in humble Acknowledgement of his own Meanness, cries, " Naked came I out of my Mother's Womb, and naked "shall I return to the Earth, the common Womb " and Mother of Mankind." And then in a quiet Refignation and Thankfulness for what he had received at the I-land of God, tho' now deprived of all, he gives up all for lost in this World, and says, "The Lord gave, " and the Lord hath taken away; bleffed be the Name "of the Lord." Thus the pious Patriarch's Virtue shined in his Sufferings, which, great as they were, could not make him deface the Character his Maker had given him by the least Murmur or Repining. He knew it was but just, that he, who gave, should have Power to resume his Grant when he pleased; and therefore instead of curling, as Satan had maliciously suggested he would, he blessed God for all his Dispensations whatsoever, and proved the Devil a Liar. But

But the restless Fury resolves not to leave him thus: For when the Sons of God (y) presented themselves as before, the Lord proposed Job again to Satan, who had crowded himself amongst them, as an Instance of a perfect and upright Man, that feared God and avoided Evil. Still, says God, he holds his Integrity, tho' thou movedst me against him to destroy him without Cause: His Piety appears in the Greatness of his Sufferings, and his Faith and Resignation are compleat. To which the old Deceiver wittily and maliciously reply'd, "Thou " hast hitherto permitted me only to try him at a Di-" stance, but let me touch his Person, and he will still " blaspheme." The Almighty knew that these Exercises, tho' sharp to Nature, would redound to his Glory, and turn to Job's Advantage; therefore resolving in his divine Providence to arm Job with Patience to bear them, and in the End to recompense all his Sufferings with an extraordinary Reward, he enlarges Satan's Commission, but yet with a Limitation; Behold, says he, he is in thy Power, but touch not his Life.

The busy Fiend over-joyed at the Inlargement of his Power, questions not in the least to make an easy Conquest over Job's Virtue; therefore he immediately falls upon him, whilst the Sense of his late Losses remains upon him, and afflicts him from Head to Foot with Boils and Ulcers. Never was human Nature more disguited than poor Job's Body in this loathsome Condition: His Skin studded with nasty Scabs and Blotches; not arising from any peccant Humour in his natural Constitution, which Medicines might correct, but inflicted by malicious Policy which raised them to the highest Extremity of Pain, that, if possible, might make fob despair and blaspheme. Nor were his Pains short or intermitting, like Fits and Pangs, but lasting for a continued Series of Time; and that which increased his Mitery was the Nastiness of his Distemper, which rendered him not only odious to himself, but loathsome to others: For not only his(z) Relations and Friends abandon'd him, but his very menial Servants withdrew from him, leaving him destitute of all human Help. He, who but a few Hours before was the greatest Man in the Country, in whose Prefencethe(a)young Men were afraid to appear, and before whom the Aged stood up; to whom Princes paid the most awful Reverence, and Nobles in humble Silence admir'd; divested of all Grandeur, sits mourning on a Bed of Ashes, and instead of Royal Apparel, is cover'd with stinking Sores and Ulcers. He, who was but the other Day the Delight of Mankind, is now become the foulest of Objects; and a very Dunghil upon a Dunghil. All keep at a frightful Distance, and with Horror behold him as a most loathsome Monster. And to add, if it was possible, to the Misery of Job, the Wife of his Bofom, from whom, more than all the World, he might reasonably expect the most comfortable Assistance, instead of pitying him in this deplorable Condition, treats him with the utmost Scorn and Contempt, and reproaches him for his Virtue. "Dost thou still, said she, re-" tain thine Integrity to a God that afflicts thee? (b) Curfe "him and die, that thou may'st be out of thy Pain."

(b) Curfe. From the Ambiguity of the equivocal Word in the Hebrero, which fignifies to bless, as well as to curfe, great Disagreement hath arisen amongst Interpreters; and the Words have been variously render'd. They that make J b's Wife to bid him curse God and die, toppose Job to have lived after the Law was given (Levir. xxiv. 15, 16.) which made it Death to curje God; and that his Wife (an Arabian and Heathen) knew the Law and the Punishment for Blasphemy, and spake thus to him, not to reproach him, but in Pity to him, that he might be deliver'd from his Pains. But general Confent places Job before Moses, and God's accepting, and commending his Sacrifices, offered in the Land of Uz, prove that he Vul. I.

lived before the Law, which made it penal for any Man to offer Sacrifice in any other Place, than before the Ark or Tabernacle: Nay, he devout Gentiles came this ther to worthip; of which we have an Instance in the Ethiopian Eunuch, Activiti, 27. But if Job had lived after this Law was given, yet it is unlikely that his Wife should so soon have learn'd it, at such a Distance: Nor was it obliging to the Gentites, unless to those that lived among and under the Joseph Occonomy 5 neither was there any in the Land of Uz, who had Power to have executed such allaw on Job, had he curied, as their supposession had nim-But, to make thort this Part of the Argument, whatever may be conjectured about Job's itring under the Law, it is custom that the Law is not mention'd in any Part of the Book of Job, either by himself or any of his Friends; tho' there was Occalled enough for taking Notice of it.

tho' it was so provoking as to let loose the Reins of his Temper, which he had hitherto restrained, and with some Warmth force him to rebuke her, saying, "Thou talkest like a weak Woman: Shall we rejoice in Prosperity, when it pleases God to bless us with it; and shall we not patiently bear Adversity, when he pleases to visit us?" Thus did the Almighty preserve and support Job under the Loss of his Estate and Children; under the Extremity of his Pains, the Deservants, and the Provocation of his Wife. All which Torments crowding one upon the Neck of another, could not betray Job to entertain the least offending Thought, or utter an indecent Word.

The Misfortunes and Afflictions that befel Job being so remarkable, soon spread about the neighbouring Countries, and from thence to more distant Regions; till at last they reach'd the Ears of his old Friends Eliphaz the (c) Temanite, Bildad the (d) Shubite, and (e) Zophar the Naamathite, who no sooner heard of the sad Condition of their Friend Job, but they made an Appointment to go together and pay him a Visit, and comfort him. These three Persons being Men of (f) Figure and Condition, it must take up some Time to make the Appointment, and then to travel together to see Job; so that poor Job must continue a considerable

But after all other Conjectures, since the Devil's Design was to make Job curse God, why may it not be supposed, that he instigated her to persuade her Husband to it? not with respect to any penal Law (for that is ridiculous to imagine) but in Expectation, that so jopen and bold a Blasphemy would provoke the divine Justice immediately to strike him dead, and thereby deliver him from his intolerable Miseries.

But, however it was, it is certain by Job's Answer, that she gave him no good Advice; otherwise so meek and good a Man, as he, would not have given her so sharp a Reproof; for if she had persuaded him to have blessed Ged, he would, no Doubt, have been ruled by her; but it must be some Malediction implied in the Word that moved Job to reply so angrily to his Wife.

(c) Temanite. So called from Teman, Grandson to Ejau by his Son Eliphaz, Gen. xxxvi. 10, 11.

(d) Shuhite. Descended from Shuah, the youngest Son of Abraham by Keturah, Gen. xxv. 2.

(e) Zophar. His Descent is not easily traced without straining, tho' some would derive him from Esan.

(f) Figure. The Septuagint call the first and last of these three Friends of Job Kings; and the second, Tyrant; which is a Term equivalent to that of King.

Time

Time in this painful Condition before his Friends could come at him. When they were come within Sight of him, they found him so much alter'd, that they could not assure themselves who it was; so unlike himself was the poor disfigured Job. But when they came nearer, and saw the miserable Condition he was in, they burst into Tears, and rending their Mantles, they sprinkled (g) Dust upon their Heads towards Heaven, to express their Sorrow for him. And observing the extream Grief aud Pain he labour'd under, they sat down upon the Ground by him seven Days and Nights, and spake not a Word to him; their ownSorrowsuppressing their Speech, or their Sense of his Misery making them think it unreasonable to speak to him till he began. At length Job brake Silence in cursing the Day of his Birth, wishing he had never been born, or that he had immediately died.

Job's three Friends having already conceiv'd an ill Opinion of him from the unaccountable Greatness of his Affliction, which they concluded must be the Hand of God in Judgment upon him, and either for some deep Hypocrisy, or secret heinous Sin, fall thus severely upon him. And Eliphaz in (b) three Orations, Bildad in as (i) many, and Zopbar in (k) two from common Topicks argue, that such Affliction as his could not come from any but God's Hand; and that it is not agreeable with the Justice of God to afflict without a Cause, or punish without Guilt. Then they charge Job with being a grievous Sinner, and great Hypocrite, endeavouring all they could to extort a Confession of Guilt from him. But Job immoveable in his Sincerity to God, and Innocence to Man, confidently maintains his Virtue in responsory Speeches successively to every one of theirs, defends his Innocence, refutes their unkind Suggestions, and smartly reprehends their Injustice and Want of Charity; yet always observing a submissive Stile and Reverence, when he spake of God; of whose secret End in permitting this Trial to come upon him being ignorant, he often importunately begg'd a Discharge from this Life, lest the Continuance of his Pains might drive him to Impatience.

During this Argument between Job and his three troublesome Friends, there was present one (1) Elihu, a young Man, who, having heard the Discourse on both Sides, was pleased with neither; for he thought Job insisted too much on his own Justification; and that they condemned him before they had convicted him: He therefore undertakes the Matter; and after a prefatory(m)Excuse for his interpoling, who was a young Man in Comparison of them, and for the Plainness of Speech he intended to treat them in, attack'd Job in a long (n) Oration; and reprehending him for insisting so much in his own Vindication, endeavoured to convince him, by Arguments drawn from God's unlimited Sovereignty and unsearchable Wisdom, that it is not inconsistent with his Justice to lay his afflicting Hand upon the best and most righteous of Men. And therefore that it is the Duty of all Men to bear such Exercises, when any be--fal them, without murmuring or complaining, and to acknowledge the Justice of God therein. Job heard all this with great Attention, but made no Reply; probably, lest he might be drawn to utter some unguarded Expression, which the inhuman Treatment of his three Friends might have extorted from him. Therefore when they were all silent, the Lord himself took up the Matter, and out of the Whirlwind directed his Speech to Job: Wherein, with the highest Amplifications describing his Omnipotence in the Formation and Disposition of the Works of the (o) Creation, he so effectually convinced Job of his own Weakness and Inability of himself to understand the Ways and Designs of God, that Job, in the most profound Humility breaking forth, said; "Behold I am vile and contemptible in "Comparison of thee? What shall I answer thee? I "will lay my Hand upon my Mouth: Once have I se spoken, but I will not answer: Yea, twice, but I will or proceed no (p) further." Then Job proceeded to a more ample Confession of the Supremacy, Power and Wildom of God, to this Effect: "I know thou canst-"do every Thing; and that no Thought can be hid "from thee. Well mightest thou ask, (q) Who he was "that darken'd Counsel by Words without Knowledge? "For I am sensible, I have uttered what I understood " not, Things too wonderful forme, which I knew not. "But henceforward I desire to learn of thee; therefore 66 hear I beseech thee when I speak, and declare unto me "what I ask. I have heard of thee before by the hearing " of the Ear, (which gave me but a distant Knowledge " of thee) but now have I obtained a more clear and "certain Knowledge of thee, for mine Eyes have (r) " seen thee: Wherefore I reprove myself for what I "have done amiss, and repent in Dust and Ashes."

God was so well pleased with this free and humble Acknowledgment of Job, that he declared himself in Favour of Job against his injurious Friends, who, by their unjust and uncharitable Reslections, instead of being his Comforters, had proved his Tormenters. "Wherefore (said God to Eliphaz the Temanite) my "Wrath is kindled against thee and thy two Friends; for ye have not spoken of Me the thing that is right, as my Servant Job hath. Therefore now take seven "Bullocks, and seven Rams, and go to my Servant Job, and offer up for yourselves a Burnt-offering; and my "Servant Job shall pray for you; for his Prayers will I accept; lest I deal with you as you deserve, for not speaking the Truth, as my Servant Job hath."

(s) Intercession for them.

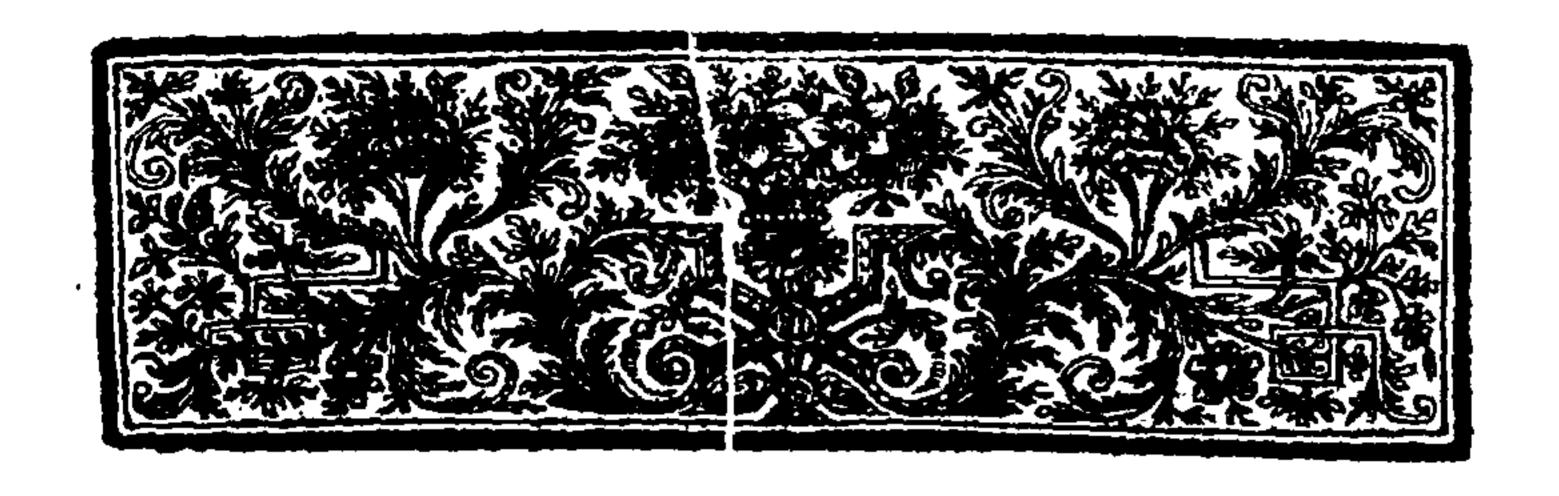

After this, God was pleafed to (t) consider Job, by putting an End to his Sufferings, and to reward his Faith and Piety with a much greater Fortune than he was Master of before; doubling his former Stock in every Respect, except that of his Children; for he had fourteen thousand Sheep, six thousand Camels, a thousand Yokes of Oxen, and a thousand She-Asses. He had also severy Day graced his Table, and were esteemed the fairest Women in all that Country, to whom their Father gave an Inheritance among their Brethren.

No sooner was the Fame of Job's Recovery, and the Restoration and Addition of his Fortune known, but his (u) Kindred and Acquaintance from all Parts come to congratulate him upon this happy Turn: Nor did they come empty-handed, for every one brought him a Present of Money or some valuable Thing; so many contributing, he soon became exceedingly wealthy; and to make his terrestrial Happiness still greater, God blessed him with a Prolongation of Life beyond the common Extent of those Times; sor he lived an hundred and forty Years after his being restored, which made his Age above two hundred Years; so that he saw the Increase of his Family to the fourth Generation.

⁽s) Intercession. Job may, not improperly, here be called a Type of that Christian Perfection which the Gospel requires in praying for Enemies, as well as Friends.

⁽t) Consider. The Text calls this Change of Job's Condition, The Turning of his Captivity; which is a Scripture Phrase very often used to signify an End or Finishing of Misery, and a Restoration of Joy and Felicity.

⁽u) Kindred. The Text calls them Brothers and Sisters, which according to Scripture-Stile used to comprehend all Kindred. Now, among all the rest of Job's Friends there is no Mention at last made of Job's Wife upon this happy Change; unless she be included in the Number of his Kindred; which is not unlikely.

BOOK II.

ET us now return to Jacob's Family, whom we left imbalming Joseph. After whose Death, a new King succeeding in Egypt, who had no personal Knowledge of Joseph, and the whole Generation of People, that in the great Egyptian Famine had tasted of Joseph's provident Care, being now dead, there remained no other Monument of L4

Joseph's Service to the Crown of Egypt, but that of the Advancement of its Revenues; which ought to have been a Consideration inducive enough of itself to the new King to be kind to the Israelites.

But he look'd with a different Eye upon them; for observing how fast they increas'd, he began to be jealous of their growing Numbers, and seeing the Land of Goshen where they lived too scanty to contain them, he feared they might one Day elbow him out of his Kingdom. Therefore calling his Council together, he acquaints them with his Fears, who unanimoully agree with their jealous Prince in the Expedient he proposed to check the growing Danger he suspected from the Israelites; which was by imploying them in making Bricks, and building Store Cities for Pharaoh. And to gratify their Avarice as well as Cruelty, they proposed not only to reap the Profits of their Service, but by continual hard Labour to impoverish their Spirits, and infeeble their Bodies: Therefore they set Task-masters to overfee and keep them to hard Labour, by which and other servile Work they made their Lives very uncomfortable. But God supported them under their Severities; for the more the Egyptians oppress'd them, the more they grew and multiplied; which increas'd their Jealousy to a greater Degrèe of Cruelty; for the King, to suppress their Growth, spoke to two of the Hebrew (w) Midwives, Shiphrah and Puah, and gave them a strict Charge, that when they should be called to do their Office to the Hebrew Women, if the Child were a Son, they should kill him, but if a Daughter, that she should live.

The pious Midwives having a greater Regard to the Law of God and Nature, than to the cruel and unnatural Command of the King, went on in their usual Way, and preserv'd the Male Children; for which Pharaob sends for them, and in greatDispleasure reprimands their brews or Egyptians? Without Doubt they were Hebrews, and, by the King of Egypt's Application to them, the most celebrated of their Profession.

⁽no) Midnoines. The Criticks very negdletly, and with more Subtilty than Solidity, controvert who these Mid-wives were, and whether they were He-

Neglect of his Edict: In Excuse for which they tell him, That the Hebrew Women are not as the Egyptian Women, for they were like(x) wild Beasts delivered before the Midwives could come to them. The Piety of the Midwives in preserving the Male Children was so acceptable to God, that he is said thereupon to deal well with the Midwives; and because they feared God, he made them (y) Houses. And by this Means the People multiplied, and grew mighty. The King, whether satisfied or not with this Answer of the Midwives, not finding it fafe to trust them any longer, resolve upon a more effectual Method to extirpate the Hebrews: And therefore he gave (z) Charge to all his People, that every Son, that should be born to the Hebrews, should be thrown into the River. This cruel Edict for drowning all the Male Children must needs be very afflicting to the Hebrew Parents, and put them upon many a thoughtful Contrivance to preserve their Infants: Of which an Instance foon followed; for one Amram of the House of Levi, having married a Daughter of the same Family, named Jochebed, had by her a Daughter, whose Name was Miriam, and four Years after a Son, whom they called Aaron. About three Years after Aaron's Birth Jochebed was delivered of another Son, who being a Child of most elegant Beauty, something supernatural and divine appearing in his Form, his Mother was the more follicitous for his Preservation, Wherefore she kept him concealed in her House three Months; but not being able longer to hide him, and fearing he might fall into the Hands

Chajeth, which is in the Original, signifies not only Animals in general, but Beasts, and even Wild Beasts, as has been observed by learned Men, and may be seen in several Places of Scripture. And here the Midwives being accused by Pharaob of savouring the Hebrew Women, and preserving the Male Children, alledge in their own Defence, that the Hebrew Women were of such a robust or brutish Constitution; that they were delivered without the Help of Midwives, like Wild Beasts.

(y) Houses. That is, he made them to prosper, gave them Children, and blessed their Families. The Word House being usually in Scripture taken for the Osf-spring or Family of any one; as the House of Aaron, Judab, David, &c. are put for the Family of Aaron, Judab, David, &c.

(2) Charge. This inhuman Edict is supposed by Commentators to be so abhorred by the Egyptians, that they scarce ever put it in Execution; and that it was recalled immediately after the Death of Amenopthis, then King of Egypt, who emacted it; which Time Eufebius and others place in the sourth Year of Moses.

of those that were appointed to drown the Male Children, she contrived a Way to save him, by making a little Ark or Boat of Bulrushes, which she daubed with Pitch and Slime, to keep the Water out, and putting the Child into it, she laid it among the Flags by the River side, and set his Sister Miriam at a Distance to observe what became of him. But propitious Providence soon interposes, and eases his anxious Parent of her Care; for (a) Thurmuthis, Pharaoh's only Daughter, coming to the River to bathe herself, her Maids looking for a Retirement for that Purpose discovered the Ark with the Child in it, which Thurmuthis commanding them to bring to her, she no sooner uncovered the Child, but it made its mournful Complaint to her in a Flood of Tears. The Unexpectedness of the Accident, and the extraordinary Beauty of the Child, mov'd the Egyptian Princess with Compassion, which she express'd in an Accent of Pity, saying, "This is some Hebrew Child, which so the Parents have hid to preserve him from the Kings " cruel Edict."

By this Time little Miriam, the Child's Sister, had crowded herself in amongst the Attendants of the Princess; and observing with what Tenderness she look'd upon the Child, very officiously offer'd her Service to procure an Hebrew Nurse for him: Which the Princess accepts; and away the Girl hastens to her Mother, and brings her to the Place, where she receives the Child from the Princess, who engaged to pay her for her Care. This was no doubt a welcome Bargain to the Mother; who taking the Child home with her, durst now nurse it openly, having a Royal Protection for his Security.

(a) Thurmuthis. So Josephus calls her; and from him Philo, who adds, that she was the King's only Daughter and Heir; and that having been some Time married, but having no Child, she pretended to be big with Child, and to be delivered of Mases; whom she owned as her natural Son. Agreeable to which is what the Apostle to Eleb. xi. 24. says, That when Mases was grown up, he scorned to be thought the Son of Pharaob's Daughter. From whence it is plain he was esteemed as such. And if any one should ask, why he did not in Right of his Mother succeed in the Kingdom? It may reasonably be answered, That the Fraud of his adopted Mother, and his own Adoption, being detected, he could pretend no Right to the Crown of Egypt.

EXODUS CHAP.II. 27
Pharaohs daughter takes Moses out of § River.

EXODUS 2. Verse 5.

Ind the daughter of Pharaoh came down to wash her felf at the river, and her maidens walked along by griver side.

Some Time after, when he was grown big enough, his Mother brought him to Court to shew him to the Princess, and satisfy her how he had improved under her Care; who grows so fond of him, that she adopted him for her (b) Son; and in Remembrance that she had drawn him out of the Water, she called his Name (c) Moses; and to accomplish him the more, she keeps him at Court, where he is instructed in all the (d) Learning and Discipline used among the Egyptians, both Civil and Military, and in all Things requisite and becoming the Character and Quality of a Prince of the Blood.

Moses being forty Years old left the Court, and went to see his Brethren; and when he restected on the Oppression they laboured under, it affected him with Compassion and Indignation to see the Servants of the most High God subjected to a Servitude exceeding that of Brutes. This was soon increased by an Opportunity that just then offered; which was, an Egyptian striking an Hebrew. This instam'd Moses's Zeal, who looking about to see whether any Man was within Sight, chastises the Egyptian, making him expiate his Barbarity to the injur'd Hebrew with his * Blood; and afterwards buried him

(b) Son. The Jews observe, that whoever brings up a Pupil in his House, is in Scripture said to have begotten him. And thus it is said, Exod. ii. 10. That Moses was the Son of Pharaob's Daughter, tho the had only taken care of his Education.

(c) Moses. At his Circumcision, says Clemens Alexandrinus, his Parents call'd him Joachim, (that is, the Resurrection of the Lord) from a presaging Hope, that the Lord, thro' him, would raise up his People Israel, deliver them from the Egyptian Bondage they were then in, and bring them again to the promised Land.

(d) Learning. From hence, no Doubt, it was, that St. Stephen, Asts vii. 22. said of Moses, that he was learned in all the Wildom of the Egyptians, and was mighty in Words and Deeds. Which, as likewise several other Things, not being read in the Old Testament, are taken out of other Records of the Jews. And both Josephus, lib. 2. and Clemens Alexandrinus, lib. 1. report of Moses, that he was General of the Egyptian Forces, obtained a great Victory over the Ethiopians, and did many other great Things before he visited his Brethren.

* Blood. The Critics are at great Variance about this Fact of Moses, some blaming, others justifying him. In the first Place, we find Moses no where in Holy Scripture blamed for this, but rather the contrary; for St. Stepben, Asts vii. 25. gives a fair Handle to justify him as having Power to do Justice on the Criminal Egyptian, he having before that Time been indued with the Title and Office of Deliveres of the People of God. This indeed the Text before cited very much favours. Others object, That it was very unreasonable for Moses to kill the Egyptian for only. striking one of the Hebrews. In answer to this the Hebrews say, That the Hebrews whom the Egyptian struck, was Husband to one Salomith, a very beautiful Woman, whom the Egyptian had debauch'd. And that therefore Moses slew the Egyptian, not for Ariking the Hibrero, but for the Adulhim in the Sand; supposing by his taking upon him thus to administer Justice, that his Brethren would have (e) understood, that God by his Hand would have deliver'd them; but they understood him not. However, the next Day he went out, and shew'd himsels among them again; and finding two Men of the Hebrews quarrelling, he endeavoured to reconcile them, putting them in Mind that they were Brethren; and with some Smartness reprehending the Aggressor, he demanded for what Reason he thus attacked the other? The Fellow thrusting him away with Disdain, replies; "Who "made yoù a Prince and Judge over us? Do you intend to kill me, as you did the Egyptian yesterday?" Moses was startled at this; for seeing his killing the Egyptian, notwithstanding his Circumspection, was no longer a Secret, he bethinks himself of his Security; concluding, that if the Death of the Egyptian should reach Pharaob's Ear, he should surely die for it. Whereupon he lest Egypt, and went to seek his Fortune in Midian.

Here was the happy Place, and then the blessed Time, when Majesty guarded only with rural Innocence submitted to the humble Office of a Shepherd, and a Crook initead of a Sceptre graced the peaceful Monarch's Hand. Here Jethro sirst in Quality both of Prince and Priest enjoyed the Blessings of a quiet Reign, whose Daughters laid aside the Distinction of their Birth to feed their Father's Flocks, and took more Delight in the innocent and useful Employment of tending their, harmless Sheep, than in the luxurious Gaiety of a Court.

In the Plains of Midian there was a Well common to all the Natives of the Place to water their Cattle. Hither Moses directed his Steps, as well to rest himself, as allay his Thirst; where whilst he was refreshing himself, tery, which he discovered from them, whilst they were quarrelling Others urge, that not ail Things are related here, which leave Room for fome Conjecture; Thus fome fav., perhaps the Egyptian had almost kalled the Hebrews, and that

Moses could no other Way than by Force keep him off: Or that the Egyptian attacked Moses, and so he was forced to kill him in his own Defence.

(c) Underflood, See Alls vii, 25. where this is positively expectled by St. Stephen. the seven Daughters of the Prince of Midian came to draw Water to fill the Troughs to give their Sheep; but some churlish Shepherds, having a Mind to serve their own Turns first, came rudely and put the Royal Shepherdesses by. Moses seeing this, steps in to their Relief, and chastising the saucy Clowns, made them take to their Heels. The frighted Damsels return'd to the Wells, and Moses very officiously assists them in drawing Water for their Flocks: After which, they took their Leave, and hasted home to give their Father an Account of the Generosity of the Stranger, who had protected them against the Insults of the Rusticks. (f) Jethro hearing their Story, and not seeing the Person that had thus gallantly defended them, reprehends their Ingratitude and Incivility, asking what was become of the generous Stranger? They told him they left him at the Well: Whereupon he bids them go, and invite him home: Where Moses is so pleased with their courteous Entertainment, that he express'd a Willingness to take up his Residence with them, and undertake the Charge of their Sheep. Jethro readily clos'd with the Proposal, and to engage him the more to his Interest, bestow'd Zipporab, one of his Daughters, upon him for a Wife; by whom he had two Sons, the eldest of which he named Gershom, which signifies a Stranger here: For he said, (g) I have been a Stranger in a strange Land; and the Younger he called Eliezer, importing, God my Help: For the (b) God of my Father, said he, was my Help, and delivered me from the Sword of Pharaoh.

Whilst Moses continued in Jethro's Family, the King of Egypt died: But his Successor prov'd no more favourable to the poor oppress'd Hebrews; who changed their Oppressor, but not their Condition; the Miseries of which rather increased than abated. In vain they appear to the merciless Tyrant, and his more cruel Task-matters, who lord it over them with unbounded Severity. But God, who saw the Affliction of his People, and whose Ears were open to receive their Complaints, look'd with an Eye of Compassion upon them; and the appointed Time of their Deliverance, which he in his secret Providence had determined, being near, he began to think of preparing Moses for it, whom he intended to make use of as an Instrument in the great Work. Whilst Moses kept his Father-in-Law's Sheep, he one Day (i) led them as far into the Defart as Mount (k) Horeb, where the Angel of the Lord appeared to him in a Flame of Fire out of the midst of a Bush. Moses was startled at the Sight, but that which added to his Admiration and rous'd his Curiofity, was the Continuance of the Bush unconsum'd, notwithstanding it was wholly incompass'd with Flames. This so rare and extraordinary Accident made Moses consider it more attentively, and therefore said to himself, I will turn aside, and see if I can discover the Reason of this unusual Sight. But the Lord, to prevent his irreverent Approaches, and strike the greater Awe, and Sense of the Divine Presence into him, call'd to him out of the Bush, and forbad him drawing nearer; and to make him still more tensible of the Sacredness of the Place, God commanded him not to prophane it, but to put off his Sandals, for the Ground whereon he stood was(1)Holy. Moses being prepar'd for an awful Attention, the Almighty thus discovers himself to him: "I am the God of thy Father, the God of Abra-" bam, Isaac, and Jacob." These Words struck the frighted Moses with such Reverence of the Divine Majesty, and Fear of the Effects of his unwitting Presump-

(i) Led. Here we may observe the Manner of those Times and Countries, that whereas the Shepherds here drive their Flocks before them, the Shepherds there went before their Flocks, and the Flocks followed them; which Custom is alluded to in Psal. lxxx. 1. and John x. 4.

tion, that he fell on the Gound and covered his Face, not daring to look up on the terrible Glory. But the Lord proceeding, faid, "I have seen the Affliction of "my People, I have heard their Complaint, and am (m) " come down to deliver them out of the Hand of their "Oppressors, and to conduct them to the promised "Land, a Land that floweth with (n) Milk and Honey; "to the Place of the Canaanites and Hittites, the Amo-" rites and the Perizzites, the Hivites and the Jebuzites. "And thee have I pitch'd upon to be the Instrument in "this great Work; therefore be of good (o) Courage, " for I will send thee to Pharaoh to demand Liberty of "him for my People, the Children of Israel." Moses considering how Things stood with him in Egypt, and upon what Account he left that Court; and probably not knowing that the old King of Egypt, who had threatned his Life, was dead, began to excuse himself, urging his own Meanness and Insufficiency to take upon him the Character of an Ambassador. But God removed this Difficulty, faying, "I will certainly be with thee: And "let this extraordinary Sight, which thou hast now " seen, be a Token that I have sent thee: And when "thou hast brought the People out of Egypt, ye shall "serve me on this Mountain." But Moses, to evade this Office, increases the Difficulty by urging, "When "I come to the Children of Israel, and tell them that "the God of their Fathers hath sent me to them, and " they shall ask me his Name; what shall I say to them? "God replied, (p) I AM THAT I AM. And thou shalt further

(a) Courage. This is most properly tendered by the Septuagent, the Word which we render Come zero, being an Adverb of Exhorting.

(p) I Am. This denotes the Eternity of God, whose Essence knows no Beginning nor End. And it is common with the Hebrews to express the Future in the Present Tense: And for this Reason some turn it, I will be what I will be; and contend that it ought to be so render'd, not only from the Letter of the Hebrew Text, but from the genuine Sense of the Words: From which others likewise infer that it ought to be so render'd, I will be for ever; and I will be with

"further say to them; I AM THAT I AM, that is, The ⁶⁶ Lord, the God of your Fathers, the God of Abraham, "the God of Isaac, the God of Jacob, has sent me to "you; that is the Name I have had from all Eternity, " and by that Name will I be known for ever. Go, gather "the (q) Elders of Ifrael, and fay to them, The Lord "God of your Fathers hath appeared to me, and faid, "I have seen all the Calamities that have befallen your " in Egypt, and am resolved to deliver you, and lead you into the Land of Canaan. The Ifraelites shall believe you, and you shall go to the King of Egypt, and fay to him, The God of the Hebrews hath com-" manded us to go three Days Journey, into the Defart, "there to offer Sacrifice to the Lord our God. This "Request, tho' so very reasonable, I know he will not "grant, but refuse to let you go unless compelled by "a powerful Hand: But I will exert myself in many miraculous Operations upon him and his Subjects, "and at last he shall permit you to depart; but you " shall not go away empty, for ye shall be loaden with "the Spoils of the Egyptians."

This solemn Assurance delivered by the Mouth of God, one would be apt to think, might have been sufficient to have encouraged Moses willingly to undertake the Ambassy; but either from the Difficulty or Boldness of the Enterprize, or from Diffidence of his own Ability, he declines it, and questions whether the Israelites will receive his Credentials. This Objection God immediately removes by a Miracle; for commanding him to throw his Sheep-hook on the Ground, it was instantly turn'd into a Serpent: Moses affrighted at this sudden Change of his Sheep-hook, fled from it. But God, to encourage him, bid him take it by the Tail; which he

you, and redeem you from the Egyptians: And others, I will be with you in your present Tribulations and future Calamities. This Name is likewife expressed in Rev. i. 4. by which is figurated JEHOVAH, which is the proper Name of God.

(q) Elders. By this some mean the Doctors and Governors; but it is most probable the Elders were Heads or Chiefs of Tribes and Families. By which it is plain there was a private Policy and Occonomy continued amongst the Israelites, tho? in this servile Condition.

had no sooner done but it resumed its former Shapé: And at the same Time, to convince him that he should not want Credit with the Ifraelites, God gave him Commission to perform the same Miracle before them: And to remove all further Scruple, he condescends to give him another Sign, bidding him put his Hand into his Bosom; which he had no sooner done, but it was struck with a (r) White Leprosy. And when by God's Command he had put it into his Bosom again, and pluck'd it out, his Flesh had resumed its former Colour and Substance: And yet to arm him sufficiently, and beyond all Question, he was pleased to add a third Miracle: "If they will not believe these two former, said be, thou " shalt take of the Water of the River and pour it upon

" "dry Land, and the Water shall become Blood.

Still Moses excused himself; and his last Plea was, that he wanted Eloquence, the great Qualification of an Ambassador, and that since God had condescended to talk to him, he was more flow of Speech than before. This Objection the Lord was pleased to remove by putting him in Mind of his Omnipotence: "Who made " "the Mouth of Man, said he? And who made the "Dumb and the Deaf, and the Blind, and him that fees? "Was it not I? Now therefore go, and I will furnish "thee with Words, and make thee cloquent." Hitherto Moses had some Glimpse of Pretence for his Unwillingness to go; but now all his Objections are answer'd, and his Scruples removed, he very bluntly begs to be excused from this Enterprize, saying, "O my Lord, instead of "me, send, I pray thee, by(s) him whom thou wilt fend.

(r) White Leprofy. The Evidence of this Miracle was to much the more convincing, became the WhiteLeprofy, which was held incurable, was both inflicted and healed in an Instant, without any outward Means, or Physical Application.

(1) Him. Exed. iv. 13. The Text fays, Send by the Hand of him that thou wilt send; where the Word Hand is put for the Office or Ministry. But by Moses's desiring God to tend another instead of him, he means a Man fitter to execute that Commission than himself was. Who the Perfor meant is, is much controverted. The Hebrews say Aaron, who at that Time was a Prophet in Ifrael: Some of them say the Messias; and of this Opinion are all the Latin Commentators; because the Jews in all their more weighty Cafes and Affairs had Regard to the promited Millias.

So long as Moses had any Thing to plead in (t) Excuse for his not going, God heard him patiently, and graciously condescended to remove his Doubts; but when his Modesty in declining the Office and Honour God proposed to him was turned into an obstinate Refusal, v the Lord was angry with him; but in his Anger remembring Mercy, he resumes Moses's last Objection, (which he had already answered in general) and shews him more particularly how to supply that Defect: " Is "not Aaron the Levite thy Brother? said he. He is " eloquent, and I will appoint him to meet thee. Tell "him what I have said; and be affured that I will al-"ways affist you both, and direct you what to say: "He shall be the Orator, and thou shalt be to him (u)" instead of (w) God. And to strengthen thy Commis-"fion, and give thee Credit among my People, take "this Rod in thy Hand, for I will enable thee to do " many Miracles with it."

Moses having nothing more to urge against this Enterprize, at last yields, and took the (x) Rod of God in his Hand. Then taking his Wife and Sons he lest Mount Horeb, and went to Jethro his Father-in-Law, with whom, it seems, he lest them till he had conducted

(t) $E \times cu f e$. It is the Opinion of several Commentators on this Place, and it is very probable, that Moses had another Reason besides his Insufficiency, which made him unwilling to go of this Errand into Egypt, and which he was not willing to discover. Just before God appeared to Moses in the Bush, and had this discourse with him, we read, Exod. ii. 25. That the King of Egypt died; that King in whose Reign Moses had flain the Egyptian, and who fought to apprehend him, to put him to Death for it. The Report of that King's Death might not probably yet have reached Moles's Ear. However, he might reasonably think that some of the Kindred of the flain Man were yet living, who might profecute him for the Murder: And for that Reason he might be unwilling to return to Egypt (from whence on that Occasion he fled for his Life) lest he should be taken and executed for that Fact. However, it is observable that God would not free him from that Fear till he had absolutely resigned, and wholly submitted to his Will in going.

(u) Instead. That is, He shall consult thee instead of me, that from thee he may know my Will, and thou shalt impart to him what thou receivest of me. Consonant to this is that of our Saviour Christ to his Apostles, He that beareth you heareth me, &c.

(71) God. By these Words, Thou shalt be to him instead of, or as God, Commentators show the Power God now invested Messawith, in delivering him this Commission, making him not only Chief over Aaron, but the rest of the Israelites: For this Name of God is no where given to Men, but to signify the Power of Life and Death over them.

(x) Red of God. So it is now called, fince God had so signally honoured it, and, as it were, consecrated it to an Holy Use, Exed. iv. 20.

the Children of Israel out of Egypt; when Jethro

(y) brought them to him again in the Wilderness.

Moses being thus convinced that God had designed him the Agent in transacting this grand Affair, whilst he was preparing himself for this Journey, to make him more chearfully proceed in it, and to dispel his Fears of being called to Account for his former Actions in Egypt, God bids him return thither, affuring him, that those who had a Design against his Life were dead. Then, repeating his former Order, he fays, "When thou comest into Egypt, be sure to perform all the Miracles I have "enabled thee to do; and, to illustrate my Power, I "will so harden Pharaoh's Heart, that he shall refuse "to let the Children of Ifrael go, till I have slain his "Son, even his First-born."

By the Way, God takes Occasion to put Moses in Mind of the Danger of Disobedience, to preserve him from lapsing into it hereafter. It seems, Moses, either thro' Neglect; or Indulgence to his Wife (who was not an Israelite) had not yet circumcised his Son Eliezer; by which he provoked the Lord so highly, that in the Way he threaten'd to (z) kill him for this Neglect. His Wife Zipporab, understanding the Cause of the Divine Displeasure, took a sharp Flint, and immediately circumcifed the Child; and, throwing the Foreskin at her Husband's Feet, she said, "Thou art a Husband of . " (a) Blood to me." This being over, the Lord pardon'd Moses, and dismissed him to pursue his Journey; which

(y) Brought. See Exod. xviii. 2, &c. (z) Kill bim. The Text, in Exod. iv. 24. being not particular in the Manner, Interpreters differ about it; but that which feems most probable from the Context is, that Mofes's Punishment must be Sickness, or some corporal Visitation upon him; otherwise, if he had been in Health, he, and not Zipporah his Wife, would have circumcifed the Child.

(a) Blood. Many, and fome vaftly wide, are the Opinions of the Learned on this Text. Some will have it speken to the Child that was circumcifed; but neither the Words, nor the Circumstances of the Action can allow that. Undoubtedly, the Word Blood here refers to the Circumcifion, which was the Caule of its Esfufion. Nor do they feem to conjecture amits, who thus interpret this Text: With the Blood of my Child I preferve and Sawe thee; for, the Neglett of the Child's being circumcifed being thy Fault, I have funced thy Life by the Blocd of the Circumcifish, rubich otherwiseGod might have taken away. The best Commentators concur in this, and render it with this little Variation, Thou art the Caufe of the shedding the Blood of the Child ; for which Reason I call thee a Husband of Blood.

he did, and soon arrived at his Father-in-Law Jethro's House, whom as he acquainted not with the particular Reason of his leaving Egypt, so neither does he now say any thing to him of the Vision he had seen, nor the Message he had received from God to deliver to the King of Egypt; but, as he had entered himself by Contract into Jethro's Service, and become so nearly related as to be his Son-in-Law, he thought it but decent Civility, as well as Reason, to ask his Consent to return to Egypt to visit his Brethren, and see whether they were living. Jethro readily gave Consent in the usual Form, "Go in Peace."

Moses being now on the Way to Egypt, the Lord (b) commanded Aaron his Brother to go into the Wilderness to meet Moses. Aaron obeyed the holy Call, and went as far as Mount Horeb, where he met his Brother, and embraced him; to whom Moses told all that God had commanded him, and the Wonders he was to perform.

The two Brothers thus joined in Commission (tho) Moses was the Sovereign) repair to Egypt; and summoning the Elders of the People together, Aaron delivers the Message which the Lord had sent by Moses, and Moses straightway confirmed it, by doing the Miracles which God had commanded in the Sight of the People, who thereupon believed, and received them joyfully. And now, all being convinced that the Lord had taken Compassion on the wretched Condition of the Children of Israel; that he had visited them in their Affliction, and had taken a Course for their Deliverance, they sell down and worshipped him.

Soon after, they repair to the Egyptian Court; and being admitted into the Presence, they delivered their Message to the King in these Words: "Thus saith the "Lord God of Ifrael, Let my People go, that they may "celebrate a Feast to me in the Delart." The haughty

(b) Commanded. Hence it's plain, that appear to the House of thy Father, when they were in Egypt? For Eh was defeended from daren.

Alaron, as a Prophet, received a Revelation from God; which is likewife con-Grmed, & Sam. ii. 27. D.d not I plainly Pharaob affronted at this Freedom of Speech from an enslaved People, profanely demands, " Who is the Lord, "whom ye call the God of Ifrael? Am not I sole Mo-"narch here? I own not Ifrael's God; nor will I let "you go." Moses and Aaron, to inform him whom they meant by the Lord, replied, "The God of the "Hebrews, whom we adore, hath commanded us to "offer Sacrifice to him; therefore we beg Leave to go "three Days Journey into the Desart, that we may pay "due Adoration to our God, lest he punish us for our "Disobedience, and you much more for hindring us." The King incensed at this unusual Liberty they took, and looking upon them as Incendiaries, sharply reprimands them, saying, "Why do ye hinder the People "from Work? Because they are numerous, you would "incite them to rebel: Be gone all to your Labour, " or I'll make you sensible of Royal Displeasure."

The King having thus rudely dismissed Moses and Aaron, gave Charge to the Task-masters that they should no more give the People Straw to make Brick, as they had done before; but make them go gather Straw for themselves where they could find it; but yet to lay upon them the same Tale of Bricks without Abatement: For, said he, they are idle, and this is but a Pretence to excuse them from their Work. The Task-master's acquainted their Under-Officers with this severe Injunction, who immediately tell it to the People, and they accordingly are forced to wander about the Country to feek for Stubble instead of Straw; the Task-masters at the same Time exacting from them their usual Number of Bricks; which when they were not able to perform, the Under-Officers, who were Israelites, and whom the Task-makers had set over them, were called to Account, and beaten. They, not well knowing from whence this Severity proceeded, whether from the Edict of the King, or the Rigour of the Task-masters, complained to the King himself; and laying their Grievance before him, in most humble Manner expostulated tulated the Matter with him thus: "Why should the "King deal so severely with his Servants? The Task-

"masters allow us no Straw, and yet demand Brick of

"us, which is impossible to be done: And tho' they

"are in Fault, yet are we punished."

The poor Ifraelite Officers, instead of Redress, meet with an Addition to the Cause of their Complaint; the King tells them they shall have no Straw, and yet deliver the full Tale of Bricks. This Answer gave them much Uneasiness, and drove them almost to Despair; so that meeting with Moses and Aaron in the Way as they came from Pharaoh, and looking upon them as the Cause of having these heavier Burdens laid upon them, they unadvisedly giving way to their present Passion, discharged their Grief and Anger upon them, saying, "The Lord (c) revenge us on you; for ye have made us hateful and abominable in the Sight of the King

"and his Subjects, and have given them (d) Occasion to oppress us the more."

This was very afflicting to Moses, who expected a more grateful Return for his Care and Concern for them; wherefore retiring from them, headdressed himself to God in this humble Expostulation: Why, O Lord, hast thou thus afflicted this People? For since Ispoke to Pharaob in thy Name, he hath treated them with more Severity than before; and they are more unlikely to be delivered than ever." Moses's Concern for the Oppression of the Israelites made him forget the Promise God had given him, and the Perverseness of Pharaob, which he had foretold: However God, to encourage him, gives him this gracious Answer: "I am the Lord, the Almighty God, that appeared to the Fish were suffocated, and the Inhabitants were forced to dig for Water in new Places to allay their Thirst. And notwithstanding this Plague continued upon them for seven Days, yet Pharaoh was still obstinate; and the more, because Moses being known to have had his Education among the Egyptians, the King concluded, that all this was performed by magical Skill. Wherefore calling for his Magicians, he put them upon the same Trial; who taking some of the Water which the Egyptians had digged, by their Inchantments they made him believe that they turned it to Blood. And tho' this was but a Delusion, yet it convinced Pharaoh that what Moses and Aaron had done, was not the Effect of any supernatural Virtue, but a meer Trick of Art, and thereupon returns resolute to stop the Israelites.

But Heaven pursues him with repeated Miracles; for as soon as the seven Days are expired, Moses at the Command of God accosts him again, and renews his Instances for the Delivery of the Israelites; threatening upon his Refusal to bring upon the Land such prodigious Numbers of Frogs, as should visit him and his Subjects in their most private Recesses. Pharaoh regardless of his Threats defies him; upon which Moses gives Aaron (1) Order to take the Rod, and stretch forth his Hand with it over the River, which in an Instant fo affected all the Waters of Egypt, that, not waiting for the slow Productions of Nature, the animated Steams unburthen themselves upon the Land in Sholes of Frogs; which immediately invade all Parts, infesting even the Royal Palace with their ungrateful Croaking. Now again Pharaoh had recourse to his Magicians, who by their mimick Power so deluded him, that they made him believe they wrought the same Miracle; which harden'd Pharaoh for a while; but the loathsome Plague pursuing him and his People whereever they went, he is forc'd to apply himself to Moses and Aaron for Relief, offering to capitulate with their God upon Terms of Permission for them to go and facrifice to him. Moses demands the Time when this shall be put to an Issue, and they both agree upon the next Day. Accordingly Moses addresses himself to God, and the Frogs soon died, which the People gathered in Heaps, so that the Land stank of them before they could be dispos'd of.

The Infidel Prince, thinking the God of the Hebrews had discharg'd all his Plagues, unfaithfully breaks his Word, and refuses to let the Israelites go to serve their God. This Violation so provokes the Almighty, that he resolves to treat the haughty Tyrant in a more surprising manner than he had hitherto done; for before, he first denounced his Judgments, giving him Warning, that he might escape them: But now he will give him no further Notice, and therefore commands Moses to direct Aaron to stretch out his Rod and strike the Dust with it, that it might become (m) Lice. Aaron obeys, and straightway the animated Dust turns into swarms of Vermine, which the Magicians, who had faintly imitated the former Plagues, now attempt in vain; they own their Art out-done, and acknowledge this to be the inimitable Work of a divine Hand.

(m) Lice. What Kind of Creature this was, is not certainly known, the Versions and Commentators differing very much in their Opinion of it. The Septragent translate it here, and in Pfal. cv. 31. Knipes, and so Philo and the vulgar Edition retain the Word; which feems to come from the Ward Knizzein, which fignifies to prick, and they were a Kind of Gnat. In this Plany, Commella, Hefychius and Origen agree. Yet Janius and Trimelius, the French, English, and diwers other Translations render it by Lice, and Lice too might have Wings. It feems to me most probable, that it was some new Kind of Creature, call'd analogically by an old known Name, which is Pererius's Conjecture, and is approved by Riwet. And this I take to be the Reason why the Magicians could not counterfeit this Miracle, as it was easy for them to do those of the Serpents, the Blood, and the Proof, which were Things to be had every where. This, I think, may pass for a more probable Cause than the Fancy of the Hebreres, who say, that the Devil's Power is bounded to the producing of no Creature less than a Grain of Barley; or than St. Augustine's allegorical Reason, and too poetical even for Poetry, who affirms, that the Magicians failed in the third Plague, to shew the Defect of human Philosophy when it comes to the Mystery of the Trinity. But tuch whimfical Allufions and Conjectures do more Hurt than Good in Divinity.

EXODUS 8. Verse 6.

Ind Flavon fireiched out his hand o ver the waters of Egypt; and the frogs came up, S'covered all if land of Egypt;.

Yet now again, notwithstanding the Obstinaey of Pharaoh, who would not in the least hearken to Moses and Aaron, God condescended to give him another Summons. "Rife up (says God to Moses) early in "the Morning, and meet Pharaoh as he comes to "the River: Tell him, Thus saith the Lord; Let my 66 People go that they may ferve me, or I will fend Swarms of (n) Flies upon thee and thy People, which " shall fill their Houses, and cover the Face of the "Earth: And that thou mayst know, that this is "brought as a Judgment upon thee and thy Subjects "for oppressing my People, I will on that Day se-" parate the Land of Gosben, in which my Servants "dwell, from the rest of Egypt, that the Flies shall "not molest them." Accordingly, upon Pharaoh's not submitting, the next Day Clouds of swarming Insects fill the Air, which in numberless Troops descend to the Earth, and with their sullen and unusual Noise furprize and affright the wretched Inhabitants. All Attempts prove vain and fruitless to remove this increasing Evil; their most private Recesses cannot secure them from the poisonous Bitings of these revengeful Animals, and a Succession of painful Misery invades them on all Sides. Not Pharaoh's Guards can fave him from the pungent Attacks of this flying Host, which holdly swarm about and seize the very Weapons they should draw in their Master's Defence. The Sword and Spear are useless to repel this airy Foe, whose penetrating Sting is sharper than their Point. The Magicians with Confusion look upon this direful Plague, and no more pretend to offer at any Imitation:

(n) Flies. So our Erglish Translation. St. Jerom says, All Sorts of Flies. The Septuagint Kunomuobyan, a particular Kind of Fly called a Dog-Fix, from his Biting. Some translate this a Mixture of Beasts: The French, une messee de Bosses: Junius and Tremellius, Collumnem; and Josephus seems to understand it of several Sorts of wild Beasts that intested the Country; which is not very probable, for the Pun. Ilments hitherto were rather troublefome than mortal; tho' this Punishment of infinite Numbers of small Termentors is so great a one that God calls them bis Army, feel is, 25, nay, his GreatArmy, the Locust, the Cankerworm, and the Caterpillar, and the Palmer-worm, my great zirmy, which I fent among you.

A general Horror pervades the Townsand Fields, and all the Country echoes with the Cries of tortured Men and Cattle. Pharaoh not able to endure this Plague, calls presently for Moses and Aaron, and in a sullen discontented Tone bids them go and sacrifice to their God, but not beyond the Bounds of Egypt. He was desirous of Relief, but unwilling to part with a People, by whose Slavery he had reaped so great Advantage; and being a Stranger and Enemy to the true God, he did not conceive, that the Israelites could not acceptably sacrifice to their God whilst under the Egyptian Bondage. Moses, not willing to provoke, but rather convince Pharaoh, discreetly answered; We cannot sacrifice to our God in this Land, for that would be an (o) Affront to the Egyptians, and they will be revenged on us; permit us therefore to avoid their Refentment, by going three Days Journey into the Wilderness, and sacrifice to our God as he hath commanded us. If nothing else will serve you, said Pharaoh, but to go into the Defart, I will let you go, but not far: And in Return for this Concession, intreat your God to remove this Plague. Moses promised to intercede for him, but cautions Pharaoh to be sincere in his Grant; and being gone from his Presence address'd himself to God to remove the Plague of Flies. His Prayers are heard, and the Insects take their Flight; but Pharach no sooner found himself deliver'd from this Judgment, but returns to his former Obstinacy, and positively forbad the Israelites to stir out of his Dominions.

Upon this high Provocation God sent Moses again to Pharach with this Message: "Thus saith the God of the Hebrews; Let my People go that they may serve me, or be assured I will visit all thy Cattle that are in the Field with a grievous Murrain; and the Sheep, they will be affronted to see us facrifice their Gods to our God.

⁽o) Affront. That is, if we should sacrifice those Creatures which the Egyptians worship for Gods, as the Ox and

"to make thee still more sensible of my Omnipotence, "I will, by a wonderful Distinction, preserve the Cattle "of my People, whilst I destroy those of the Egyp-"tians." This, by Pharaob's Obstinacy, was fatally verified upon the Egyptians Cattle the next Day: The generous Horse loaths his full Manger and loved Pastures, and sinks under his Rider; the Ass and Camel can no longer support their Burdens, or their own Weight; the labouring Ox drops down dead before the Plough; the harmless Sheep die bleating, and the faithful Dogs lie gasping by them.

Though Pharaoh saw one Part of Nature extinct before his Eyes, he continued his former Temper, and resolved still to brave Heaven with his impious Perverseness: And remembring what Moses had said of the Preservation of the Israelites Cattle, he sends to Goshen to learn how it had fared with them, and is assured there was not one of the Cattle of the Israelites dead 5 by which he might have feen, that this was no Casualty, but a direct Judgment upon him, exactly answering the divine Prediction. Notwithstanding this, he will not be convinced, but continues in his former Resolution, not to let the Israelites go.

Therefore, since neither Admonitions nor Threats will prevail upon his obdurate Heart, God resolves to surprize him with a Plague, without giving him any Warning; and immediately commands Moses and Aaran to take Handfuls of Ashes from the Furnace, and before Pharaoh's Face to throw them in the Air. The pregnant Ashes soon spread the dire Contagion, and the tainted Air infects the Egyptians Blood with its poifonous Influence; which appears upon their Skin in swelling (p) Scabs and Ulcers, and their whole Con-

(p) Scabs, &c. This by Moses, Exed.ix. gypt, &c. From hence I believe came the Calumny, which Treg. Pompeius, Diod. Siculus, Tacitus, and other Heathens caft upon the Hebrews, www. that they were expelled Egypt for being scabued and leprous; which Malake was easy; instead of being dismissed for inving brought those Discases upon the E_{K} (-in).

Do, is call'd Ulcus inflationum germinans in bomine, Ge, Sprouting out with Blains, Se. which Junius and Tremellius render, Erumpens multis pullulis. This, in Deut. xviii. 27. is one of the Curses with which Disobedience to God is threaten'd, The Lord shall smite thee with the Botch of Estitution became a noisome Spring of Sores. This Plague was so torturing, that the Magicians (who, possibly, once more would have tried their Skill, to fee if they could regain their Credit) were not able to stand before Moses, for it affected them as well as the rest of the Egyptians.

And now Pharaoh, whose Obstinacy before proceeded from his natural Aversion to the Servants of the True God, is judicially harden'd by the Almighty Lord, who resolves to make him a Monument of his Power to all Posterity. He makes the Powers of Heaven the Instruments of his Revenge; and, calling to Moses, he gives him this Charge: "Go early in the Morning to "the King of Egypt, and tell him, That I the God of "the Hebrews demand the Liberty of my People, that "they may worship me; which if he refuse, he may "be affured I will shower my (q) Plagues upon him "and his People; and I will make him know, that I "am the only God on Earth. Say further to him: "(r) If, when lately I smote the Cattle with the Mur-"rain, I had smitten thee and thy People with Pesti-"lence, thou hadst been cut off from the Earth. But "I have reserved thee to shew my Power upon, and, "by the Judgments I shall inflict upon thee, I will "publish my Name to all the World. Oppress "not, nor detain my People; for, if thou dost, "to (f) Morrow by this Time (unless thou sub-"mittest thyself) I will send such a Storm of Hail "from Heaven upon Egypt, as never was known

(q) Plagues. By Plagues, in this Place, (viz. Exod. ix. 14) is not meant, that God would fend all the Plagues which he afterwards inflicted fuccessively, but those which attended this Plague from Heaven, as Hail, Thunder, Lightning, and Rain.

(r) If, &c. Here God shows that he wanted not Power to destroy Pharaob and his Subjects for oppressing his People Israel; but that he reserved him for greater Punishment: And therefore the Chaldee Paraphrase renders Exod. ix. 15. If, when I lately smote the Cattle with the Murrain, I had smitten thee and thy People with Pestilence, thou hadst been cut off from the Earth. And this God said, to let the Egyptians know, that he did not do this only to threaten them, but that he was able to cut them off, when he pleafed, by the same Power that he before destroyed the Cattle.

(f) Morrow. It is very common in Scripture to find the particular Time expressed; which is used only to shew the Certainty of Providence.

FXODUS CHAP. IX. The plague of Thunder & Hail.

EXODUS Nevse 24. So there was hail, and fire mingled with the hail, very grievous, fuch as there was none like it in all the land of Equiping.

"fince it was(t) a Nation. And that thou mayest not lose what Cattle the Murrain lest (which being not in the Field escaped that Plague) send thy Serwants, and let them drive them under Shelter; for upon every Man and Beast, which shall be found in the Field, the Storm shall fall, and they shall surely die."

This threatning Message did not so far affect Pharaob as to take Care of himself or People; but some of them, who had been (u) Witnesses of the dreadful Wrath of God, made a prudent Use of the divine Caution, and housed their Cattle in Time; by which Means they were preserved.

And now the Time appointed being come, Moses attends the harden'd King, and to convince him of the Truth of what he had threaten'd him with, waves his Wand in the Air, which soon began to murmur in imperfect Sounds, till the full-charged Clouds with impetuous Force burst and discharged themselves in fuch terrible Peals of Thunder, as shook the whole Frame of Nature. This is succeeded by a stony Shower of monstrous Hail, such as Winter never yet produced from her stormy Magazines, which cover'd the Ground with the scatter'd Ruins of Trees and Houses, and the dead Bodies of Men and Beasts. Nor does the divine Vengeance stop here; the Heavens become a Body of liquid Fire, which darting on the Ground glides o'er the Waters, and every Place with dreadful Horror. This shocks the haughty Tyrant, who seeing Nature (as he imagined) ready to dissolve, melts into Penitence, and confesses himself guilty. But this being an Act of Necessity, not of Virtue, it dies with his Fear, which Moses foresaw; for when Pharaob beg'd him of those that secured their Cattle by housing them before the Storm, that they feared the Lord; which implies not a reverential Fear, but a service Fear, into which they had been terrified by the Judgments God had inflicted on them.

N

⁽t) A Nation. Egypt was first inhabited by Mesraim (whence it is called in Hebrew, Mesraim, and to this Day by the Turks, Mesra) the Son of Cham.

to intercede to God for him, and to remove this Plague, Moses tells him, he will answer his Request, but assures him he knows he does not mean fincerely, and that his Repentance was only the Effect of his Fright. Of this the Lord (as he had done before) gave Moses Notice: "I have harden'd his Heart, said be, and the Hearts of his Servants, that I may shew these my Wonders before them, and that thou mayst tell in the hearing " of thy Sons, and the Ifraelites to succeeding Gene-" rations, what Prodigies I have wrought in Egypt, " that ye may all know, that I am the Lord, the Al-" mighty Jehovah. Wherefore go to Pharaoh, and "tell him; Thus faith the Lord God of the Hebrews, "Why dost thou persist in thy Obstinacy? Let my "People go, that they may ferve me, or I will bring " the Locust into thy Land to morrow, which shall come in such Swarms, as shall cover the Surface of " the Earth, and devour all the (w) Products of it that have escaped the former Plagues. And this shall prove " fuch a Plague as none of thy Predecessors ever saw.

Moses, having deliver'd this Message to Pharaoh, withdrew; which the Courtiers perceiving, and fearing Moses was gone to call down more Plagues upon them, very roughly accost their King, desiring him to let the Israelites go to serve their God, lest he destroy them all for his Obstinacy. Their Importunity prevailed more than God's Threats and Judgments; therefore sending for Moses and Aaron, he told them they might go and serve their God; but only the Men, not Women or Children. Moses insisted upon all the Israelites going, young and old, Sons and Daughters; nay, and their Flocks and Herds: "For we must hold a Feast, " fays he, to the mighty Jehovah, and all must be at it." This put Pharaoh out of Temper, for he look'd upon this Demand as very insolent; therefore he bad them - look to it, and consider well what they insisted on, and in a very threatning manner dismis'd them.

Moses being thus again repulsed, by God's Command, stretched out his Hand with the Rod in it, and immediately a (x) scorching hot Wind blew all that Day and the Night following, which by next Morning drove endless Legions of devouring (y) Locusts, which left the Earth as naked and depopulate, as if the Northern "Storms of Winter had invaded it. The happy Product of the fertile Nile, and all that bountiful Nature afforded, was carried off by these airy Pillagers. Pharach began to be a little more sensibly touch'd with this Plague than any of the former; for he plainly foresaw that the Destruction of the Fruits of the Earth must in Time prove the Destruction of Man and Beast; therefore calling hastily for Moses and Aaron, he in a more suppliant Manner than usual addresses himself to them: "I have indeed offended Jehovah your God, " in refusing to obey his Command, and you in break-"ing my Word so often with you; forgive me this "Offence, and intreat your God to avert this "Judgment, that I and my People perish not by "devouring Famine." Moses answers his Request, has East Wind. The Vulgar has Ventum urentem, a burning Wind. The Septuagint, a South Wind; which Opinion I follow, (tho' the Jews will unanimously have it to be an East Wind) because the South Parts of Afric were most insested with Locusts, where they are in some Places the chief Food of the Inhabitants; so that from hence by a Southerly or South-Easterly Wind they might easily be driven; for I cannot agree with some, that the hot Wind blowing all Day and Night produced them.

(y) Locusts. This is the Creature which we properly call a Grass-hopper. Wonderful are the Accounts which Authors report of these Kinds of Armies of Locusts, and of the Order and Regularity of their Marches. Aldrowandus and Fincelius say, That in the Year of our Lord 852, they were seen to say over twenty Miles in Germany in one Day, in manner of a formed Army, divided into several Squadrons, and having their Quarters apart when they rested: That the Captain marched a Day's Journey before the rest, to choose the most opportune Places for their Camp: That they never removed till Sun rifing; at which Time they went away in as much Order as an Army of Men could do: That at last having done great Mischief wheresoever they passed, after Prayers made to God. they were driven by a violent Wind into the Belgick Ocean, and there drowned z but being cast again by the Sea upon the Shore, caused a great Pestilence in the Country. Some add, that they covered an hundred and forty Acres of Land at a Time. St. Jerome upon Joel freaks thus: "When the Armies of Locusts " came lately into these Parts, and filled " all the Air, they flew in so great Or-" der, that Slates in a Pavement cannot " be laid more regularly, neither did they " ftir one Inch out of their Ranks." There are reckon'd thirty feveral Sorts of Locusts by Phi_{ij} , and (if we may believe him) tome of three Foot long. See l. 11, c. 29.

and immediately retiring, prayed to God, who by a strong Westerly Wind drove the Locusts into the (z) Red-Sea.

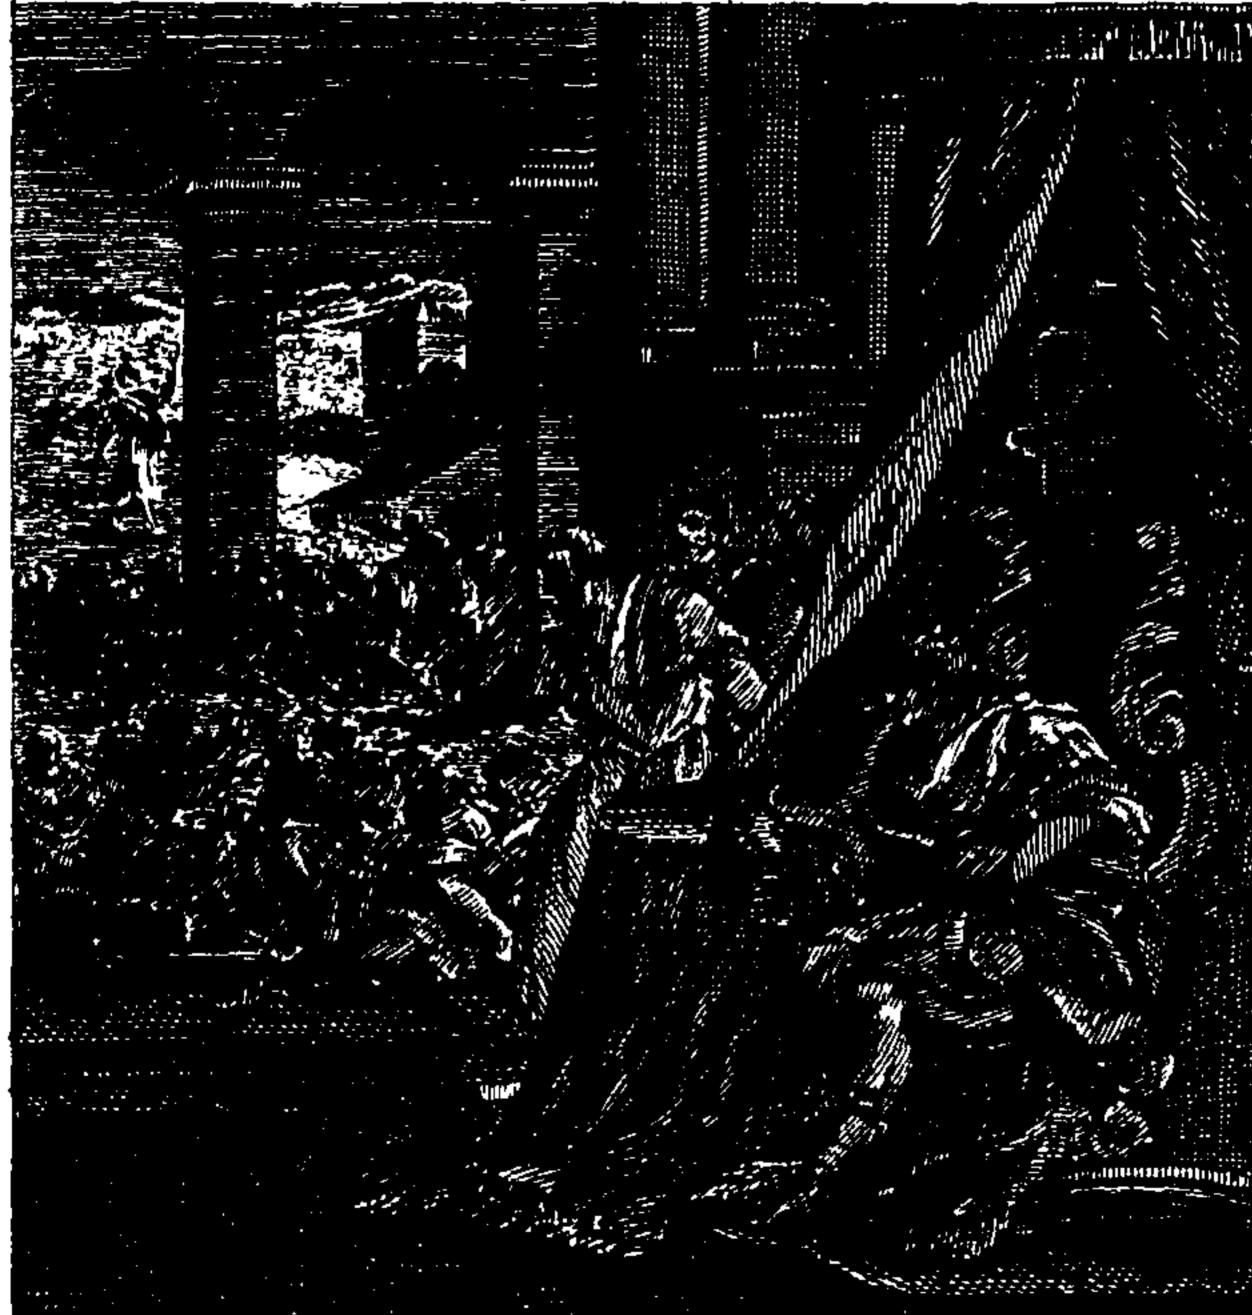

This Plague thus removed, Pharaob returns to his former Obstinacy and Contempt of God's Commands, and refuses to let the Israelites go. Wherefore God bids Moses stretch sorth his Hand towards Heaven, that there might be a Darkness over the Land of Egypt, so thick that it might be (a) felt. Moses obeys the heavenly Command, and immediately from the Caverns of eternal Night such solid Clouds of Darkness invaded the Sky, that Nature all at once seem'd to be involv'd in one dreadful Eclipse; the Sun no longer encouraged the lower World with his chearful Beams; the Moon, with the Stars, her gawdy Sanhedrim of borrowed Light, no more illuminate the darken'd Air; and all Things put on the dismal Aspect of Death, as if Nature were returning to her original Chaos. This Scene of Horror lasted for three Days, which so affected the haughty King, that though he had long stood unmoveable against the Threatnings and Judgments of God; yet now fearing an universal Dissolution, and

(z) Red-Sea. Various are the Opinions of Interpreters about the Epithet Red given to this Sea. Some will have it so called from the Reflection of the Sun upon it from the Red Mountains near it. Others, that it is naturally Red of itself. Pliny, lib. 6. cap. 23. fays, it is called by the Greeks, Erythreum Mare, or Red Sea, from Erythra the King, and Son of Perfeus, whose Sepulchre is reported to be in Tirina, an Island of the Red Sea. Others are of Opinion, that it is called fo from the Red Sand or Coral, with which this Sea abounds; and this they confirm from Pliny, who, l. 32. c. 2. owns that it abounds in Coral. But whatever the Versions render it, it's certain the Hebrew Word Suph fignifies a Bound, and it is by them called the Sea of the Bound, because of the Boundaries between Arabia and the Holy Land, not far distant from it. The Word Suph also signifies a Sterm, and thence it is also called the Stormy Sea. It likewise signifies Sedge, or a Rush, and thence called the Sedgy or Rushy Sea. See the Note on the next Letter.

(a) Felt. So the Septuagint and most Translations render it. Some will have this to be an Hyperbolical Expression, to fet forth the Excess of this Plague: Tho? whether this Darkness was really in the Air, or only in their Eyes, which might be blinded for a Time; or whether a Suspension of Light from the Act of Illumination in that Country; or whether it were from a black, thick and damp Vapour, which posses'd all the Air, it is impossible to determine. I fancy that the Darkness of Hell below, which is called Utter Durkness, arese and overshadowed the Land; and for this I am authorized by the Wisdom of Solomon, xvii. 13. where he calls it a Night that came upon them. out of the Dung con of Hell; and therefore was the more proper to be (as he fays after) an Image of that Darkness which should afterwards receive them.

Moses streiched sorth his hand soward heaven, and there was a thick darkness in all the land of Egypt three days.

frighted at the continual(b) Terrors of this long Night, he begins to give Way, and calling for Moses, he says to him, "Ye may go with your little ones and serve " the Lord; but for my Security, I will have you leave "your Flocks and Herds behind you." This was a poor Advance more than what he had before offer'd, and which Moses peremptorily rejects; affuring him, that it was the express Command of their God to remove with all their Substance, and that they knew not in what Manner they were to offer Sacrifice to their God, till they came to the Wilderness. This Proposal so offended Pharaoh, that in great Displeasure and Impatience he commands him to be gone; and affures him, that if he ever again appear before him, it should cost him his Life. Moses takes him at his Word, and promises never more to see his Face; but before he left the Presence, he denounces this Judgment to him: "Thus saith the Lord, About Midnight will I " enter Egypt, and all the First-born of the Land shall "die, from the First-born of Pharaoh that should suc-"ceed him in the Throne, to the First-born of the "Servant in the Mill; and all the First-born of "Beasts shall die." And to possess Pharaoh and his Subjects with the greater Fear of this Judgment, he told them, there should be such great Lamentation thro all Egypt as never was known before: And to convince them of his Care and Indulgence of his own People, he tells the Egyptians, that not the least Harm should befal the Israelites. And tho' the King still bids him Defiance, to let him see he despised his Threats, he tells him, he will so humble his Subjects with the succeeding Plague, that even his Counsellors and prime Ministers of State should come and fall down at his Feet and intreat him and the Israelites to be gone:

Darkness they thought the whole Order of the World to be overset and dissolved.

And after that, said Moses, I will go out. Having thus deliver'd his last Message to the King of Egypt, with a more than usual Warnith of Zeal, he took his Leave.

The Ifraelites, during their long and grievous Bondage, were Possessor no great Wealth, their tyrannical Masters, no Doubt, taking Care to keep them bare enough; therefore God, to encourage Moses to support them in their Deliverance, promises them Favour in the Eyes of the Egyptians, with Instruction to borrow of them the most valuable Things they had.

It was on the fourteenth Day of the first (c) Month that Moses took his Leave of Pharaoh: And God, having predetermined his People's Deliverance at that Time, had instituted the Passover some Days before, and given Direction to Noses how it should be observed; which was after this Manner. Every Family of Israel (or if the Family was too little, two neighbouring Families joining together) was on the tenth Day of this Month to take a Lamb, or Kid, and shut it up till the fourteenth Day of this Month; and then it was to be killed. The Lamb or Kid must be a Male of the first Year, and without Blemish: [A Type of Christ, who was perfectly innocent.] When it was killed, they were to take a Bunch of Hyssop, and dipping it in the Blood, (which for that End was preferved in a Vessel) they were to wipe the upper Doorpost, and the Side-posts of the outer Door of every House where they did eat it, and they were not to stir called Nisan, in which was afterwards called Nisan, in which God delivered Israel out of Egypt, was their seventh. But in Honour of that great Work, God appointed, (Exod. xii. 2.) that this should be the Beginning of Months, the first Month in the Year to them: That is, with respect to their most solemn Feasts, and religious Assairs (as for their Policies they reckoned from September.) And this Nisan answers to Part of those two Months, which from the Heathen Romans are commonly called March and April. See Gedwin, 1, 3, c. 1.

had been Captives in Babylon, which was about eight hundred Years after they came out of Egypt, counted their Months without any Name, according to their Number, the First, Second, Third Month, &c. And before their coming out of Egypt, they began their Year in that Month, which was afterwards called Tifri (which took in Part of the seventh and Part of the eighth Month with us) and they continued always after to begin their Year with that Month for Civil Assairs. According to which Computa-

out of the House till the next Morning. This was done to the Intent, that when the Angel of the Lord should go from House to House through all Egypt, to flay the First-born of both Man and Beast of the Egyptians, he seeing the Blood smeared on the Door-posts, might pass over those Houses, wherein the Israelites were eating the Lamb or Kid, without doing them any Hurt: And from the Angel's thus passing over their Houses, this Institution was called the Passover. The Lamb or Kid was to be eaten neither raw nor sodden, but roasted with Fire, and to be dress'd whole; nor might a Bone of it be broken. It was to be eaten with unleavened Bread, and with bitter Herbs, in Memory of the severe Bondage they had undergone in Egypt. If there remained more than could be eaten, it was to be burnt; and no Stranger might eat of it, unless he was circumcised. As to the Manner of eating it, at this Time only, they were to eat it as in haste, with their Cloaths on, and their Staves in their Hands: Which Ceremony shew'd their eager Desire of Deliverance, and their Readiness for it.

All Things thus prepared for their Departure, at Midnight the (d) Lord smote all the First-born in the Land of Egypt, from the First-born of Pharaob, to the First-born of the(e) Captive that was in the Dun-

(d) Lord. Some think God inflicted this Plague upon the Egyptians immediately himself; because he says, Exod.xi. 14. About Midnight will I go out into the Midst of Egypt. And to the same Estect, Ch. xii. 12. But it is an ordinary Manner of Speech to attribute that to God, which is done by one of his Angels; and that this was an Angel, appears out of Ch. xii. 23. The Lord will pass over the Door, and will not suffer the Destroyer to come into your Houses to smite you. From which Place, and Psalm Ixxviii. 49. where it is said of the Egyptians, He cast bis Wrath upon them, by sending evil Angels among them; some collect, that God used here the Ministry of an evil Angel: But it cannot be supposed, that God and the Magicians had the same Agents; and that Text of the Pfalm is perhaps ill senflated. Junius and Tremellius understand by it Moses and Aaron, as Messengers of Ewil; and if we interpret it (28 others) of Angels, it were better rendered in English, Destroying or Punishing Angels, Insticters of Evil upon them. I attribute this Instiction to the Archangel Michael: First, because it was he by Name, who fought with the Dragon, a d smote him and his Angels, Rew. xii. 17. Secondly, because in Daniel x. 13. he is mentioned as an Angel of War. And lastly, because the very Name is said to signify, the smitting of God. Besides, the Wisdom of Solomon, Ch. xviii. v. 14, 15. 16. gives the same Hint.

geon; and all the First-born of the Cattle were smitten, as the Lord had that Morning denounced to Pharaob and Moses. The Infidel King and his frighted Subjects now believe the God of Israel to be in earnest with them; they wake each other with their dismal Cries, and the Horror of the Night adds to their Confusion; the expiring Groans of their beloved Firstborn deeply affect them, and they expect a Succession of Death upon themselves: Which Pharaoh hoping to avert, in Haste sends for Moses and Aaron, and commands them to be gone with all Speed. "Get you " forth, says he, from among my People, both you and the Children of Israel, and go serve your God as ye "have said; and take your Flocks and your Herds, " as ye demanded, and be gone: I'll stand no longer on "Terms with you, only pray for me, that this Plague "may go no further." Nor were the People less importunate for them to be gone; for they concluded, if the Israelites tarried any longer among them, that they should all die.

Moses having by God's express(f)Command directed the Children of Israel to borrow of their Egyptian Neighbours Jewels of Silver and Gold, and the Lord having disposed the Egyptians to lend them what they asked for, they by these Means(g)spoiled the Egyptians of their most valuable Things: Nay, so urgent were they to have the Israelites gone, that they forced them away, not suffering them to finish their Bread, but obliging them to tie up their Dough in Cloths, and carry it away at their Backs unbaked. Thus after Egypt was in a Manner destroyed, and the Egyptians of all Ranks had suffered so deeply for detaining the Israelites, they now on a sudden thrust them out, as God had (b) foretold, and drove them away in Haste.

(f) Command. See Exod. xi. 2, 3. did so order it; and that it might be (g) Spoiled. This was not to be drawn looked on as a just Retribution for the many and great Injuries done by the E_{-} gyptians to the Israelites.

Notwithstanding which, Moses did not forget to take the Bones of (i) Joseph, which he, dying in the Faith of their Deliverance, had solemnly engaged the Children of Israel to (k) carry up out of Egypt with them, and which had now lain incossin'd there more than a hundred and forty Years.

The Place of general Rendezvous for the Israelites was (1) Rameses, the chief City of Goshen; from whence, on the fifteenth Day of their (m) first Month, they set forward as regularly as a well-ordered Army, being in Number about six hundred thousand Men, besides Children, and marched to Succoth. With them went a mixed Multitude that were not Israelites, but Strangers of several Nations, who, having seen the Calamities that Egypt had suffered for Israel's Sake, chose rather to seek their Fortunes with the Israelites, than tarry in a Country almost made desolate.

And now, whilst their Deliverance was fresh in their Memory, God, by Moses, commanded the People of Israel, that, when they should be brought into the Land of Canaan, they should set apart, and devote unto the Lord their First-born both of Man and Beast, in (n) Remembrance that God, for their Sakes, had

(m) First Month. This was afterwards called Nisan, and Abib, which takes in Part of the first, and Part of the second Month with us.

(n) Remembrance. This Remembrance is twice express'd in the thirteenth of Exod. v. 9, 16. and undoubtedly cannot be taken in a literal Sense. The Jews, indeed, and those that are for translating all according to the Letter, have fallen into such ridiculous Fopperies, as excite the Scorn or Compassion of all, who are but Masters of the least Reason. St. Jewene observes, that the Superstition of their Phylasteries owes its Rise to their having taken literally the Commandments which God had given them in Exod. xiii. 9, 16.

to bind bis Laws for a Sign on their Hands, and to have them as Frontlets before their Eyes; that is, to obey them and keep them in Remembrance; or, as the Margin in our English Version, Thou shalt have a continual Remembrance thereof, as of a Thing that is in thy Hand, or before thy Eyes. But the literal Translation, which the Pharisees (who on other Occasions were too much given to Allegories) have put on the Weids, has made them believe, that they contained an express Precept of writing them on a Piece of Parchment, with a great deal of Formality and Ceremony; and according to the literal Version of the Text, used to bind them to their Forehead and lest Arm with great Devotion; so that those who carried them most frequently were look'd upon as most religious, tho

The Israelites being to dislodge from Succoth, the Lord, for their Encouragement and Security, went before them, in the Day-time in a Pillar of Cloud, and by Night in a Pillar of Fire, to direct and guide them; and the Philistines Country was the nearest for them to pass; yet, lest they, seeing the Philistines with an armed Force oppose their Passage, should repent of their Deliverance, and wilfully turn back to Egypt, he led them about through the Way of the Wilderness of the Red-Sea, and marching to Etham they incamped there on the Borders of the Wilderness, which took its Name from that Place. From thence drawing them down more to the Red-Sea, he caused them to incamp there, between the Straits of the Mountains, in Sight of the Sea. This God did to intice Pharaoh to pursue them from the Prospect he might have of Advantage from the Place, where he might see them inclos'd on all Sides, without any Possibility of escaping. This was the divine Stratagem, that the Almighty Jebovab might more fully triumph over the Egyptian Tyrant: For he had told Moses, that Pharaoh would say, They were intangled in the Wilderness; and that he would harden Pharaob's Heart, that he should pursue them, and be destroyed. Which succeeded accordingly; for, after the Egyptians had buried their dead Firstborn, Pharaob, being told that the Israelites were gone, and concluding, from their long and speedy Marches, that they did fly indeed, repented that he had let them go: His Bounty in dismissing the inslaved Israelites scarce survives his Deliverance from the Angel's slaughtering Hand, and Rage and Revenge succeed to his

at the Bottom there is nothing more fuperstitious and ridiculous. Now in this Place God can't be supposed to mean any thing of these Superstitions; for he does not speak of the Law of the Decalogue, which the Ferve used to wear in their Phylacteries, but of the Precept of the Paffover and Unleavened Bread, which God commanded them to remember, and that it might for ever be observed by them, as if it were pendulous, or hanging before their Eyes. The Septuagint render this, an immoveable Sign or Monument; which cannot be supposed to be material Phylacteries, but a Token or Hint to put them in Mind of their Gratitude to Almighty God for their Deliverance.

late Fear and Grief for the Death of the First-born: He forgets the Almighty Power, that by a Succession of Plagues had so lately afflicted him and his People, and, regardless of the Danger of provoking it again, blindly pursues his own Fate, instead of the Israelites.

With all the Force that he could so suddenly raise, he put himself upon the Pursuit, in order to reduce them to his Subjection again. He had with him six hundred chosen (o) Chariots, and all the Chariots of Egypt besides, that could be got ready at so short a Warning, with their Commanders, and (p) Horsemen; with which he pursued them; and on the sixth Day after their Departure out of Egypt he came up with them, and found them incamped by the Sea; so that, as he had proposed to himself, he found the Israelites beset on all Sides, the Sea in Front, huge Mountains on their Flank, and his own Army in their Rear. The Sight of this Army, and their old Oppressor at the Head of them, struck Terror into the poor Israelites, who, soon forgetting their new-gotten Liberty, betray a servile Mind, and envy the slavish Condition they but lately deplored. They reproach Moses as the Author of all their imaginary Woes, and wish to resume the Yoke they had but now shaken off: Long Custom had inured them to a State of Slavery, and continual Servitude of Body imbased their Spirits. But pious Moses, not resenting their reproachful Taunts, but pitying their abject Fear, chears them up with the Assurance of God's Protection and Care: "The Lord, " saith he, will fight for you, and compleat your "Deliverance; and this numerous Army of the Egyp-"tians, which now terrifies you, shall no more af-"fright or molest you." Moses, before this encouraging Assurance, had addressed himself to God, who admonish'd him no more at this Juncture to apply himfelf to him, but to press the murmuring Israelites to move forward, giving him Instructions how to secure his People, and afflict their Enemies. The sacred Rod, by which Moses had formerly wrought so many Viracles, still retains its Virtues, as inimitable by Egyptian Magick as before; but now more fatally destructive. "Lift up thy Rod, said the Lord, and stretch "thy Hand over the Sea, and divide it, and the Chil-"dren of Israel shall go on dry Land (p) through the " midst of the Sea; and I will harden the Hearts of "the Egyptians, that they shall pursue them; and there "will I get me Honour upon the Ruin of Pharaoh " and his mighty Army."

And now, to let the faint-hearted servile Israelites fee, that they were Heaven's peculiar Care, the Angel of God, which went before the Camp of Israel in the Pillar of the Cloud, removed and went behind them; by which Means it kept the two Camps apart all Night; and the cloudy Side, being next the Egyptions, cast a Darkness towards them; but the fiery Side, being next to the Israelites, gave them Light.

Ifrael being thus secured from the terrifying Sight of their Enemies, Moses waves the sacred Rod over the Sen, and immediately a strong East-Wind blew, and drove the Sea back from the Land, and, dividing the Waters, made a dry and fafe Passage for the Israelites, who, under the Conduct of their great Guide, enter the fandy Plain, and with Amazement beheld the (till then) secret Wonders of the Deep: Wall'd

(as it appears they did, Exod. xiii. 20. compared with Cb. xiv. v. 2.) and their Coming out of the Sea into the Wilderness of Etham again (as it is plain they did, and went three Days Journey in the Wilderness of Etham, after they came out at the Sea, Numb. xxxiii. 8.) gives much Countenance to that Opinion.

⁽b) Through. That the Ifraelises went net directly cross the Sea from Shore to Shere, but took a femicircular Compass in the Sea (according as the Waters were call up for them) and return'd on Shore on the same Side, is the Opinion of many learned Men, both ancient and modern. And indeed their Going out of the Wilderness of Eslam into the Scawith the Floods, they boldly march on, and instead of being terrified with the Sight of a pursuing Enemy, are entertained with the pleasing View of the Sea's old Spoils, and the Treasures of the divided Main. The Egyptians blind with Fury and Revenge pursue the Tract, and not suspecting but that they with their Chariots and Horsemen might safely follow where the Israelites being but Footmen went before, enter in after them to the midst of the Sea. But when in the Morning (q) Watch the Lord had looked through the Pillar of Fire and Cloud upon the Egyptians, and throwing their Chariots off the Wheels, had disordered their Army, the Egyptians saw their Error, and said one to another, "Let us fly from the Face of Israel, for Je-" bovab fighteth for them against us." But it was now too late to fly; for Moses at God's Command waving the facred Wand again, the Sea returns to its Strength, The liquid Troops on both Sides take the Signal, and at once uniting cover the thirsty Bottom, whilst Horror and Confusion invade the frighted Egyptians: They hear and see the roaring Waves break loose from their invisible Chain, and with helpless Speed endeavour to: avoid their relentless Fury; but in vain: The mighty God of Jacob will avenge himself on the obstinate Infidels, and their Ruin shall be a lasting Monument of his Justice and Vengeance. Thus did the Lord rescue the Israelites from the King of Egypt and his mighty Army; which being cast on the Shore, was a delightful Spectacle to the Israelites, and a Confirmation of the Power of their Almighty God, who had delivered them (as the Egyptians poorly imagined) from inevitable Ruin. This created an awful Reverence in them, not only to God himself, but to his Servant Moses, their happy Guide, and by whose Hand God had wrought so many Wonders for their Preservation. and Safety.

190 A Compleat History Book II.

Being now safely got to Shore again, Moses and the Israelites in grateful Acknowledgment of their Deliverance sung a triumphant (r) Song; in which Miriam the Prophetess, Sister to Moses and Aaron, joined, taking a Timbrel in her Hand, and followed by the Israelitish Women with Timbrels and Dances, answer'd the Men, repeating alternately some Parts of the Song.

Moses's SONG.

The Lord's Triumphant Name let all rehearse, Praise the dread Maker of the Universe!

The Horse, whom rich Caparisons adorn, Proud Riders by the generous Coursers borne, At once have slept their everlasting Sleep, At once lie bury'd in th' Arabian Deep.

Great God of War! We will thy Works proclaim, Thy wondrous Works! Jehovah is thy Name.
Our Saviour Thou, our Strength, our Song, our Praise,
Our Fathers God, thy glorious Name we'll raise.
For Thee a stately Temple we'll prepare,
Deep as the Centre, tow'ring as the Air.

Thus said th' insulting Foe——I will pursue,
My Sword, my thirsty Sword in Blood imbrue:
The Winds of God blew terrible and loud,
The Sea the Signal takes, and overwhelms the Proud.
Like Stones, like Lead they sink, they all expire
Like Stubble in thy Wrath's consuming Fire.
The Waters saw, thy Voice the Waters hear,
Forget their Nature, and in Heaps congeal with Fear.
Convulsions cleave the Seas int'horrid Caves,
And shew a new Abys beneath the Waves.

(r) Song. This Song is set down in Honour to be joined to the Song of the Exed. xv. from v. 1. to 20. and which Lamb, in the Revelations, Cb. xv. v. 3. has the Great God of Israel! What vain Idol dare With Thee th' Eternal Lord of Hosts compare? Thy Glory shall thy ransom'd Saints express, Obedient Nature does thy Pow'r confess, And thee with Faces veil'd the dazzled Angels bless.

Thus the Song of Thanksgiving and Praise being finished, Moses led the Children of Israel from the (s) Red-Sea into the Desart of Shur or Etham, in which they marched three Days without finding any Water; which to so great a Number of People, in so hot a Country and Season, must needs be very irksome. But at length they came to a Place where there was Water enough, but so (t) bitter, that they could not drink of it. This Disappointment inflamed their Thirst, and increased their Dissatisfaction: And tho' it was but three or four Days since they so joyfully and thankfully praised God for their Deliverance from the Oppressions of the Egyptians, yet they murmured against Moses, asking him what they should drink. Moses was sensible of the Calamity under which they laboured; and fearing they should by their further Murmurings provoke the Lord to punish them as they deserved, he straightway addresses himself to him in their Behalf; who no sooner hears the Complaint, but redresses it, directing Moses to a Tree, which when he had cast into the Waters, they became sweet, and the People satisfied their Thirst.

(1) Red-Sea. This Sea hath generally been held to have taken the Name from the Colour of the Sands tincturing the Water with Redness, or from the Reeds, or Rushes growing therein of a red Colour. Dr. Gell, in his Essay towards an Amendment of the last Translation of the Bible into English, p. 219. having said that it was long believed to have had that Name from Erythras, Erythrus, or Erythraus, a supposed King of the Land near unto it, tells us, the Truth of the Story was, that this Erythras was Efau, who was called Edom, and in Greek Erythros, which fignifies Red. Which Name Efau had; because he came out of his Mother's Womb Red, and was confirmed to him from his infatiable Appetite after Jacob's red Pottage.

(t) Bitter. From the Bitterness of the Waters, the Piace took the Name of Marah, which fignifies Bitterness.

God having thus miraculously supplied their Necessity, it might reasonably be supposed, they had sufficient Cause to depend upon his Providence, and never more question his Care of them: But their Faith scarcely survives his Miracles. From Marah they marched to Elim, where they found better Accommodations; for there were twelve Wells of Water, and seventy Palms, or Date-trees. Here it may be supposed they made some Stay: For when they removed from hence, and came to the Wilderness of Sin, which is between Elim and Sinai, it was the fifteenth Day of the second Month, which was just a Month from the Day on which they set forward out of Egypt. And here again it was that the Israelites fell into a general Mutiny against Moses and Aaron: The Sight of a barren Wilderness, and Shortness of Provisions made them distrust God, and break into very indecent Expressions. "Would to God (cry'd they in their Discontent) we " had died by the Hand of the Lord in the Land of " Egypt, where we had Plenty of Bread and Meat; " for now ye have brought us into this Defart, where "we must perish with Famine." This ingrateful Treatment of his Servants the Lord resented as done to himself, and of which Moses and Aaron made them sensible. "Your Murmurings, said they, are not only a-"gainst us, but against the Lord; who hath heard "them, and e'er long ye shall know, that it was the "Lord that brought you out of Egypt; whose Arm is on ot shortened, but can make a Provision for you as

"The Lord therefore, to awe this murmuring People into a Belief of his Power and Providence, having first shewed his Glory in the Cloud, told them by Moses, that at Even they should eat Flesh, and in the Morning be filled with Bread; which he made good, by causing Quails to come up so thick in the Evening, that they covered the Camp, and afforded the Israelites Flesh enough. And in the Morning, when the Dew was gone, there lay upon the Ground a little white round Thing, as small as the Hoar-frost, and like Coriander-seed for Shape: Which when the Israelites saw, they wondering said one to another, (w) What is this? For they knew not what it was. But God was pleased by Moses to give them a Direction in the Gathering and Use of it. First, it was to be gather'd fresh (x) every Morning; all that was gathered was to be spent the same Day. And when some of them, either out of Curiosity or Disfidence, that they might have a Reserve, kept some of it till the next Morning, it putrefied and slunk. They were to gather, it by Measure, according to the Number of Heads' in every Family. On the feventh Day, which was the Sabbath, there was none to be found; therefore they were to gather a double Portion on the fixth Day, and lay it up for the feventh Day; which being kept by God's Appointment, and for that Use, did not corrupt. This was to them instead of Bread, and of this they did eat forty Years, till they arriv'd on the Borders of Canaan: And as a Memorial of it; that Aftergenerations might see the Bread with which he had sed their Forefathers in the Wilderness, God appointed that an (y) Omer of this Manna should be put up in a Pot, and be laid up before the Lord.

(20) What, &c. Our Translation, and some others, make Moses fall into a plain Contradiction in relating this Story of the Manna, Exod. xvi. 15, which they render thus; And when the Children of Israel saw it, they said one to another it is Manna; for they wist not what it was. But why should they have for saken the Septuagint, and several Authors both ancient and modern, that have translated this Text according to the Original? The Israelites seeing this, said one to another, What is this? For they knew not what it was.

The Word by which they asked, [What is this?] was in their Language Man, (which signifies also Meas ready prepared) and therefore it, was always afterwards called Man or Manna, which was of a delicious Taste, like Wafers made with Honey.

(x) Every Morning. This was to fignify to the Israelites, that they should patiently depend upon God's Providence from Day to Day; in which respect it might be a Type of that beavenly Bread, which Christ taught his Disciples to pray for, Mat. vi. 11. Give us this Day our daily Bread.

(y) Omer. This was the Proportion daily allowed to one Man, and is computed to contain of English Measure three Pints and a half, and a fifth Part of a Pint.

God having by his Almighty Power and secret Wisdom thus plentifully provided for this murmuring People, to let them further see that they were under his more immediate Care and Protection, directs their Marches from Place to Place, and orders their Incampments. Accordingly they mov'd from the Defert of Sin, and incamp'd in (z) Rephidim, where they had no Water. Here again they fell into their old Way of distrusting God's Providence, which they well knew had never hitherto failed them; and forgetting the late miraculous Supplies, they reproach Moses for his ill Conduct and Neglect of them. Moses meckly rebukes them, and cautions them not to reflect on him, for in so doing they affronted the Lord. But Thirst instaming them, they regarded not his Cautions, and grew more mutinous, charging him with a Design of bringing them out of Egypt, to kill them with Thirst. These Complaints and Reproaches deeply affected Moses, who immediately addressed himself to God for Relief in this-Distress, expostulating with him thus: "What shall "I do with this People? Thirst makes them impatient, " and they are ready to stone me." Considering the many Instances of God's Providence, notwithstanding their present Necessity, the Israelites had no Reason to distrust: However, the Lord had Compassion on Moses, and did also pity and bear with the People. "Give Order to the People, said be, to march; and " take thy Rod, with which thou didst smite the Ri-"ver, and take the Elders of the People with thee, " and go thou on before; and behold, I will stand "before thee upon the Rock in Horeb, and thou shalt " strike the Rock, which shall yield Water for the " People to drink."

Meribab, which signify Temptation and Strife. But before the People could move from Rephidim, they were put upon another Trial; for an Army of the (a) Amalekites was at their Heels, and ready to attack them. Moses thereupon ordered Joshua, a valiant young Man that always attended him, to draw out a Party of choice Men against the next Morning, and to give the Amale-> kites Battle, and, said he, "I will stand on the Top of: the Hill, with the Rod of God in my Hand." Joshua obey'd, and having drawn up his Men, Moses in the Morning, while the two Armies engaged, went; up to the Top of the Hill, taking Aaron and Hur with: him; and holding up the Rod of God, as an Enlight in his Hand, Israel taking Courage from thence, prevailed; but when thro' Weariness he let his Hand down, simalek prevailed. Therefore Aaron and Hur; observing that Moses's Hands, thro' a continued waving of the Rod, were grown feeble and weary, took a Stone, and laid it under him, and standing on each Side of him, held up his Hands steady till the going. down of the Sun; in which Time Joshua routed the Amalekite Army, and put them to the Sword. This: good Success in their sirst martial Enterprise very much encouraged Joshua and the Ijraelites; and that so remarkable an Action might be transmitted to Posterity, God commanded it to be recorded in a Book, and bid Moses rehearse it to Joshua the General to animate him to future Service; for, saith the Lord, "I will utterly. " put out the Remembrance of Amalek from under "Heaven." And for a Memorial of this Victory, Moses built an Altar, to sacrifice thereon for it, and called it (b) Jehovah Nissi; because, said he, the Lord hath Iworn, that he will have War with Amalek from Generation to Generation.

By this Time the Israelites were come near the Place where God first appeared to Moses in the Burning Bush, and not far from his Father-in-Law Jethro's Habitation; who having heard of all that God had done for Moses and his People Israel, and understanding they were now near him, took his Daughter Zipporah, Moses's Wife, with their two Sons, Gershom and Eliezer, and brought them to him to the Israelitish Camp: Where, after mutual Salutations and Embracings, Moses gave Jethro a particular Account of the Lord's dealing with Pharaoh and the Egyptians in Defence of Ifrael, and of all that had befallen them during their March thither. Jethro being a (e) devout Man, testified his Joy by rendring solemn Praise to God, and acknowledging his Sovereignty, offering at the same Time a Burnt-offering, and Sacrifices of Thanksgiving to God; in which Aaron and all the Elders of Israel did join with him, and feast together.

During Jethro's Stay in the Camp, he observed the great Weight of Business under which Moses laboured, in hearing the Complaints, and determining the Differences of so great a People; and therefore, being a wise and experienced Prince himself, he advised his Son-in-Law to substitute certain subordinate Officers, properly qualified, Men of Sincerity and Ability, such as feared God and hated Covetousness, to be Rulers; some over Thousands, some over Hundreds, some over Fisties, and fome over Tens, who should hear and end all smaller Matters among the People, and refer the greater and more weighty Causes only to him: Assuring him, that if with God's Approbation he did follow this Advice, it would be better both for the People and himself. Moses approves of this Counsel, and immediately puts it in Practice, to the great Ease of himself and the People. Fethro seeing Things thus settled, takes his Leave of his Son-in-Law, and returned to his own Land.
